THE SMARTEST FASHIONS OF WELL-DRESSED FOLK

THE GARDEN PARTY

DEAR ELEANOR:

The Garden Party was a Success! I feel like writing that ALL in capitals, for it certainly meant a lot of work. However, Jack and Jim Fordyce helped a lot; and Caroline, Jean and I were all ready in our best bibs and tuckers by 7 o'clock. Seven? Oh, yes! I forgot to say that the party was really a moon-light dance under the trees—perfectly delightful, if I do say so as shouldn't.

Caroline came in soft yellow swiss: a gown made with a tunic that was really an overskirt, so far open was it in front, and that was edged with wide Japanese embroidery in gold and colors. This embroidery was continued in fichu style on the bodice—just the thing to go with the deep V-neck! The short sleeves were puffed, and over them fell a ruffle of dotted swiss of the same color. Almost no waist line was apparent, but a double girde of gold cord ended in a spiral-loop in front. Altogether, it was an odd, oriental frock with a beauty all its own.

Jean's dress had a touch of the orient in it, too: Chinese this time, for her citizen blouse was modified to almost the shape of a Chinese short kimono, the peplum being cut straight and reaching to the hips. This overblouse was of violet marquisette to match the skirt, but was heavily embroidered in a darker shade of purple and trimmed with parallel bands of applied purple satin. Under the short sleeves and the square neck appeared a chemisette of heavy white lace. The skirt had a deep diagonal hem, like a false tunic, meeting a straight embroidered hem at the right side.

My own gown was more conventional in cut: a white lace over deep pink satin. The lace tunic is straight and cut round about six inches from the ground—for, like Jean's and Caroline's frocks, it is made dancing length and not with a train. Over the shoulders is a fichu of black satin, tied in an obi bow at the raised waist line and falling in two long, knotted sash ends. The fichu is edged with a white lace frill and allows only a V of the lace-covered bodice to show front and back. On each sleeve and at the right side of the tunic at the knee, there is a cluster of roses of the deep pink satin.

Everybody looked lovely, of course. Elsie came a little later to help receive. We danced till midnight in the light of the lanterns, with punch and cake served under the trees. I do wish you had been there!

Yours frivolously,

MADGE.

FEAR FELT FOR HEALTH OF CZARINA

Extreme Nervousness Seriously Affects Condition of Her Majesty.

Estate of Count Leo Tolstoy Is to Pass to the Government.

(By GEORGE FRASER.) ST. PETERSBURG, July 8.—It would be hard to exaggerate the serious condition of the Czarina. Not only has she not been able to get rid of the extreme nervousness which is the most alarming feature of her physical well-being, but it is stated on the highest authority that it is steadily increasing, and that her majesty is subject to fits of mental depression amounting almost to melancholia. This, of course, having a most serious effect on her physical well-being. She has frequent spells resembling a mild form of cataplexy.

Her physicians find themselves utterly unable to cope with the trouble or to stop its progress. The greatest specialists of Europe have been consulted, but without avail. It is not unlikely that she will take a prolonged sea voyage early in the autumn, if the czar is able to accompany her, but not unless.

Another member of the royal family is in a serious condition. It is the Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch. He had been chosen to represent the czar at the coronation of King George V, but at the last moment it was found his health would not permit.

Yasnaya Polyana, the estate of the late Count Leo Tolstoy, is to pass to the government. The Tolstoy heirs will be paid $250,000 for it. It will be remembered that an effort was made to interest wealthy Americans in a plan to make the estate a perpetual memorial to the great Russian, but it failed. The matter was then taken up by the government and the purchase followed.

Russia is watching the developments in the near East with the keenest interest. It is no secret that the situation there is giving rise to very grave apprehensions.

There have been quiet interchanges between the foreign offices of St. Petersburg, Vienna, Berlin and Rome, and great pressure is being brought to bear on Turkey to force a settlement of the Albanian troubles. Already Turkey has shown disposition to make concessions, but the Albanians are a stubborn, untractable race of mountaineers, who insist on the acknowledgment of their full program of reforms.

It is recognized that the position of the Turkish government is a most difficult one. It must save its face in Albania or work trouble throughout the entire country. There is a strong faction throughout the empire which would be called the "old, strictly orthodox Mohammedans," who would welcome the chance to overthrow the present regime.

Russia, in common with other powers, recognizes this difficulty, but she recognizes the fact that so long as the trouble in Albania exists there is danger that the entire Balkan peninsula may be embroiled and just what the consequence of this would be would be impossible to say, but the powers will prevent it if possible.

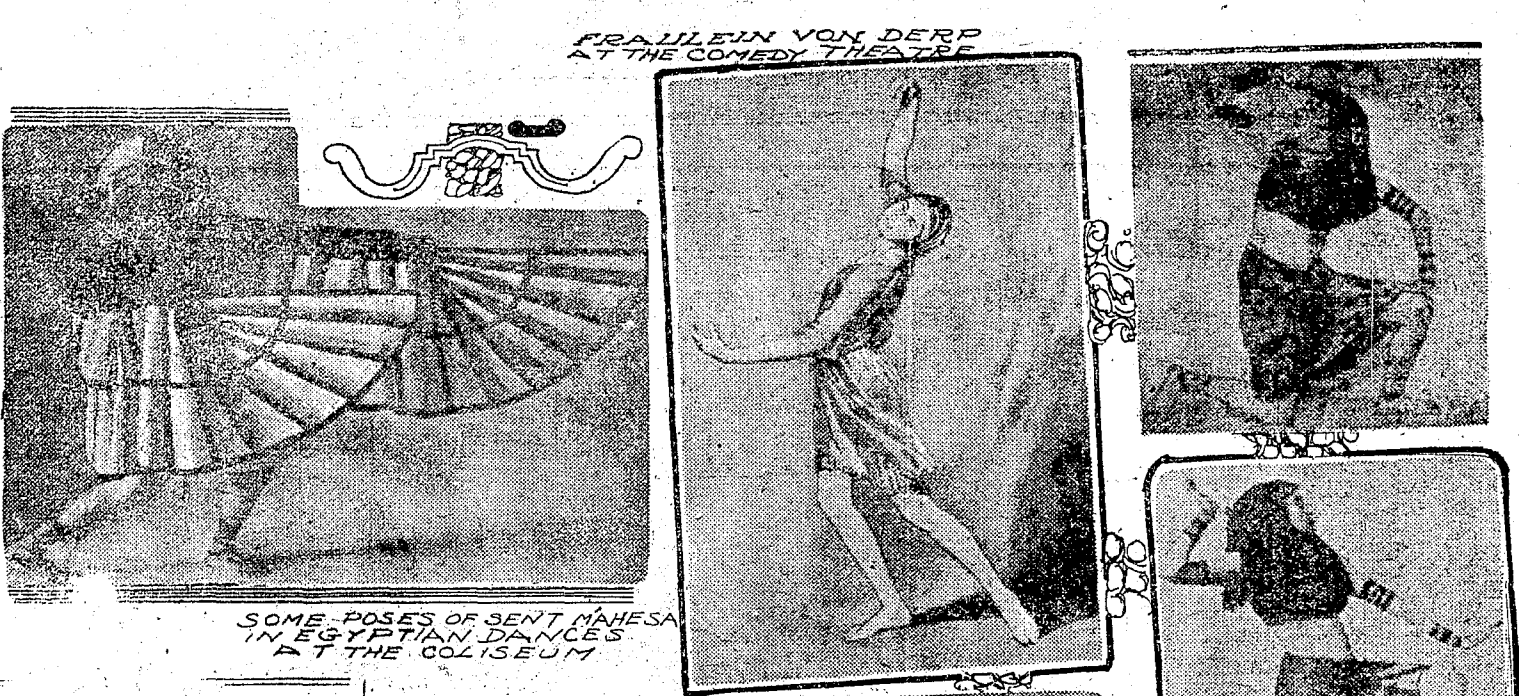

GIRL EXPOSES HER LOVER AS ROBBER

On Deathbed Chambermaid Tells Story of Strange Existence.

PARIS, July 8.—A Parisian paper is responsible for the following strange story of a young girl serving as a chambermaid, who it is alleged, admitted her deathbed that her lover was a robber. The girl, who was named Marie, had been a specialty to rob houses in the aristocratic quarters of the city. About a month ago, we are told, a lady engaged a chambermaid, aged about 35, who gave her entire satisfaction. The girl was recognized as being a noble and seemed quite happy in her service. She suddenly fell ill a little more than a week ago, and as her room on the top floor of the house, where servants usually dwell, her mistress gave her a room and bed in her own apartment, where she might be more comfortable, and be attended by the family physician. The girl rapidly grew worse, and the doctor, speaking to the lady in an adjoining room, told her that there was no hope, and that the girl had better be removed to a hospital. The girl overheard the conversation, or at least surmised its import, and when her mistress returned she told her of the doctor's words, and said that she realized that there was no hope for her. But before dying she wished to deliver her conscience of a burden that had been oppressing her, and as the lady had been so very good to her she feared to tell her the truth.

She said that she had been living with the ringleader of a certain gang of burglars, who had terrorized her so much that she left him, and tried to begin a new life. This is why she had sought employment, and was happy with the lady who found it. But it was long before the burglar discovered where she was, and he had threatened to kill her if she did not help him to enter the apartments of a few more houses. When she was told the latter was opened, and confessed the names of a gang of alleged burglars whom the police now hope to capture.

TORY CROWD UP IN ARMS AGAIN

(By THOMAS EMMETT.) DUBLIN, July 8.—The Tories and their allies, the Orangemen, are once more on their hind legs and braying volubly. And this is the reason some mischievous young fellows in Wexford burned the Union Jack, and some Orange and Tory papers are magnifying the incident as if it were an irretrievable argument against Home Rule. The town corporation need hardly have gone to the trouble of repudiating the Orangemen. The Irish have little cause to love the Union Jack so long as it is the symbol of a form of government which denies the right to manage their own affairs.

In a hamlet near Kilkenny, Mayo, the accused, an old age pensioner was the victim of the madness of a woman with whom she lived. The latter, Mary Feeney, was seized with the delusion that Coniffe was a witch, and early in the morning attacked her with an iron bar. Mrs. Coniffe died and her slayer is in jail for murder.

At the inquest Sergeant Doyle testified that he entered. After arresting the accused, she said, "What I said first, I said last. Didn't I come to give myself up?" Patrick Kilkenny deposed to meeting the accused. She had a statue in her hand, and repeated three times: "I have the old witch killed. I got power from heaven to kill her. She came into me yesterday, and told me to kill her, or I would be plagued with rats and mice."

Ellen Byrne, who also met the accused on the same morning, gave evidence that she said three times: "I have the witch killed. Don't be afraid of me, I won't touch you. We will be all happy now. I have the devil hunted away." They all went across the hill at three o'clock yesterday. The "Blessed Virgin" came to me, and told me to kill the witch, and to put her out not to let her pension not book into the house, or I would have no luck for the year. I had all the rats and mice cleared out when I put out the witch. The accused was wild in her manner and appearance. The constable, Dockery Mrs. Feeney said, "I have almost killed her. I struck her with the bolt of the door. She is a witch, and you can go now and take her away in the van. She is lying on the floor in her blood."

MAY VACATE SEAT.

There is a movement on foot by which it is proposed that John Muldoon, M. P., will vacate his seat for East Wicklow and run for the seat in the division of Cork from the representation of which Captain Donelan was unseated, and that Captain Donelan will go forward as the Nationalist representative of Wicklow. Muldoon was opposed at the general election by Hugh Howard, brother of the Earl of Wicklow, and defeated him.

How is this for official highfalutin? During a discussion at a meeting of the managers of the Trim Industrial School, on an application for an increase of salary from the master carpenter, which was refused, Manager Timmons stated that charges which had been made against the carpenter from time to time were "buttressed on misrepresentation, carried on the eve of election, and wrecked on the rocks of falsehood." Bishop Clancy of the Catholic diocese of Elphin, who is a patriot and a Nationalist, recently preached at Boncommon. He made a strong indictment of the packed jury and packed magistrates' benches system which prevails in the west of Ireland.

POSTAGE STAMP KILLS GIRL OF 17 IN GENEVA

GENEVA, July 8.—An extraordinary fatality has occurred in the village of Koblenz, in the Canton Argovie. In the presence of her parents a girl of 17 was killed by a postage stamp. She placed the stamp on her tongue to moisten it and in doing so coughed and swallowed it. The stamp stuck in her throat and choked her before medical aid arrived.

MADDENED BARBER CUTS OFF CUSTOMER'S HEAD

MADRID, July 8.—At Toledo, a barber named Valenzuela Pinzon was shaving a customer when he reminded him that he was two months in arrears with his payments. A violent quarrel followed and Pinto, overcome with rage, seized his customer by his hair and severed his head from his body with his razor. The murderer then rushed out of the shop and disappeared before the tragedy was discovered. He has not yet been traced.

20,000 Guard London During the Coronation

(By PAUL LAMBETH.)

LONDON, July 8.—Nearly 20,000 policemen, detectives and secret service men were on duty during the recent coronation. Last December the chief of the Metropolitan police caused a notice to be issued inviting men who have left the force during recent years to rejoin for a brief period. Many of these men were put to do "spade work," leaving the skilled detectives free for more important duties.

For instance, during the work of preparing Westminster abbey, numbers of plain-clothesmen, wearing suitable caps and aprons, worked side by side with the regular workmen. These men were selected on account of their having been stone-masons, carpenters and so on, and were paid the regular trade union rate of wages in addition, of course, to their police pay. Their real duties, however, were to look out for suspicious characters, or of anything out of the common.

GUARD VAULTS.

In accordance with an old custom, on the night before the actual ceremony the vaults and lower parts of Westminster abbey underwent a thorough search by picked detectives. And thence onward, until all over, police were constantly stationed at intervals of a few yards throughout this underground maze of real vaults, crypts and passages, being relieved at periods.

For the actual guarding of foreign royalties during their stay, special detectives were told exclusively. As a rule, two men, the pick of the C. I. D., were allotted to each personage, with a third in reserve as a sort of understudy.

There were other detectives employed watching all known anarchists and revolutionaries. All the time of the last coronation, one anarchist who was in the employ of a publican was trapped in the cellar and kept there until all was over.

Another revolutionist was arrested on a trivial charge and detained during the ceremonies. Strictly speaking, the police have no right to do these things, but on such an occasion it is held that the end justifies the means.

Scotland Yard authorities do not take any chances if they can help it. The coronation was a time of great anxiety for all of them, and especially for the heads of departments, who are called upon to carry out a scheme of police protection on an immense scale.

The constables each get a coronation medal apiece, and special pay, while detectives are rewarded with diamonds, gold watches and other costly souvenirs.

BULL BY HORNS.

This, I think, equals any of Sir Boyle Roche's famous bulls. Sir J. N. Barran, in the house of commons, urged the Board of Agriculture to do something to arrest the spread of bee disease, and expressed the hope that the board would take the bull by the horns—a remark that was received with loud laughter.

KING GUSTAVE IS IDOL OF THE PEOPLE

(By ERIC GRUNDMARK.)

COPENHAGEN, July 8.—The coronation of King George of England has overshadowed of course all other royal events during the past couple of weeks, but there has just been a celebration at Stockholm which should be of interest to many of our readers. It was the fifty-third birthday anniversary of his majesty, King Gustave of Sweden.

The ruler of Sweden shares with the Emperor of Germany the distinction of being one of the most versatile of living monarchs. He is a D. C. L. of Oxford and an L. L. D. of Cambridge, Doctors of all the Faculties of Vienna, and honorary member of the Academies of Science of Berlin and St. Petersburg. He has the Garter among his decorations, and the military schools of Sweden are under his inspection. He married, about thirty years ago, Princess Victoria, daughter of the late and sister of the present Grand Duke of Baden. Like his father, King Gustave is a good sportsman and a splendid shot. He is regarded as the best tennis player in his kingdom. One room in the palace is devoted to trophies won in the tennis court, and many of them won against all comers, and not those who gladly lose a game to so illustrious a personage.

King Gustave is keenly interested in military affairs. It was a soldier before he introduced some of his future subjects to his bride. "Gentlemen," he said, "the colonel of the regiment desires to introduce his wife to the regiment." And as the colonel's wife the Queen of Sweden was known for many a long year, the king's subjects were not without reason his majesty being called the most democratic king in Europe. His court is one of the most simple and homely. The poorest of his subjects may call and speak to the sovereign with no more formality than the sending in of their names. An out-and-out total abstainer, his majesty, during his crown princely days, did much by force of example to further the cause of temperance. Out of the 5,000,000 inhabitants of his kingdom nearly three-quarters of a million are organized teetotallers.

RAISED THEIR WAGES.

While King Oscar was on his death bed the servants in the household of the prince for higher wages. Their complaint got to the ears of the then crown prince. Many another man would have relegated the matter to the head of his household. Not so the prince. He called a meeting of the disaffected butlers and footmen and chambermaids and the rest of them around the house. He took the chair and astonished them all by asking each in turn to state his or her grievance. He listened very patiently. "You have told me earlier," I will see that your wages are raised." And raised they were.

An interesting and valuable series of experiments have just been completed on the Swedish state railway which show that peat up to 50 per cent can be mixed with coal for locomotives with little loss of power. Of two all-peat freight engines tested, one, requiring two firemen and having a tractive power of the coal burning power of an engine of 83 tons.

WEATHER BY WIRELESS IS LATEST IN EUROPE

PARIS, July 8.—The central bureau of meteorology announces active studies in the development of the wireless telegraph in the collection and distribution of weather bulletins. Already in Europe wireless is used to great advantage. Gibraltar, for example, sends every morning to London, weather observations of the Mediterranean. These messages are copied in transit by the French post at the Eiffel Tower and immediately transmitted throughout France.

The greatest problem in the collection of mid-sea bulletins is the limited power of the ocean steamer apparatus. The present aim is to reduce the time of transmission from sea so that the ship captain may be quickly advised as to the weather he is likely to encounter along his route.

GERMANY ALARMED OVER SURPLUSAGE OF WOMEN

Discovery That Country Has 930,433 More Single Females Than Males Disconcerts Kaiser's Realm

(By MALCOLM CLARKE.)

BERLIN, July 8.—There is an alarm-loud surplus of women in the Empire. The country has 930,433 more single females than single men. There are an additional 1,876,093 widowed and divorced women. The sum of husbandless rises, therefore, to two millions and a half. This is why the German is dictator; why there are more maternal newspapers in Germany than anywhere else; why, finally, every suitor demands, and gets, a substantial mittigt of so many thousand marks, although often he has himself not enough to buy a hat.

The City Council will shortly be invited to sanction a loan of $200,000, the money being required for developments already approved in the way of gas, water and canalisation, underground railway, street improvements, etc.

The Emperor has abandoned his strong opposition to cremation, and it is announced that in future he will be represented at the funerals of distinguished persons whose remains have been cremated. Hitherto he has tabooed funerals of people who killed themselves or whose remains were reduced to ashes.

Count Posadowsky, formerly Minister of the Interior, speaking at the funeral of a soldier the other day, described the condition of the poorer classes in the cities. At the same time, he admitted that the country population was also growing less virile.

"Although," he said, "agricultural employment provides better conditions for physical fitness in the military, yet in consequence of the underfeeding that is characteristic of rural life there is to be noticed every year a steady decrease in the military fitness of recruits, even in the agricultural population."

Count Posadowsky ascribes this to the country folk selling their own food produce and buying in major city food for their own consumption.

BATTLE WITH HOOLIGANS.

A sanguinary encounter between police and hooligans took place in the Friedrichstrasse, where on Saturday a criminal shot a policeman, a waiter and himself. Foot passengers, who heard screams for help coming from a beer-garden, summoned two policemen. Who entered the premises and found the proprietor, named Hochwald, lying on the ground, whilst three well-dressed men belabored him with clubs. Two others were endeavoring to strangle him with their hands. Then they were interrupted by the criminal, who drew a knife and life-preserver and turned his attention to the police. One was felled immediately by a kick in the stomach, the effect of which will probably be fatal. The other policeman had meanwhile drawn his sabre and successfully defended himself until a force of police arrived.

The leader of the gang had seized a long, sharp knife used for slicing ham and was about to slash it across the throat of the prostrate policeman, when a sabre-out from one of the rescuers felled him to the ground. His nose again fell to the ground. The long cut between his ear and temple upon the aggressor with a curved stiletto, but another sabre-out across the skull stretched him senseless.

Meantime the other four hooligans, who were mostly injured, had been driven into a corner by the armed police, and surrendered quietly.

These frock-coated and patent-booted hooligans pretended to be tradesmen and travelers, but they had been identified as members of a gang of panderers who have long made the Upper Friedrichstrasse unsafe. The leader of the gang was arrested.

OWENS DISCOVERS NEW DEVELOPMENT

Believes He Has Found Bacon Cache Under Ancient Castle.

LONDON, July 8.—Dr. Orville Ward Owens, who has been searching since last December in the mud of the Wye for the proof that Bacon wrote Shakespeare's plays, paid a flying visit to London recently, leaving for the first time the scene of the digging at Chepstow.

This visit was concerned with a new and important development in connection with the search. He was cleared for a long time with the agent of the Duke of Beaufort and his solicitors, and the result of the conference was the dispatching of a telegram to Chepstow telling the party to make all haste with the present discovery.

"The new discovery," said Dr. Owens, "is under the wall of Chepstow Castle in the Wye. There a triangular stone structure, thirteen feet high, has been found under the mud.

This structure has a wall eight feet deep and five feet broad, which is covered at high tide by five or six feet of water. It was hidden under eight feet of clay, mortar and stones, and no one knew it was there until I found it. It is a line of timber and concrete running down to the bed of the river. Nobody can tell yet for what purpose this was made, but it follows the details of my cipher in all particulars.

"Is this the cache?" I believe honestly, that it is. Its roof is shaped like the top of a house, and it is exactly like the thing I have been looking for. Furthermore, eminent archaeologists are unable to account for such a structure sitting out from the solid rock of the cliff on which the castle is built.

"There is no history of it—it has been there obviously for from two hundred and eighty to three hundred years. Of course it is totally different from the boat-shaped wooden abutment of the old bridge which was discovered some time ago by Pirie-Gordon. Although I hoped for the best there, I never really felt we were on the right track.

"I found this new place myself, with the help of Joe Ellis, my boatman, after we had abandoned the original sphere of the search, and dismantled the pumps and the barge."

AFRICAN FIELD OF BATTLE IS GRAVE

Many Homes of Paris Thrown Into Mourning Every Week.

PARIS, July 8.—Almost every week some half dozen French homes informed by the dreaded official dispatch, are thrown into mourning by the loss of some beloved son or brother on the African field.

The hardships encountered in the present French military action in Morocco are scarcely ever referred to in the official dispatches, but little by little the accounts creep in stories of long, hot marches of sudden nocturnal attacks by Moorish guerrilla bands, of frightful wounds which either kill or maim for life and dreadful tortures when the unhappy wounded are taken into the hands of the Moorish warrior.

Take at random the story of Captain Laborde. General Toutou, his commander, tells it in his diary which has just been forwarded to Paris. Laborde was sent to examine the safety of a route leading from Debdou to Moulaya. Having accomplished this he decided to push on to El Alloussa, situated in the heart of a handful of primitive mountainous tribes. He was advanced slowly to a group of tents when his progress was stopped by a shower of shots. He saw one of his men behind him fall. Calling the others around him Laborde was shot through the chest. He was not dead instantly. His lieutenant, Fradet, took command, and spoke words of courage. Slowly the little party was decimated until, when a rescue column arrived, only one man of the thirty-seven was left, still fighting desperately. Of the band of thirty-seven twenty-nine were dead and all the others wounded.

VERY SALUBRIOUS.

LONDON DEAD AS SOCIAL CENTER

Departure of Rulers for Ireland Ends Festivities in Great Britain.

Dublin Becomes the Official City of British Empire's Society.

(By LADY MARY MANWARING.)
LONDON, July 8.—With the departure of their majesties to Ireland the social center of the kingdom is transferred to the Irish capital and London is socially out of it for a while.
The Prince of Wales is now one of the most interesting characters before the public. His mother, the queen, who has many of the homely ideas of Queen Victoria, thinks he is too much before the public. In fact much has been written lately concerning the future residence of the Prince of Wales that has caused considerable annoyance to the king and queen. Their majesties both hold that their eldest son is still a boy, and as such they desire him to be regarded. The king has not yet given the last attention to the provision of a separate residence for his royal highness, but the statements that have been published to the effect that ultimately White Lodge and Blackhall, on the Balmoral estate, will be assigned to him will be ridiculously wide of the mark. As a matter of fact, White Lodge is shortly to pass into the hands of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, and the proper time arrives, it will be found that the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince Albert, will be installed at Park House, which stands on the Sandringham estate, and is now occupied by General Sir Dighton Probyn, V. C. Ultimately Frogmore will be the home of his royal highness, though this will not be until after his marriage—an event still sufficiently distant to make all discussion utterly futile.

FOUR OF AGE.

Speaking of his marriage, by the way there are only four royal ladies now of suitable age for his royal highness. They are:

- 1.—Princess Victoria Louise, born 1892, and the only daughter of the kaiser. Her recent visit to England made her a popular favorite on account of her sunny disposition, her extreme simplicity and the wonderful tact that she displayed on many occasions.
- 2.—Princess Eudoxie of Bulgaria, born in 1898, and eldest daughter of the czar of Bulgaria. This lady is four years younger than the Prince of Wales, and though the marriage might not loom large in the popular imagination, it would have a very appreciable effect upon the political situation in the near east and England's interests in Turkey and Asia Minor.
- 3.—Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the Crown Princess of Roumania, and is named after the Prince of Wales. It is likely speaking of a union which will have less importance than that with Bulgaria.
- 4.—The Grand Duchess Olga Nikolaevna, eldest daughter of his majesty the czar of Russia, and years younger than our heir apparent. At first blush such a marriage might not appear advisable. There is in England a certain undercurrent of disapproval against the czar's rule in Russia, and the names are proverbially difficult to convince when once they have made up their minds.

But, maybe, when the time arrives the Prince of Wales will be allowed to choose a wife for himself, not necessarily the daughter of some reigning monarch, but, of course, a lady closely allied by family ties. It is almost pathetic this loneliness of kingship.

All else he may choose to the fullness of his will, with the one exception of his consort. She belongs to the people as much as he, hence he is hedged around with state considerations, and is often unable to follow the dictates of his heart.

Fortunately the Prince of Wales, Queen Mary is essentially a mother and a woman as well as a queen. She may be relied upon to use all her influence to her son, besides the fact that the dignity of her exalted position, shall bring with her a dowry a disposition that shall promise long years of happiness for the prince and herself.

TRAINING FOR PRINCE.

Information comes to hand from a usually well-informed quarter that the Prince of Wales has decided that the Prince of Wales shall commence his military career shortly after he attains his eighteenth birthday in June of next year. It is understood that the Tenth Hussars will be brought home from India in order that his royal highness may be attached to this distinguished regiment, which has in former times numbered many of the royal family among its officers.

The Duke of Devonshire, prominent among them being the late King Edward and his elder son, the late Duke of Clarence and Avondale. The heir-apparent would take up his residence at the royal stables at Aldershot, but otherwise, by his majesty's express desire, he will be treated in every respect like an ordinary subaltern, save that he will not be expected to be present at the regimental mess each evening. In due course the prince will be attached to the Royal Artillery and the infantry, in order that he may become personally acquainted with the three principal branches of the service.

A matter that is causing the much anxious thought at the moment is the future education of her only daughter, Princess Mary. Had it been possible the queen would have liked to have given her daughter the charge of a temporary residence on the continent, preferably in Italy. It may be remembered that, as a girl, Queen Mary spent a few years in Florence with her parents, and it is the hope of her majesty that she should receive from this stay that makes her anxious that her daughter should do likewise. What will probably be done will be that the queen and the prince will pay prolonged visits to the continent every spring, visiting different parts in turn, in order that her royal highness may study abroad and have her ideas broadened.

The king has approved the appointment of the Duke of Roxburghe as brigadier of the Royal Company of Archers, the king's bodyguard of Scotland, in place of the late Sir Robert Dundas.

The king has approved the appointment of the Duke of Buccleuch, the Duke of Buccleuch, had the honor of figuring in the coronation procession as gold stick for Scotland.

MANUFACTURE OF ABSINTHE IS BARRED

PARIS, July 8.—The prohibition of the manufacture and sale of absinthe in France has been approved today by the French commission appointed by the Senate to consider a proposal to that effect. Should the measure become law the manufacture, sale, transport—and importation of all alcoholic liquors containing absinthe will be prohibited, under fines ranging from 20 to $400.

The consumption of absinthe in France has grown enormously of recent years. From 150,000 gallons in 1878, it has risen to 4,000,000 gallons in 1910.

BAD TEETH AND BALDNESS.

He declared that about one-fourth of the cases of premature baldness are of dental origin.

died with on the burning of Sledmere. Although in his eighty-sixth year he is full of health and strength, and is the perfect type of a Yorkshire baronet. He was once a shining light in the racing world, and—curious contrast—has all his life been keen on the building of churches. Sir Tatton is a man who prides himself on his eccentricities. One of his fads is to wear several samples of the same garment at one and the same time, so he often appears with two coats, two waistcoats—even two pairs of trousers. In the old days Sir Tatton and Lady Sykes used to receive a smart annual party for the Ledger at Danum house, in the town of Doncaster; and among their regular guests were the late Caroline, Duchess of Montrose, and the late Lord William Somerset. In 1874 Sir Tatton married Miss Jessica Cavendish-Bentick, a sister of Mrs. Arthur James and Frederick Cavendish-Bentick.

The Duke of Devonshire, who entertained the king and queen on the evening of Derby day at Devonshire house, Epsom, is probably the only duke who has had personal experience of life in a city accountant's office. At the age of 23 he began his parliamentary career and was at the time the youngest member of the lower house. The Cavendishes have always been noted for their tact, and, as an old anecdote testifies, two members of the family, generations since, when traveling to their home in the north, were shown at an inn where they stayed for the night, into a room where there were three beds. Before getting into bed each in turn drew aside the curtains of the old bed and peeped in, and retired without comment. Next day, when they had ridden far from the inn, one asked: "Did you see what was in the bed last night?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"They had both seen a corpse in the third bed."

COLONEL BRULARD ON THE WAY TO PEZ.

Career of Crime Is Laid At the Door of M. Duez

(By PAUL VILLIERS.)

PARIS, July 8.—Edward Duez, who was very active in the recent anarchist and governmental crusade which resulted in the closing of many churches and convents and the driving of Sisters of Charity out of the country was recently placed on trial there. He has been proved to be a monumental robber.

Duez, who was the government liquidator of the property of the religious orders, who is accused of having embezzled $2,000,000 of the money secured from the sale of clerical property, which should have been handed to the treasury.

Duez, who was arrested, has confessed. Quite a while has been spent with the sifting of a mountain of documents with which he filled his offices and concealed his crime.

His clerk, Martin Gautier, was arrested and was as frank as his master. He related how in convent gardens, beautiful parties at which he entertained women, he walked in transparent garments. Gautier was released on bail. It only became known Monday that he had disappeared.

Duez is 53 years old, and began life as a clerk. He lived lavishly and when he was appointed receiver of church property he had been blackmailed by a woman, and that in a few nights at a seaside casino he lost $100,000 playing faro.

Duez burst into tears at the first question put to him. The judge put it to Duez that after he had been appointed liquidator he had appropriated $200,000 of the property of 186 persons for whom he was trustee. Duez said that he had nothing to say.

"You were entrusted with the liquidation of eleven religious orders," said the judge, "and you admitted in the examination, that you misappropriated, to their detriment, $200,000."

Duez said that when he made these admissions he was distracted. He did not retract his confession; he only disputed the amount.

"Who will believe?" you asked the judge. And Duez retorted, "Anyone that wants to know the truth." He declared that he had not appropriated any of the sums advanced to him by the treasury.

The judge pointed out that the law commanded Duez to pay over all the money he received from the sale of the real estate belonging to the religious orders. Yet of the $2,500,000 which he received he handed over only $300,000.

"It was impossible to do otherwise," replied Duez. Duez is bitterly anti-Catholic, and an infidel and Socialist.

AMERICAN VISITORS TO PARIS this summer have been struck often with the printed signboards hung across electric light posts in the center of the boulevards, which contain the words "Be kind to animals." Recently the number of these signs has been increased throughout the city, and an alert society of humane people, founded along the lines of the American society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, keeps an active eye on public cabmen or other drivers of horse-besides to see that horses are not wantonly punished.

PARIS, July 8.—The movement in France for the prevention of cruelty to animals has been extended in the direction of the circus, where the animals, which are now held in French cities nearest the Spanish frontier. Bull-rings exist at Bayonne, Toulouse and Nîmes, where in the summer large crowds applaud Spanish bull-fighters in their picturesque struggle in the ring. A deputy from Southern France, claiming that bull-fights are attended by excessive cruelty to horses therein engaged, has introduced a bill in parliament under which bull-fights would be declared illegal.

AMERICAN VISIT

GERMANY HAS EAR TO GROUND IN MOROCCO

Has No Intention of Giving Up Claims in That Troubled Country for a Long Time

(By FREDERICK WERNER.)
BERLIN, July 8.—Though so far reaching absolutely passive in the Morocco question, Germany has by no means any intention of giving up her claims in that much troubled country. Statesmen here agree that Morocco will remain in the political foreground summer and winter, and the moment comes as Germany surely think it will, when Wilhelmstrasse will give up its present apathetic attitude and present its claims in no uncertain terms.
When the time comes we shall then, perhaps, witness the reopening of the question of the empire with Germany asserting claims to a large share of interest in the resulting settlement, commercially, if not politically.
Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter, the energetic foreign secretary, will remain at his post all the summer. The current report that he will limit himself to a short and early holiday in order to be on hand and watch developments is not wholly without foundation.
For some time past a movement has been on foot to establish a defensive alliance between the Netherlands and Belgium. The aggressive policy of Germany, however, has steadily pursued, has brought about this desire for a closer union between the two countries.
Those who are pressing forward this project see in the visit of Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Henry of Brabant this month a significant step toward the realization of their dreams.

WELCOME AWAITS THEM.

Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Henry will find the city garlanded with flowers and greenery on July 28. In the Grand Place little girls, clothed in white, will form a circle, and behind them will be grouped the Brussels societies with their banners. The courtyard of the Hotel de Ville will be transformed into a garden and a choir of girls will sing a song of welcome to the Dutch Queen.
King Albert and Queen Elizabeth and Queen Wilhelmina and her consort will take their places on a tribune, and before them all the little girls attending the schools in Brussels will pass. The girls will be dressed in white, relieved with orange-colored ribbons and flowers.
A pretty ceremony of homage to the Queens has been arranged. Two little girls carrying baskets of flowers will leave the ranks and deposit them at their feet.
Nor will little Juliana, Queen Wilhelmina's daughter and the hope of the Dutch nation, be forgotten. All sorts of presents will be sent to Holland from the children of Brussels.
The politicians anticipate that great happenings will follow the Dutch royal visit. They say that it will be the queens, the children and the feast of flowers that will bring about the entente between the two countries for their common safety.
Women are certainly up and doing everywhere, even in the dominions of the Casar. A very short time ago the question of woman's rights was discussed in the Council of Empire at St. Petersburg and the Council even outdid the Duma in its zeal for the "weaker" sex.
Women in Russia are entitled to take degrees at certain universities and no qualify for, and occupy positions in various educational establishments. But, here, they were deprived of the right to a pension on the same footing as their male colleagues. In order to do away with this injustice the Duma passed a bill entitling all female teachers, lecturers and professors to nearly the same pensions after the same number of years, as instructors of the other sex receive. The measure that came up before the Council of the Empire. It was expected that this law would be shelved, but the council, on the contrary, received it cordially, commented on its favorably, and there was not a single voice raised against it. Nay, more, instead of contenting itself with the virtual equality which the Duma measure decreed, the upper chamber decreed absolute equality of the sexes in this matter and defined the rights of the ladies with legal precision. It was a day of triumph for the friends of "woman's rights."

ALBANIANS IN RIGHT.

Few people in America have any idea of the true conditions in Albania and many, I hear, are apt to blame the Albanians for not accepting more generally the friendly hand recently extended to them by the Sultan. The truth is that the offer was only one of Turkey's usual despicable tricks used whenever the Porte finds itself in a tight place.
That is why the Albanians, though outnumbered 20 to 1 are still voting that they would rather die than again entrust themselves to the Turks.
The whole of the original band of insurgents—the men of the five large tribes Gduda, Hoti, Kastrati, Klementina and Skrelli—have now been driven up right to the Montenegrin frontier. Every woman and child of the Christians is at present taking refuge in Montenegro. They have poured over the border in thousands to escape the Turkish soldiers, and are now destitute upon the mountain sides.
On the slopes of Korito are 500 families—averaging eight per family—shelterless, foodless, destitute of everything, and exposed to the torrential rain which keeps falling at this time of year. They are chopping up the leaves of the aspidodel—rank stuff that not even goats will eat—and stowing it. Several cases of starvation have already occurred.
The misery and want is greater than after the rising in Macedonia in 1903, for the Turkish army has now reached a very high pitch of efficiency. It is now armed with the latest rifles, artillery and machine guns. Instead of developing their empire, the Turks are devastating it. The district was cruelly poor before. Now, for the sake of wringing taxes from a set of ignorant and poverty-stricken peasants, they have turned the land into a barren wilderness.
Every house is burnt, great columns of smoke are visible daily. No haystack, no fruit tree, no garden or vineyard, however small, is spared. The churches are plundered and filthily desecrated. A few unfortunate infirm and aged persons who are not long for the return of either their houses. In one case, at Skrelli, an old woman of 80 years, was cast into her burning house.

Business Is Good, Says Depew

LONDON, July 8.—Ex-Senator Chauncey M. Depew passed a week in London, giving a tour through the west, says that the speakers at the Fourth of July Chamber of Commerce dinner, after which he went to Aix-les-Bains, where Mrs. Depew will take the cure. "And I take it just for fun, to keep her company," the former appearance certainly does not belie the statement, for his many friends here agree that he has not looked so well for years.
After the cure the Depews will go to Lucerne, returning to America early in September.
"Business conditions in America have never been better," said the ex-Senator. "They have been cleared immensely by the United States Supreme Court decisions. If these decisions had not been rendered there would have been nothing about the summer, but now everybody can just go on with business as usual. The business men of the country more optimistic than they are now."

QUOTES W. C. BROWN ON CROPS.

"William C. Brown, president of the New York Central railroad, after a hasty tour through the west, says that there will be bumper crops, both in wheat and corn.
"Of course the stock market suffers because of the uncertainty of legislation at Washington."
Referring to the steel investigation,

Mr. Depew said: "The commission was much astonished over Elbert H. Gary's testimony that the steel trust did less than 50 per cent of the steel business and would not do more than 52 per cent if it could, and, furthermore, welcomed rigid control over business to a point where the government fixed prices.
"As the commission has started to prove by Mr. Gary that the steel trust was a monopoly, his testimony was particularly disconcerting and they adjourned to see what they had better do next."

SAYS TAFT GAINS STRENGTH.

Regarding the political situation Mr. Depew said: "There is one impression I have received, namely, the growing popularity of Mr. Taft. He is the only President in my long experience who, having made up his mind as to what he considers never considers what the people will be of his political future."
"This attitude is more and more impressive the people. He is both safe and sane. Six months ago I would have said that the Democrats would have won hands down, but the growing strength of Taft is changing the situation very rapidly.
"If the Democrats nominate Harmon, the Bryan element will not be enthusiastic; if they nominate Wilson, then the conservative Democrats will be likely to support the Republican ticket."

TAXICAB DRIVERS LOSE TIPS AFTER CRYING WOLF

LONDON, July 8.—That it never pays to cry wolf is a maxim which London taxicab drivers are finding to be true. At the recent inquiry into the conditions of the motor-car trade, drivers protested that the tips they got were almost a negligible amount, such as a penny in the shilling, but that they were thankful even for such small morsels.
"The cry of the drivers that they got almost nothing in tips has resulted in the public coming down to the figures the men stated." A taxicab driver said:
"When the taxicabs first came out they were regarded as a novel luxury.
"Then people gave tips often as large as the amounts registered on the dial. Now motor-cabs have become the business man's vehicle, and as soon as the business man read that taxicab drivers only got tips of 2d. in the shilling, or even less, and were humbly grateful for the bargain, he came down to that figure."

WINDOW ALLOWS VIEW OF GUGGI GLACIER

GENEVA, July 8.—A "window" has been placed near the Jungfrau railway, Switzerland, to give passengers on the wonderful Jungfrau Railway, while in the tunnel, a view of the great glacier. Unfortunately the presence of snow obscured the view at the opening ceremony. The Jungfrau Railway is being extended from Eismeer, above Grindelwald, its present terminus, to the Jungfrau, 11,000 feet above sea level, and thence ultimately to the peak of the Monks, at an elevation of 14,000 feet.

Bonapartists Now Have Mouthpiece in the Press

(By GEORGE DUFRENE.)
PARIS, July 8.—Paris may now truly boast of a Bonapartist newspaper, for ever since Prince Napoleon published his new famous manifesto in its pages some three weeks ago Le Figaro may be considered the official mouthpiece of the Bonapartists. Both parties are undoubtedly satisfied with the arrangements, the prince because he has got hold of one of the most famous papers of France, and as for Le Figaro—well, it has never been so long for the return of either kingdom or empire, statements of political shades agree with the prince when he asserts that "parliamentarism has arrived at the last stage of its evolution," though very few of them have the courage to say so openly, and in this fact lies a chance for the Bonapartists.
The question came before the chamber and M. Constant, who is under secretary of state at the ministry of the Interior, asked the House to refer the propositions which the two members will submit to the commission that deals with such matters. It does not appear at all likely that the chamber will pronounce against M. Lepine, but this is not quite the point. The fact is that if it even hints at any disapproval of his dual position, he may consider that it is lacking in the confidence which alone supports him in the discharge of his duties, and may therefore resign the office of prefect of police.
This would be a heavy blow to the public interests. Long and as a Bonapartist, M. Lepine has been a devoted servant of the state, and his removal would be a serious loss to the government.
"I have no appetites to satisfy, and if ever the French democracy should call me to their head, it is with men of honesty and experience, with republicans who for thirty years have rendered services to their country, that I should wish to govern."
The Paris press with rather strange unanimity looks upon the various manifestations of the Prince as a bid for the consulate, which to Prince Victor Napoleon, like his famous ancestor, may prove a stepping stone to imperial glory—if he ever gets it.
The mayor of Seilf, M. Sebe, has just appeared in the consular court, charged with cheating at poker. The trial attracted considerable attention, and there were more than forty witnesses, most of whom gave evidence which went to show that the mayor of Seilf was quite incapable of cheating at cards.
The charge of cheating was made by M. Lafage. A sensation was caused by a letter read from M. Aubry, a senator of Constantine, who, excusing himself from being present at the trial, declared that he always considered M. Sebe an honest man, but supposed that he had become afflicted with a sort of kleptomania.
The mayor vehemently protested against the charge. He hinted that the witnesses who gave evidence in support of it had acted by suggestion, and spoke of a political conspiracy against him. Counsel for the prosecutor maintained that the charge was well founded. The judges will take time to consider their verdict.
Among the directors of the Suez Canal Company who recently retired from their position in accordance with the by-laws of the company, was M. Lepine, chief of the Paris police, who was immediately re-elected at the annual meeting of the stockholders. M. Lepine was elected a director for the first time just four years ago and when he was nominated, he consulted M. Clemenceau, then prime minister, who gave him full authorization to assume the office. No objection was raised until the other day when two deputies, a socialist radical and a socialist, announced their intention of bringing the matter before the chamber, on the ground that M. Lepine, as prefect of police, had no right to add another office to his own. There is a regulation forbidding a public man to hold two offices, but M. Clemenceau did not regard it as applying to M. Lepine's case, nor indeed, does the present ministry take a different view, though it left it to the chamber to pronounce its opinion.

BRITISH WOULD COAX DOWN RAIN

LONDON, July 8.—The long continued drought here has started the scientists of this country offering theories as to what science and modern inventions can do put for the purpose of making the moisture—the water due, as we may say, coagulate. When they have run together to form a sufficiently heavy spot it will fall to the earth, and there you have your rain. You can demonstrate this in the laboratory. If you fill a bell-jar with fog and introduce an electric current you will see it begin to rain. In the thunder shower you have precisely the same effect with its big rain drops which is simply the action of electricity on water dust.
In England there is little use for such methods as it is seldom that clouds pass over us without breaking. I do understand that it frequently happens in Australia and in America that when there is every prospect of rain the clouds float away and give up no rain for "the parched lands."

IN FACE OF DEATH AVIATORS ARE CALM.

PARTS, July 8.—The following story from Douai tells of the remarkable coolness of a paper and a pilot in mid-air when both one and the other were convinced that they were flying to their death. Lieutenant Ludmann, chief of the military aviation center of Douai, left for Tignes and came to a forced landing at Catelet, in the Aisne; but, fortunately, no damage was caused. When they were flying over Cambrai at a height of about 2500 feet at four o'clock in the morning, the sapper Deville, whom the lieutenant had taken with him as a lookout passenger, noticed that one of the wire stays holding the motor had given away, and that the magnet was not working well. He made a sign to the officer, to shut off the motor in order to be able to handle the other motor working again, hoping that it might carry them as far as Rheims, but every moment the wire became looser and the danger of the others snapping became imminent. The lieutenant held his notebook before him and wrote as follows: "If we fall, it will be known that it was caused by one of the wire stays which held the motor loose, and by the bad working of our magnet, and not through any fault of handling the motor of the machine." Happily, by means of a vol-plane, the aviators were able to land safely. When on the ground, the lieutenant looked at what his companion had written in his notebook. The sapper simply explained that he had done it so that in case of accident it would be seen that the pilot was not responsible.

PRINCE OF WALES IS IDOL OF HIS PEOPLE

Typical Anglo-Saxon Lad He Is and Many Stories Are Told of His Cleverness

(By PHILLIP EVERETT.)
LONDON, July 8.—The young Prince of Wales, who will be the central figure in the imposing ceremony that takes place in Carnarvon Castle, Wales, only two weeks ago celebrated his seventeenth birthday.
A typical Anglo-Saxon lad is Prince Edward. He is fair-haired, blue-eyed, and sturdy of limb—a picture of health, strength and good temper. He has always been a keen sportsman. He could ride his pony when he was five, and on his seventeenth birthday King Edward gave him a bicycle. Not only has he always been a public favorite, but stories galore have already been told around his name. An anecdote is told of his life at Okeham College—it should be explained that the Prince, despite his exalted birth, had to go through the ordinary routine, and had to take his part in "ragging." One day, a cadet gave him a shilling and directed him to go and get him some jam puffs. The Prince went on his errand, and brought back the pastry and three-pence change.
"Keep the thr'pence, boy," said the cadet, in lordly fashion. Whereupon the future ruler of four hundred millions of people pocketed his tip with unalloyed joy, and there and then wrote details of his luck to his father.
King Edward and the little Prince were greatly attached to each other, and many a good story the late king used to tell of his nephew's sayings and doings. One concerned the redoubtable Perkin Warbeck. The king had asked the Prince what he was about studying in his history lesson.
"Oh, all about Perkin Warbeck," was the reply; and in answer to a further question as to who Warbeck was, came the explanation:
"He pretended he was the son of a king; but he wasn't. He was the son of respectable parents."
On another occasion a cadet friend inquired in awe-filled tones:
"You feel it a tremendous responsibility to be the eldest son of the future King of England?" Prince Edward pondered.
"I never thought of it like that," said he. "It always seems to me to be a great luck to be the eldest son, because the eldest never has to wear any of his brother's old clothes."

ROYAL TRADE COMMISSION.

The British government has decided to appoint a royal commission to inquire into matters affecting trade relations between England and the colonies.
The suggestion was made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier on behalf of the Dominions and supported by Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Newfoundland. The commission will, it is expected, consist of about twelve members, and visit all the dominions will be proportionately represented.
The commission will visit the various parts of the Empire and inquire on the spot into such matters as unification of laws, emigration, shipping, cables, telegraphy, and other matters bearing upon trade relations. It is expected that the commission will be constituted and leave England before the beginning of next year.
In connection with the proposed visit of the King and Queen to Ireland, somebody is secretly distributing and posting colored handbills and placards in the following terms:
"England's King and Queen condescend to visit Ireland. Irishmen and Irish women, remember they are on a proselytizing mission. England dreads Germany, and now as always seeks support from her Irish pupes. Cowardly England! You crouch before her, and want her women to present an address of welcome to your Queen. Irish women, trust not in Saxon guile. Refuse to sign an address to the successor of Queen Elizabeth. Remember, the English throne while one million of your race were done to death in dark '47! God save Ireland!"
This appeal to the old instinct of race hatred has littered the sidewalks and even the doorsteps of Dublin, and on former royal visits to Ireland, it is evident that an unscrupulous attempt is being made to stir up feelings of disloyalty.
Mrs. George Pinckard has inaugurated a series of shooting parties at her place at Coombe Court, Surrey, and has sent out one of the most elegant invitations to the best known of the British social set.
The triumph of Vedrines and Beaumont, French aviators, who with nine others crossed and re-crossed the English channel the other day, was offset by the absence of Garros, a companion of the two, who this was the second crossing. When leading the Paris-Turin race and did not continue.
Although Sir Frederick Bridge was conductor-in-chief at the Abbey service for the coronation, Dr. Walter G. Alcock presided at the organ. It is interesting to note that the service was the second ceremony at which both Sir Frederick and Dr. Alcock occupied the same official capacities, since they were both responsible for the dignified and beautiful musical setting to the coronation of the late King Edward VII. Dr. Alcock carried the organ, the grand old organ of the Abbey, to the coronation of the late King, and at the invitation of Sir Frederick Bridge, has specially written music to "The Sanctus."

ANTIQUITIES ON DISPLAY.

A most remarkable exhibition of antiquities has just been opened in London. It contains the result of a year's work of the British School of Archaeology in Egypt.
Foremost amongst the exhibits is a very valuable collection of Roman portraits of the first century. They are probably the earliest paintings known, and in many cases are of such individuality and strength as to challenge comparison with the technique and imagination of modern artists.
Professor Flinders Petrie showed them to me, and explains how he discovered them. Some were arranged in frames, and others were lying across the swathed faces of the mummies as he had first found them.
"Two years ago," he said, "I found a cemetery at Hawara, in Fayum, in the western desert of Egypt. Each mummified body had a portrait painted in colored wax on a thin piece of cedar wood, its feet, its chest, its arms, were broken and some decayed, but managed to collect a fair number. They are in the National Gallery, but I hardly think any of them are equal to those we have collected lately. I may say why there has been such a long interval between the first discovery and the unearthing of these later specimens. Only those who have worked in Egypt can fully appreciate the reason. When the cemetery was being formed, the bodies were heaped up with earth. When I made the first find we dug out all within reach, and there seemed to be nothing more to be done."

U. S. EMBASSY AT BERLIN PUZZLE

BERLIN, July 8.—The situation which has developed in the American Embassy in Berlin as a result of the retirement of Dr. David Jayne Hill is becoming the subject of increasing wonderment and mystification here.
Dr. Hill has a farewell audience with the sovereign to which he was accredited, but he did not hand in the name of his successor on that occasion, nor did he present his papers of recall.
The only possible explanation of his failure to take this usual course is that the American government has not sent him his papers of recall.
The anomalous position in which Dr. Hill is placed by this omission is causing no little gossip and shaking of heads on the part of both the diplomats and the government officials, some of whom jokingly declare themselves skeptical as to whether Dr. Hill will really be allowed to retire.

EMBAASSY STAFF SLIM.

The disregard of the ordinary formalities of diplomatic intercourse in this instance is declared to be on a par with the official neglect or oversight which has allowed the personnel of the Berlin Embassy to be reduced almost to nothing in a few days. When the last of the German Imperial and Prussian ministries Tuesday evening at the farewell dinner of the American Association of Commerce.
That so many of the highest officials of the government should have been out to attend a dinner instituted by a private organization in Dr. Hill's honor is, it is said, without precedent in Berlin. The warmth of the speeches and the cordiality of the greetings exchanged between the Ambassadors and Herr Sydow, with whom he conducted the recent potato negotiations, Minister Delbruck and other officials leave no occasion for doubt as to the sincerity of the leave taking on the German side.
The position which Dr. Hill has won here in nonofficial and university circles was shown in a remarkable way in the address of the great theologian, Prof. Harnack, who, in the presence of Dr. Hill's influence as a representative of American science, learning and thought.

BOIS DE BOULOGNE HANG-OUT OF APACHES

PARIS, July 8.—The Bois de Boulogne is becoming the happy hunting ground of "Apaches," who lie in wait for visitors to Paris, and after maltreating them rob them.
William Beat, an American visitor, was the latest victim. He passed Monday evening in the Pavillon Chinois, and started to his hotel in the Rue de l'Arcade soon after midnight.
His knowledge of Paris was imperfect, and he asked his way of three men whom he met. They led him into a lonely part of the Bois, attacked and robbed him of all he possessed, and left him unconscious.
He was found half an hour later with a deep wound over his left eye, and carried to a chemist's shop where restoratives were administered to him. When he regained consciousness he was taken to his hotel.
Another victim was M. Sergius Ivanoff, of Moscow, who was robbed and stabbed by two women and three "Apaches" in the Bois the other night. He remained unconscious until he was found, when he was discovered and taken to his hotel in the Champs Elysees.

Dramatic Offerings

ORPHEUM

Even better than usual is the Oakland Orpheum's new vaudeville show that opens today. There will be five new acts on the bill, with but three of the features that made big hits last week held over.

A feature of the bill will be an episode by Porter Emerson Browne, entitled "In and Out," enacted by Homer B. Mason, Marguerite Keeler and a quartette of comedians of the first rank. Mr. Mason will be recalled to the minds of the theatergoers as the star of "A Stubborn Cinderella," while Atlas Keeler was also featured in the same company for the past two years. "In and Out" is a skit full of ginger and affords Mr. Mason an excellent opportunity to display his ability as a comedian, and Miss Keeler, who portrays the coquettish little sister, is bewitching.

A decided novelty is "Rousby's Scenic Review" of "London by Day and Night," that will appear. Plotted in a most attractive fashion, will be "Mighty London," brought before your eyes and by wonderful electrical effects, made more realistic than could ever be accomplished with animated pictures. The electrical apparatus used is the same as those in the famous Richard Wagner theater of Bayreuth.

The scene of London is copied from a photograph taken by the "Graphic," and executed by the famous scenic artist, Markwell Davis, in fourteen weeks. The performance is divided into three parts, showing Leicester Square, a panorama view from the famous "Star and Garter" hotel in Richmond, and the evening festival during exhibition time at the Court of Honour. The feature arouses a curiosity as to how the scenes and effects are produced, and at the same time arouses great interest in the scenes as instructive and faithful views of the world's great city. Mr. Rousby brings his act to the Orpheum after a brilliant success in Australia.

Melville Ellis, an exceptionally smart entertainer, will be a notable feature. He has been three years since Mr. Ellis last appeared in vaudeville, which he left with a fine reputation, to join the Shubert forces. He has become probably the most noted authority on stage costumes in this country. He is now playing a few weeks in vaudeville prior to taking charge of the costuming of the Shubert productions in the fall. He has a brand new budget of songs that he has recently brought from England.

A pleasing comedy, singing and dancing performance will be presented by Lydell and Butterworth, "The Light Brown Girl and the Funny Dancer." The girl is pretty, chic, dainty and well dressed. A stunning plush curtain adds greatly to their attractiveness. The dancer is funny and indulges in eccentricities with a naturalness that is very refreshing. They dance, sing and cut funny capers. "General" Edward Lavine is said to have about the most unique make-up of any man in vaudeville. He is funny to look at and when he adds to his grotesque appearance a series of amusing and difficult feats he becomes irresistible as a laugh producer. Lavine performs some remarkable tricks in juggling, but he does these in such a comical way that he replaces applause with hearty laughter, and this is really the most pleasing acknowledgment of appreciation to a comedian for his efforts.

Raymond and Caverly, who are German comedians of the highest rank, will indulge in a lot of new funny stuff where-with to tickle the risibles of the Orpheum crowds.

Albert Hole, the English boy soprano, the lad who sings in seraphic style, will provide a musical treat of the first order. The Belclair brothers, marvelous examples of what physical training can accomplish, will show some feats of strength and several remarkable tests of endurance.

BELL

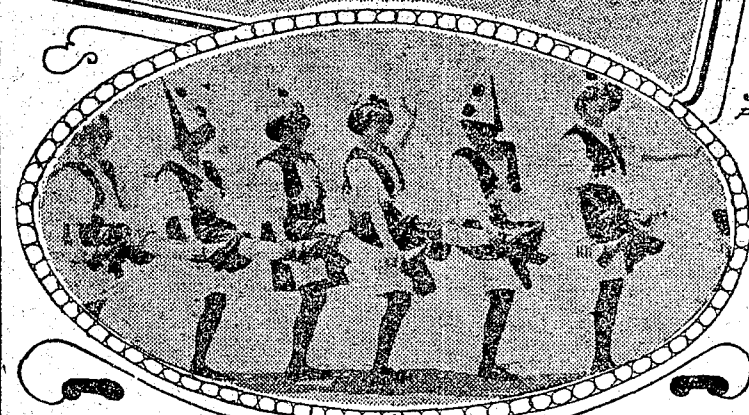

At the Bell theater in the new bill beginning this afternoon chief interest will center in the world renowned artistry of Joe Welch, the pre-eminent Hebrew comedian of the American stage. This announcement is the most notable of many seasons, for Joe Welch's name has been on the lips of every theatergoer in the west. Everyone has read of his great talents, and have seen him imitated by many artists. Needless to say that this eminent star in fadom has been a veritable riot wherever he has been heard and his tour through the west has been in the nature of a triumphal one. Mr. Welch has selected a comedy creation styled "A Study from Life," which affords the fullest scope for the display of his many talents. Mr. Welch will not offer a Hebrew caricature, but a Hebrew type which is as amusing to the Jew himself as to the Gentile. He will show us a character whose humor is rich and whose heart is gentle and he will unquestionably be the main feature, theatrically, in Oakland this week.

An intensely dramatic tangle, a story of the west at an earlier date, and entitled "A Girl of the West," is the vehicle for the very capable company of Al Luttringer, Lillian Lucas and allied players. It is just a clear, sweet story of the Montana section of the Rockies and it will be most excellently told and staged.

Sprague and McNeese have brought to vaudeville the most notable roller skating act that has been shown down to date. The act will be picturesquely set and you will note the richness and excitement of the wardrobe.

Elisett and Scott, the "Hello, George, Boys," are a pair of marvelous dancers who outshine all competitors in both the buck and eel dancing. The chair dance they execute is one of the most difficult in effects any dancer or dancers ever attempted.

Gretchen Spencer is a dashing little lady with a very fetching personality and a singing voice that has lifted her to the top notch of vaudeville. She is well known in her roles with "The Drummer Boy" and in "The Yankee Girl." The Seymours, four in number, are present with a bunch of contagious fun in "The Last Day of School" and "The Wise Guy."

YE LIBERTY

Izetta Jewell appears with the Bishop Players at Ye Liberty Playhouse for the final times this afternoon and evening. "The Girl of the Golden West," the celebrated Belasco drama of early California life, in which the popular young leading lady is appearing for her final week with the stock company affords her the best acting opportunity she has ever had with the company and the general opinion seems to be that in the role of "the girl" she does the best work of her career.

Tomorrow evening Isabelle Fletcher, another of Oakland's former stage favorites, inaugurates a limited season with the company, when their attraction will be "Wildfire," the popular comedy in which Lillian Russell was seen here the season before last.

When Miss Fletcher steps on the stage at Ye Liberty tomorrow evening it will mark her first appearance here for nearly three years, and the great number of friends and admirers made by her during her former engagements at Ye Liberty are preparing to give her an ovation that promises to be the greatest demonstration of its kind in the history of Oakland theatricals.

For no one can dispute the fact that no actress has ever been held in higher esteem by the playgoers of this side of the bay than Isabelle Fletcher.

In selecting "Wildfire" for her opening week Manager Bishop did so not only to afford the popular leading lady unlimited scope for the display of her acknowledged talents, but because of the fact that Miss Fletcher has played the leading role in the comedy many times before and considers it one of her finest accomplishments. The play in itself is a most attractive one, as well, and with the superb cast and mounting Manager Bishop promises it shall receive next week should prove a most popular offering.

The play takes its name from a race-horse, "Wildfire," owned by Mrs. Barington, a wealthy young widow. But her ownership of the horse is known only to herself and the stable proprietor under whose colors it competes. The plot of the piece hinges on the attempt of an unscrupulous bookmaker named Duffy to clean up a fortune for himself by having "Wildfire" "pulled" and an inferior gallop to win. He bribes Wildfire's jockey to ride to lose if he does not see a white handkerchief waved at a crucial stage of the contest, but the scheme is discovered by Mrs. Barington, and she spoils it by plucking the handkerchief from Duffy's pocket and waving it herself.

That is the "big" scene of a comedy replete with interesting situations and bright dialogue. There are two actors for the role of the widow—John Garrison, a rational-minded lover of horses, and Fred Sanderson, an automobiling enthusiast, and of course the former wins. Miss Fletcher will be surrounded by an exceedingly fine cast in "Wildfire" next week. Bath Taylor will be seen as a vivacious younger sister of Mrs. Barington, Maribel Seymour has a splendid comedy role as a colored maid, and Henry Sumner as Matt Donovan, the trainer, will supply his share of comedy as well. Walker Graves appears as Garrison, Edward Fielding as an importation from England, Andrew Bennison as the automobiling enthusiast, and the rest of the cast is equally as competent and adequate scene surroundings will be provided.

"Wildfire" continues for all of next week, with popular matinees on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday, after which Miss Fletcher will be seen as "Sweet Klitty Bellairs."

MACDONOUGH

Certain critics are sometimes wont to observe that in the things of the stage as in all other fields, "there's nothing new under the sun." The observation is frequently, all too frequently, well founded, but occasionally a play strikes across the dramatic horizon in bold relief, framing the aged playgoer and critic by its very novelty.

Such a one is "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," the new comedy in which Mrs. Fiske has recently scored such a pronounced New York success and in which she is to appear at the Macdonough tomorrow evening. The play was produced in New York early in April and won its success entirely upon its merits, as its author was absolutely unknown, his name never before having appeared upon a play-bill. Popular expectation in advance concerned itself, quite naturally, with a play such as Mrs. Fiske had usually been identified with, and the first night audience was at first surprised and then immediately delighted to find "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh" the lightest play in which the leader of the American stage has ever appeared; a rollicking, whole-souled comedy, in which laugh followed laugh with the rapidity of shots from a sailing gun. The gloom which had encompassed the Lyceum theater throughout the season—every former production there having failed—was dispelled before the first act was half over, and the house fairly rocked with merriment from curtain to curtain.

Alan Dale, Anton Davies, Charles Darnott, Adolph Klabner, Ronald Wolf and others of that so-hard-to-please critical brigade, unanimously voted the play a commanding joy and doctored their hats to the hitherto unknown author.

Much as the playwright had done, however, far more did Mrs. Fiske do! It was really her superb characterization that carried the play so securely into the haven of favor. So many triumphs had been won by this wonderful woman in so many widely differentiated roles that the world had come to be no other artistic worlds for her to conquer, but her "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh" showed her in a new and amazing light.

ETHEL BARRYMORE

Ethel Barrymore will be seen at the Macdonough Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, when Charles Frohman will present her in a double bill that is rich in promise. This bill will consist of "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire," to be followed by the playlet, "The Twelve-Pound Look." Both plays are from the pen of the Scotch dramatist, James Matthew Barrie, whose charming contributions to the stage have endeared him to the theaters of two countries. The bill was Mrs. Barrymore's chief offering during her long season in New York and the success which it won there it duplicated in Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston. It may be said of this double bill that it is notable for its strength, its satire and its genuine appeal to the human sympathies and emotions. Further than this the two plays show Miss Barrymore in roles in which she rises to distinction.

"The Twelve-Pound Look," with which the bill closes, is alone a novel, but comes baffled as that rarity of rarities, the perfect play. It had its original production of Charles Frohman's Repertory theater in London a year ago and made a most pronounced hit. In a certain sense the work is an amplification of Robert Browning's dramatic poem, "Youth and Art." Its man is an individual who has fought for worldly success and won it. He has subordinated everything in his life to "getting on" and is intoxicated with his success. His first wife could not stand this "success" and stifled her. She suffocated in an atmosphere where all was mere dross. If they had ever had any of the hardships that fall to most people, if anything had ever happened that would call for that bond of sympathy that must exist between husband and wife all might have been well. But it never happened. There were no children. The wife, a woman of ideals, craved her independence. Earning twelve pounds she bought a typewriting machine and went out into the world to earn her own living. The play treats of the failure of success as well as the success of failure. Miss Barrymore portrays the typist with strength and truth, and her most artistic interpretations. Charles Dalton will be the man and Mrs. Sam Southern his second wife.

IDORA

A new extravaganza, called "A Night in Japan," even more beautiful than the military spectacle of last week, is the big free attraction now at Idora park. During the past two weeks the novel free offering has been packing Idora park during the evenings, for the ballets have proved the most interesting show ever presented at Oakland's big park.

Ten thousand lanterns are used in the decorative and illuminating scheme for "A Night in Japan." The scene and music are more elaborate than in the military spectacle of last week. A view of Nippon with Japanese pagodas and a quaint bridge is seen in the foreground and Mount Fuji in the distance, makes the Japanese extravaganza one of the prettiest spectacles ever witnessed on an outdoor stage. One of the features is a lantern ballet, in which the thirty girls dressed in kimono perform a drill. A waltz number called "A Maid in the Moon" is particularly effective. The entire ballet is a miniature comic opera.

there being a plot and a number of characters running through it. In the second half of the program some new specialties in the way of songs and dances are introduced. The famous flag number, one of the features of the last week, will be retained for one more week.

Weber's prize band, the current musical organization now dispensing afternoon and evening concerts from the shell, has won the unanimous favor of the critical Idora audiences. Popular music, especially when played in the unique and novel method adopted by Weber, scores a hit every time. His program for today contains many new selections calculated to please the lover of cultured music and popular devotees alike. Idora's many other attractions from the Panama canal to the skating rink continue to afford amusement for thousands every day in the week.

ALCAZAR

There are many concessions to modernity in "The Merchant of Venice" which will be presented to Alcazar audiences next Monday evening and throughout the week, with Theodore Roberts as Shylock. Florence Roberts as Portia, Thelma Morgan as Bassanio and the rest of the players appropriately bestowed. Mr. Roberts revised Shakespeare's book in accordance with his belief that the stage is gradually emerging from the umbra of tradition, that actors are using research rather than memory, and that the public are demanding more than the actor gives. Therefore his version of the great play is barren of old tricks and machinery that are retained in most of the other versions. The side speeches, the soliloquies, the visible shifting of scenes and the musical chords are eliminated.

This will not be Miss Roberts' first appearance as Portia in San Francisco, for about ten years ago she played the part and played it very well in the old Alcazar. Nor is the role of Bassanio strange to Mr. Morgan, who has run almost the entire Shakespearean gamut of romantic characters.

There are six acts in the play as it will be presented by the tri-star combination, and each of them will be most elaborately staged.

Four Daughters of Cuba's President Sail on an Odd Honeymoon Journey

NEW YORK, July 8.—When the steamer L. Providence sailed for Europe last week she had on board an odd wedding party. The four daughters of the president of Cuba—Manuela, Petronilla, Narcissa and Marina, were of the party. The husbands of Manuela and Petronilla made it a honeymoon trip. Manuela was married a little over a month ago, and Petronilla very recently.

When one of the Gomez girls married, President Taft sent her a bouquet. The Cubans made note of the fact that when Alice Roosevelt married, the people of Cuba gave her a present which cost them $25,000.

THE MONUMENTS OF EUROPE

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE
IN THE PLACE
VENDÔME - PARIS

On May 16 last with much ceremony and royal pomp King George of England and Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany unveiled in St. James park, in front of Buckingham palace, London, a magnificent national monument to their royal grandmother, Queen Victoria. Mr. Brock, an English sculptor, is responsible for the design of the monument. While he was not able for lack of funds, it is said, to carry out his original model in its entirety, the British government lacking courage to spend money freely on work of aesthetic importance, at the same time the work is pronounced by able critics to be a sane design well balanced in form, happy in line, and remarkably beautiful in detail.

The main feature of the memorial is naturally the statue of Queen Victoria in robes of state seated on a throne which faces the Processional Road leading to the new Admiralty arch. On the left of the throne is a figure of Truth, on the right Justice. On the other side of the pedestal and facing Buckingham Palace, is Motherhood. Above the throne are eagles of Empire, and on a smaller base figures of Courage and Constancy, the whole being terminated in an exquisitely modeled bronze figure of a winged Victory. Around the plinth is a wide circular platform approached back and front by flights of steps but the contemplated figures of Peace, Progress, Agriculture and Manufacture have not yet been added. Around the platform is a low wall with a frieze of nymphs and tritons, and below on each side is a basin into which water flows from an arch in the retaining wall.

RENAISSANCE SPIRIT.

The monument has been conceived in the truest Renaissance spirit. Brock has successfully avoided the fault which dogged many national monuments. He has not over-loaded his work with elaborate and florid detail or intricate imagery. The keynote he strikes is one of repose. It is appropriate that this should be the dominating feature of a monument which commemorates not only a mighty queen, but a woman whose strength rested in her quiet simplicity. How successful Brock has been in his design of the Victoria statue can perhaps best be judged by a brief review of some of the most celebrated and notable national monuments to sovereigns which enrich the other capitals of Europe.

The most famous completed national monument is that to the Emperor Wilhelm I., opposite the royal palace in the Unter den Linden, Berlin. Unveiled fourteen years ago, it is the admiration of the German people. Upon a pedestal 86 feet in height rises a colossal equestrian figure of the emperor, which is another 30 feet high. He is clad in a field cloak, and holds a marshal's baton in his right hand. His horse is led by Peace, a symbolism somewhat difficult to comprehend, for, if any empire has been founded upon war and conquest, it is that of modern Germany.

Its pedestal on its platform is set against a colonnade of coupled Ionic columns, and the corner pavilions bear enormous quadriga representing Prussia and Bavaria. The situation of the monument on the Spree is unfortunate. Many critics believe that the outline would have shown to better advantage against banks of foliage, and the buildings across the stream detract from the architectural massing. Reinhold Begas was the designer of this memorial and he is regarded as the cleverest German sculptor of our time.

Rauch's equestrian statue of Frederick the Great was erected in 1851. Its prime formalism agrees well with its subject. Artists have an odd way of interpreting the spirit of the people among whom they live and the difference between Rauch's statue set up when Berlin was the capital of a small state, and Begas' colossal erection unveiled in the center of a world-empire offers a text for more than one commentary.

COSTS $1,000,000.

The cost of the National Monument was $1,000,000. While referring to Berlin, the celebrated Siegesallee in the Tiergarten must not be forgotten. The Emperor carried out the scheme at his own expense in 1898-1901. Here we have thirty-two marble statues of his predecessors on the Prussian throne, close to the Neva and the buildings of the Admiralty, was executed by Falconet with the exception of the head by his daughter-in-law, Marie Collet. It was commenced by the Empress Catherine in 1772 and finished in 1785. Guides delight to tell the visitor that the sculptor's talent is displayed by the manner in which he has balanced the rearing horse upon its hind legs. This horse weighs sixteen tons, while the single block of granite forming the pedestal weighs 1500 tons.

monument to the Emperor William I. In the Unter Linden he is accompanied by Peace. In the Avenue of Victory he is flanked by busts of Bismarck and Von Moltke.

The splendid statue of Peter the Great, which stands in St. Petersburg, Russia, close to the Neva and the buildings of the Admiralty, was executed by Falconet with the exception of the head by his daughter-in-law, Marie Collet. There is another interesting memorial in St. Petersburg, raised by Alexander I. It is the largest monument in the world, 155 feet high, surmounted by a cross upon a piece of red granite is 34 feet high, and was originally 18 feet longer. The erection of this monument cost $2,000,000.

being laid by the present king in 1902, and it is not yet completed, the sculptor Querol being responsible for the earlier design. In which the high pedestal carrying the equestrian statue of the monarch was circled by a swirling mass of horsemen. This flamboyant idea seems to have been eliminated, and an architect, Jose Grasesse Riera, is at present in charge.

ART IS GRACEFUL.

Viennese art is always graceful. The monument to the Empress Marie Theresa, in front of the Imperial palace has much charm.

The Italian national memorial to King Victor Emmanuel was commenced in 1884, a site having been selected on the Capitoline Hill, Rome. It rises upon a platform, and the effect of the colonnade is almost overpowering.

In Madrid the monument to Alfonso XII, in El Retiro Park, has been the cause of constant anxiety. It was commenced in 1887, the first stone being laid by the present king in 1902, and it is not yet completed, the sculptor Querol being responsible for the earlier design. In which the high pedestal carrying the equestrian statue of the monarch was circled by a swirling mass of horsemen. This flamboyant idea seems to have been eliminated, and an architect, Jose Grasesse Riera, is at present in charge.

In Paris, the city of art, while there is nothing exactly analogous to the Victoria memorial owing to the course of history, the arches, such as the Arc de Triomphe and the Arc due Carrousel, the Portes St. Denis and St. Martin, together with the columns in the Place Vendôme and the Place de la République, do not come far from our scope. Then there is Dalou's "Triumph of the Republic," which is interesting not only because it is a masterpiece, but also for the reason that Dalou has had a tremendous influence upon the world's sculptors.

Gasoline 'Jag' Latest Excuse in New York

"They have a new one in New York, but it was imported from London," said Edward M. Rice of Gotham town, who was at the Raleigh. "This new one—pardon my slang—is called the gasoline jag, and claim is made that a chauffeur, or even owner of an automobile run by gasoline, can become drunk from the fumes of petrol or gasoline. A dizziness not unlike that produced by whiskey or champagne is often caused by gasoline fumes, and several times in London automobile drivers acted recklessly while driving, and on arrest always were released because they were drunk with gasoline fumes. Some of the New York drivers have quickly seized the excuse to avoid punishment, when really drunk from alcohol. Such a plea might go with a London magistrate, but I am afraid the New York magistrates are a bit too wise to be fooled by such an excuse, if made by one who displays symptoms of the 'regulation jag.'—Washington Post.

Where Women Hide Jewels

CHICAGO.—"Not one-fifth the jewels owned by Chicago people are kept in safety deposit vaults as might be expected," declared an officer of one of the best known Chicago safety deposit vaults. "In fact, even the persons who do rent boxes at the vaults seldom keep many of their valuable jewels there. I know one woman who is keeping her husband's life insurance policy in the vault and pays an annual rental for the box, while she keeps jewels valued at thousands of dollars in her own home. It's a mystery to me why more persons are not robbed of their valuables."

There is a woman of my acquaintance who keeps jewelry valued at close to $15,000 in an old trunk in her room. There is not even a lock on the trunk, for she was obliged to force this off one time when she mislaid her key. It has not even the quality of escaping notice by its worn appearance or obviousness.

"Were it left alone it might possibly escape and the woman would be ruined because of its prominence, but the woman has withdrawn even this hope by binding the thing up with so many ropes tied in the most complicated knots. She does not stop to think that an enterprising second story man could, in a few minutes, cut through those ropes and get at the jewels."

"Another woman conceals her jewel bag in the mattress of her bed. Old as this place is, the woman further invites robbery by neglecting to sew up the hole in the cover, if she does so, merely bastes it up with thread that a burglar would notice twenty feet away. Another favorite place for 'secret drawers' is usually in bureau or pieces of the sort there are a number of long drawers with a couple of smaller ones at the top. These two small drawers make an enterprising furniture maker hit upon the plan of placing a concealed door, but this was all right twenty years ago, but don't you suppose burglars keep track of these things?"

"A woman of my acquaintance has the foot-post of her bed holled out and placed her jewelry there. This is not so easy to find as it might seem, for the head of the post is solid and even a burglar happened to think of removing that he finds nothing, for the woman has taken precautions to have a false top put in the wall and the door to the hollow part it is necessary to unscrew the part under the removable head."

JILTED, HE HELD BRIDE'S TRUNK AS SECURITY

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Carpenter of Hollywood, successfully prosecuted a claim and delivery action before Justice Reeve yesterday and A. A. Eads was forced to give up Mrs. Carpenter's trunk, which she had detained.

The hearing brought out the fact that Eads and the woman had conducted other slightly in Kansas City and that they kept up a correspondence after he moved to Los Angeles which resulted in an engagement of marriage.

The girl had been in unfortunate circumstances financially and Eads sent her money for a ticket to come to this city where the wedding was to take place at once. She arrived and the trunk, stuffed with feminine gear, was sent to the house in which Eads was living.

The girl said yesterday that something strange in Eads' conduct made her suspect of her bargain; so she went immediately to friends in Hollywood. After a while she met Mrs. Carpenter, where Cupid seems to have worked well at close range, Carpenter wooed and won. But his wife, who was not a novice in working for wages, but each one for himself and what can be made by the best management of the store."

There Was a Key on Tap

LONDON.—One of the queerest society functions of the coronation season was given by Sir Philip Burne-Jones, the painter, and Sir Richard Jones, the architect, which was remodelled for the occasion to resemble an atelier in the Quarter Latin.

It was styled "small and jolly," and was intended to be a bohemian contrast to the usual society parties. All the chairs were removed and there was no floral decoration.

Formal receptions were dispensed with and the guests huddled on the floor on rugs, on the staircases or in the back garden, the men smoking "church-wardens" and the women cigarettes if they wished.

If they wanted refreshments they had to help themselves from a big cask of lager beer which stood in the corner of the room wreathed with greens. It was a free and easy affair, all quaffing beer and joining in the chorus of the "Drinking Song."

But the supper, somewhat inconsistently, was one of epicurean delicacy. It was served on the floor or the stairs, or wherever there was room to put a plate.

A very distinguished company, who left all their tiaras and crowns at home, included the Duchess of Marlborough, the Duchess of Somerset, the Duchess of Rutland, Lady Betty Balfour, Miss Violet Asquith, Mrs. A. Astor, the Duke of Somerset, Lord and Lady Drogheda, Lady Elcho, Sir Edward Poynter, Mrs. Jack Leslie, Miss Maxine Elliott and Miss Jane Genes.

Gentle Art of Attracting Customers Explained by Clever Woman

"So far as I can judge I owe my success in keeping a country store to those two rocking chairs and a few fashion magazines as much as to anything else," said a college woman who up to four years ago taught school in a southern city.

"The climate in the south didn't agree with me, but I wouldn't agree to leave my school until I was in such bad health that the doctors told me I must give up teaching for a few years. I was up to my neck in books and I was up to my neck in nothing to keep me busy at home and in a small village there are not many business opportunities. When I was in school this story moved to town and offered his stock for sale people thought my illness had affected my brain when I decided to buy him out and keep the store going. I didn't expect to make much more than expenses, but I knew it was better for me than sitting at home and waiting for some one to go back and forth a dozen times a day without overexerting myself."

"Once I took it over, however, I began to think of means of attracting customers. I felt sure the people about who wouldn't go to the city to shop if they could get the article they wanted nearer home, especially during the summer and winter months, when all hands and animals were needed on the farm."

"I was quick enough to see that the stock carried by the former shopkeeper didn't give either the styles or qualities of goods desired by farmers' wives or daughters. Deciding on more up to date styles and qualities in dress goods made me consult the fashion magazines. Then I began to think of other new attractions to draw the women to my store."

"I didn't talk politics with the men. I thought I would see what a few magazines that carried the latest news would do. I began with a subscription for one month to two weekly magazines and two Sunday papers. It didn't take long for me to know that Mondays and Saturdays were the best days of the week for both of me and those papers. I began with one in the habit of making weekly trips to town to get to my store. Of course, the same as they would have bought in town, but it was having the papers and magazines that caused them to give up the longer trip. It wasn't often that I didn't have one or more customers in the papers. Neither was it often that I had the trouble of opening those papers. To give them a place where they could read the news as well as look at the latest fashions, I cut off one corner of the papers and put them in a box in the rear of the store. The men were happy enough to sit or stand on the store piazza, but the women didn't like such publicity. EXCITEMENT ON A WHALER

HAULING IN THE WHALE BY MEANS OF CAPSTANS AND CABLES

NO true sportsman fond of big game will ever regret a summer spent with the Newfoundland whalers, lion hunting in Africa and tiger stalking in India both doubtless have their dangers and fascinations, but whaling even if the participant is only a spectator, has an excitement and uncertainty about it all its own that lingers in the memory for a lifetime.

Unfortunately the end of the sport is not far distant unless the fisheries departments of the governments of the world, who have been in correspondence with each other in reference to the matter, take some steps to save the whale from extinction.

It may not be known generally, but it is a fact that many varieties of the whale are now as extinct as the buffalo, and unless the remnants be protected from slaughter they will, it is feared, be altogether exterminated.

The whale is a mammal and not a fish; that is to say it is a warm-blooded animal which breathes air instead of water, drowns if submerged too long, brings forth its young alive and nourishes it with milk from its own body. The largest of the family is the sulphur-bottom whale. Specimens measuring ninety-seven feet in length have been killed. Such a creature would weigh 110 to 120 tons. A fair number of these creatures still exist in the Pacific ocean, though they are now being killed off very rapidly. They have been saved hitherto because of their swiftness in the water and the comparatively small yield of whalebone.

Then there is the bowhead, also called the Greenland or Polar whale, which inhabits the waters round the north pole. This species is now very scarce. It attains a length of from forty-five to fifty-five feet, and is uncommonly rich in both whalebone and oil. A good specimen will yield as much as 275 barrels of oil and 3000 pounds of whalebone.

RIGHT WHALE EXTINCT.

The right whale, slightly larger than the bowhead, is now virtually extinct. A quarter of a century ago it was found in large numbers in both the North and South Atlantic oceans. The whale generally seen by passengers crossing the Atlantic is the humpback species, which attains a length of from forty-five to sixty feet. Then there is the finback of the North Atlantic coast, which attains a length of sixty feet, yields little oil and is difficult to kill. In the Pacific ocean there is the California gray whale often found in comparatively shallow water, but savage and dangerous. It attains a length of about forty-five feet.

The world has no idea of the varied use to which the whale is now put by the enterprising Newfoundlanders. The Janinae which fringes his mouth becomes the "whalebone" of commerce; the fatty coat which encases his body is converted into high-grade oil; the choicest portions of the "meat" which forms his carcass are transmuted into human food; his great bony skeleton is sealed and steamed and made into unbreakable crockeryware; less valuable flesh is turned into extract of beef, liquid and solid; the blood and juices are manufactured into glue; the milk of the female is used in making condensed milk, and all the refuse becomes a fertilizer. An adult whale yields about 45,000 pounds of edible meat.

Norway and Newfoundland, on each side of the Atlantic, are the only places in the world where whaling by modern methods is carried on. The big whalers are "hunted," not by rowboats, but by clipper steamships, small but speedy crafts of 100 tons, with twin screws and able to make thirteen knots. They can turn in their length so as to dodge the enraged whales which attack them when harpooned, and their speed is necessary to fit them for chasing the unwieldy creatures as they gambol about in the waves. Instead of the harpoon cast from a man's hand, as formerly, a bomb-lance is fired from a cannon on the steamer's bow, which is filled with explosive matter that discharges through a time-fuse. It explodes inside the whale's body, so that the "fish" dies almost instantly. But if it misses a vital part the injury is not fatal and the whale may linger for hours, until another shot is fired into it to give the quetus.

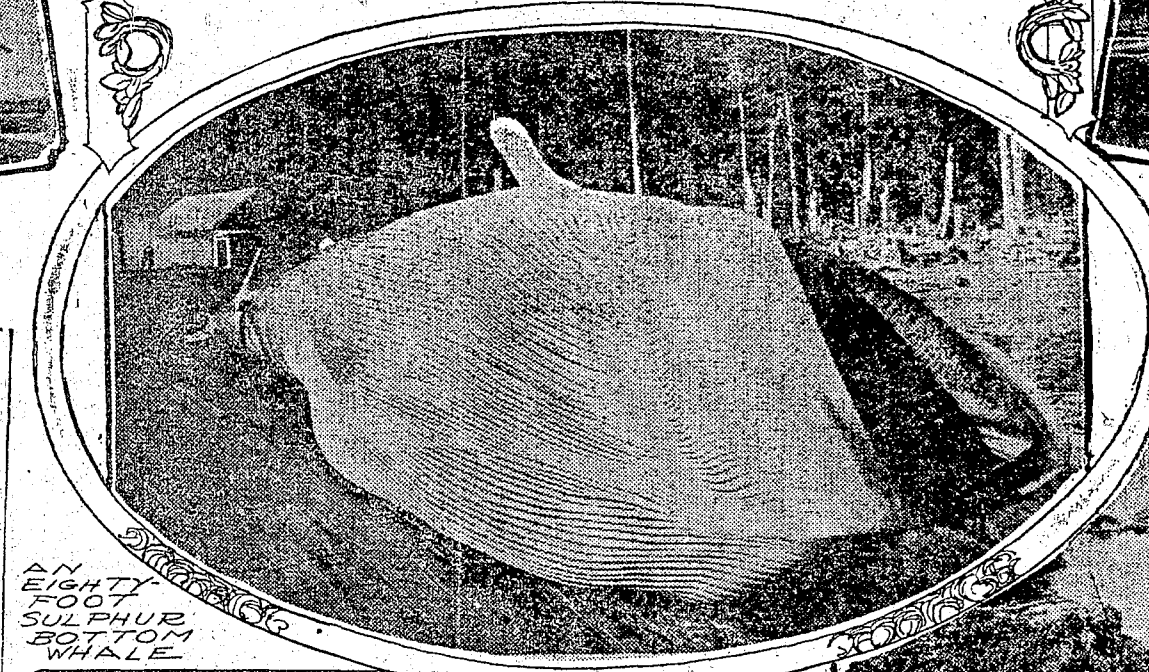

FOUR A DAY.

In fine weather it is not uncommon for a steamer to kill three or four in a day, which she buoys up as they die, and secures in the evening, towing them to land, where the factories or refineries are established in which the creature are converted into commercial products.

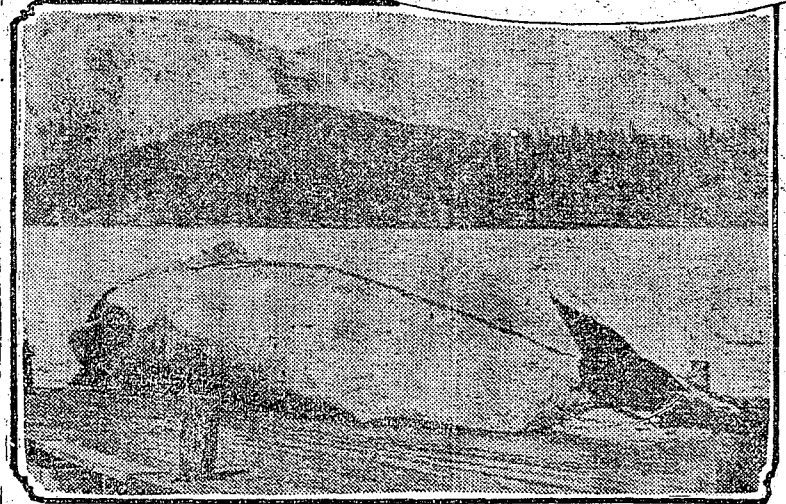

When whales are plentiful and there is a chance of a second kill the same day a novel practice is adopted to save the first. The expansion of the flesh, where the bomb enters closes the orifice again, and the crew bore a hole with a large auger through the firm blubber and fishy back. A pipe is then inserted in this, and the ship's engine pumps the carcass full of air. The hole is plugged with a wooden stopper and the whale is an inflated gasbag, so to speak. It is next cast loose, one of the crew, in a boat, being left with it to beat off the sharks, which soon surround the dead monster, and, if not prevented, would tear it in pieces, when, on the air escaping, it would sink. Not infrequently the chase of these leviathans is attended with incidents of thrilling interest.

On one occasion the "Viking," one of the newest whalers sighted a huge bull finback, the speediest and gamiest of the big "fish," sped away at top speed through the ocean, towing the ship after him by the line that held the harpoon. Then, finding that this did not relieve him, he "sounded," or dived straight down into the murky depths, giving the white sails of the ship a glimpse of the ship rolling bulwarks under.

The stout manila, especially woven for this work, whirled through the haws-pipe as if a locomotive was tearing it out, and the friction so heated the wood and iron grooves that they had to be shut with buckets of sea water. After descending for hundreds of fathoms the whale was forced to return again to breathe, and shot to the surface at lightning speed, hurling himself clear out of the water for his whole length, as if thrown up by some volcanic eruption in the depths, bellowing with rage the while, so as to be heard for many miles and churning the sea into froth with the agonized blows of his powerful tail.

UGLY AS ELEPHANT.

When he emerged it was seen that the harpoon had been deflected, and had hit him in the grizzly part near the tail, leaving him little the worse, and for hours of his life he was being as "ugly" as a rogue elephant. This he soon

THE OLD CORN BROOM

Brooms are "going out," too—the old hand-power kind made of broom-corn, says a writer in Success Magazine. Our best families have taken to vacuum cleaners, office buildings go in for soft, brushy brooms made of bristles. The sale of the old-fashioned brooms is on the decline. The farmers of the broom-corn country in Illinois swear they will raise no more of their product until the manufacturers assure them better prices than they have received in recent years and the broom-makers can't do that because they are already administering to their perishing business. Even an infant industry requires less coddling than one which has passed its prime.

packers to enter this market successfully would be to send competent Portuguese-speaking representatives with a complete line of samples. It would also be most advisable to open a head office or distributing house in Rio de Janeiro, which house should carry a stock of such goods as might prove suitable for the Brazilian market. Supplies could then be delivered to the dealers in the various cities with far less difficulty and delay to such dealers than if the goods were ordered by them direct from the manufacturers in the United States. Moreover, if provision dealers in Bahia and elsewhere could get supplies from Rio de Janeiro at short notice and with no difficulties about duties, etc., it seems only reasonable to suppose that such dealers would often send small orders to the office in Rio de Janeiro, whereas they would not send similar orders to the manufacturers in the United States. These small orders, individually insignificant, would in the aggregate amount to a trade well worth having.

'Hamlet' in Seven Hours, as Played by Japs

To realize English dramatic art on the Japanese stage is no small undertaking, and "Hamlet," as given last night at the Tokio-ku-za, was quite remarkable, as neither Dr. Tsubouchi, the translator and adapter of the play, nor the actors themselves have ever seen Shakespeare according to the traditions of Western drama, says the Japanese Advertiser.

From the point of view of the foreigner in the audience, to whom "Hamlet" is a well known story, it is not a little disappointing to find most of the traditions of the English stage swept away. The classical English and poetical lines are household words are entirely missing, lost in another language. Try as he will he cannot reconcile himself to the clash between the costumes and setting, and the ghost scene was also impressive, although instead of a six-footer clad entirely in armor wearing a helmet, the ghost at the Tokoku-za last night was short and wore a long veil and his face was suggestive of a No mask.

The audience exhibited that nervousness and restlessness at a first night performance when they feel that something new is being tried on them. To many persons the story of "Hamlet" was unfamiliar as a piece of literature, and they found it difficult to follow the meaning. And as it was so entirely different from the accustomed plays it was scarcely to be wondered at if now and then some one went to sleep or the oba san's gaze wandered often to the ornate golden dome of the theater. Even newspaper artists nodded over their sketches. On the other hand, university students and well known authors and thinkers were to be seen paying the closest attention and referring to the book translation as done by Dr. Tsubouchi.

To see "Hamlet" at the Tokoku-za is like attending a Wagnerian opera. It lasts so long. One of Dr. Tsubouchi's ideals is that Shakespeare should be acted as nearly as possible as it was in the day of Shakespeare, and in the matter of duration he has certainly succeeded, for the three acts and thirteen scenes take more than seven hours to produce. This is a contrast to the three and a half hours as most commonly taken for a Shakespearean play in the West. It would not be reasonable to expect this young actor to come to the part with a broad conception, but to say the least Mr. Doi did not disappoint. He has not all the we could wish, at least it is evident that he has ideals of his own and ship, made for it with a vicious bellow and redoubled energy, heaving through the water at a twenty-knot rate, his whole body quivering with rage. Speedily he swung round and round and, as he backed it again, the ship was sent out of his way, and thus the struggle continued hour after hour right into the night, while the ship with her bulk of hull, her lading of coal and equipments, and her crew of ten men, was dragged along behind him at a speed of about twelve knots an hour, though her engines were reversed at equal speed.

For quite a time the monster would persist in his efforts to destroy the ship, but without avail, and then, more furious still, and bellowing madly, would speed away again for miles, careering along the surface of the water and heaving a very fiend's tattoo with the trip-hammer blows of his powerful tail. Every now and again he would leap out of the brine his full length, curve himself with rage and agony, and fall back again with a thundering crash.

Frequently during the night he renewed the attack upon the ship, and the weary-eyed and perill-racked crew had to strain every nerve to escape the wiles of his sturdy, relentless enemy. Each hour as it passed showed him in full career, baffled by his unknown but terrifying pursuer, yet game to the last. As the dawn of a new day broke, he was seen to be less active, but as day turned again to night, he renewed his efforts to get her. In sombre grey of the morning, men and whale were worn out, the former from anxiety, the latter from the almost incredible exertions he had made. He was still towing the ship, but at a gradually lessening pace, and soon the "Viking" fitted another harpoon, ran towards him, and fired it with deadly aim this time.

When the skipper took his reckoning he found himself one hundred miles to sea, the whale having towed the ship that distance, and probably covered thrice that space in his sinuous movements. It took the boat all day to tow its prize home, but there was the satisfaction that the "fish" was the biggest ever killed in Newfoundland.

attempts to carry them out. It is clear that he has made a close study of Booth, and his makeup closely resembles the great American Hamlet. In the actors' scene he brought forth the first real applause of the evening, and his outburst of madness to hide his feeling and desire for revenge was truly a fine bit of acting.

Ophelia was played by Miss Matsui. Her conception of madness was truly Japanese, and lacked the deep melancholy and abandonment to sorrow that the part calls for. Her voice was too loud and she was monotonous in her song. On the contrary, Mr. Togi, who took the part of the King as well as the Grave Digger, was excellent in the comedy and song at the grave. This bit of acting was done with fine effect. Mrs. Kamiyama made a very good impression as the Queen, being tall and graceful and most natural in her stage manner. Mr. Kato's Polonius was well taken, although his foreign old man's strut sometimes amused the audience.

If the ideas and ideals of other countries which have made a deep and lasting impression on other people are to affect the Japanese people, it is only through such presentations as last night's that it can be effected. Strange!

and often ludicrous as the combination of the two standards of art may be at present, the future of the Japanese stage must be furnished with many adaptations from the Western stage, and Dr. Tsubouchi has made a remarkably good beginning. His efforts may sometimes be over the heads of his audience, but he has ample opportunity for educating the public up to the plays of foreign extraction, and in spite of the existing conservatism which clings to the old plays, they, like many other things of old Japan, must give way to a new order of things. And "Hamlet" is an entering wedge.

MILLIONAIRE'S SON CROSSES LAND ON OWN RESOURCES

NEW YORK.—Harry W. Newman, heir to millions and scion of a prominent New York family, is winding up the final stage of a year's period of probation, for which the stakes are $5000, which he expects his stern father and equally austere uncle will hand him when he reaches New York. Newman left Portland last night on board the Elks' special with a cent in his pocket and with a job as third or fourth cook. That is how he will make his expenses across the continent in order to return to the bosom of his family and to win the wages of $5000 in gold.

Seldom has a young lad, inexperienced in the world at large and never having been forced to face life's trials and battles, been put to a keener test of pluck, nerve and ambition, than has fallen to Young Newman's lot. "It has taken a devil of a lot of will power not to turn back," he said as he swung on board the train last night, "but I'm going to win."

Newman does not deny that the disdaining which he has been put through has in a sense been merited. His father is a self-made man, and worked his way up from the bottom until he got into the oil business and won a fortune running into millions. Now pater is a man of affairs in Wall street, and he had ideas of what his son and heir should do for himself.

Young Harry was a happy-go-lucky chap and didn't care for anything, and so when on July 6, 1910, his father said to him: "Son, you've got to cut loose and show what you can do." Harry replied, "All right, daddy, what's your idea?" "Merely this: If you strike out for yourself, cross the continent and come back to New York, pay all your own way, not beg or borrow a cent, and not return here in less than one year, I will give you $5000."

pay his way by trolley from the end of the run to Niagara Falls and Buffalo. At Buffalo he hit for the steamer wharves and quickly landed a job with the steward of the steamer-bound for Duluth. From Duluth to St. Paul he dug into his meager earnings and paid his fare, landing in the latter city dead broke and hungry.

Across from St. Paul to Seattle he served in the kitchen of a Great Northern diner and arrived in Seattle last September. There his first move was to start out in business and he opened the Pacific Coast Sales Company by discreet use of letters of recommendation from his family and other influential friends in the east had given him. He made fairly good money, and with a little nest egg cashed away he got a job on a big German liner and made a cruise down the coast to San Francisco and to San Pedro, and wintered in the South. He returned to Seattle and went back with the concern which he had started, and things didn't go very good, and he was soon "on his uppers" again. He knocked about Seattle doing odds and ends until the first of this month, when he went to the Milwaukee railroad office, and through letters was given a job with the dining-car crew of the Elks' special.

Newman will reach New York four days after his year is up, and he has assurance by letters from home that he will be welcomed with all the "fatted calf" luxuries any wandering prodigal could desire, and also that he will be set up in business for himself into whatever line he chooses to follow.

"I wouldn't take $5000 for the experience I have had the past year," he said before leaving Portland last night; "but I want to say that a little piece of that $5000 that's coming to me on the bet would look mighty good just now."

: HER LETTERS SIZZLED :

CHICAGO.—As a sample of what William H. Gilbert, millionaire lumberman, may expect at the suit for $100,000 instituted against him by Mrs. Lillian V. Hamer, former Congress Hotel cashier, two letters, signed in his name and couched in ardent terms, were made public by Mrs. Hamer's lawyer. The letters follow:

My Dear Lillian: I am lonesome for you. It seems a month since last Tuesday. I do not know what is wrong with me. I am thinking of you all ways. I wish that you were with me. I am going cruising tomorrow. I will miss you. Let me know when you intend to visit Milwaukee. Are things going all right in Chicago? My darling, the nights are long and the days longer, each day an age. I fear lest you forget me, although I am sure you love your own

Then came the weeping of Gilbert's ardor and another letter written in quite another vein. The following is said to be an excerpt from the last letter Mrs. Hamer received:

"I receive a letter from your attorney, asking me for an appointment. I do not wish to see you. I am going on a trip to Texas. Name your price and I will settle. You had better spare the publicity."

This letter is said to have been written shortly after Gilbert informed Mrs. Hamer that his physicians had advised him not to marry.

What It Costs to Live in Brazil

The following is a fair estimate of the cost of living for a family of four in the best section of Bahia, Brazil, the family to live well and comfortably, but without extravagance or entertaining:

rents, $150; servants, $30; fuel for cooking, $10; lighting, $10; water, $5; and laundry, $25; total for one month, $305, of $3600 a year. As furnished house can be rented in Bahia, it is necessary to add to the foregoing estimate a proportionate share of the expense of furnishing a house, which costs, at the very last, 100 per cent more than in the United States.

The average prices for provisions paid by the better classes in Bahia are about as follows: Per kilo (2.2046 pounds)—beef 22 cents, pork 40 cents, mutton 50 cents, ham $1.65, jerked beef 36 cents, fresh fish 50 cents, salted codfish 30 cents, bread 15 cents, flour 13 cents, sugar 20 cents, coffee 60 cents, tea $3.50, sugar 11 cents, land 46 cents, cheese $2; per liter (1.0567 quarts)—milk 13 cents, corn meal 13 cents, beans 13 cents, chickens cost 55 cents each, ducks 80

CARS RUN BY WIND

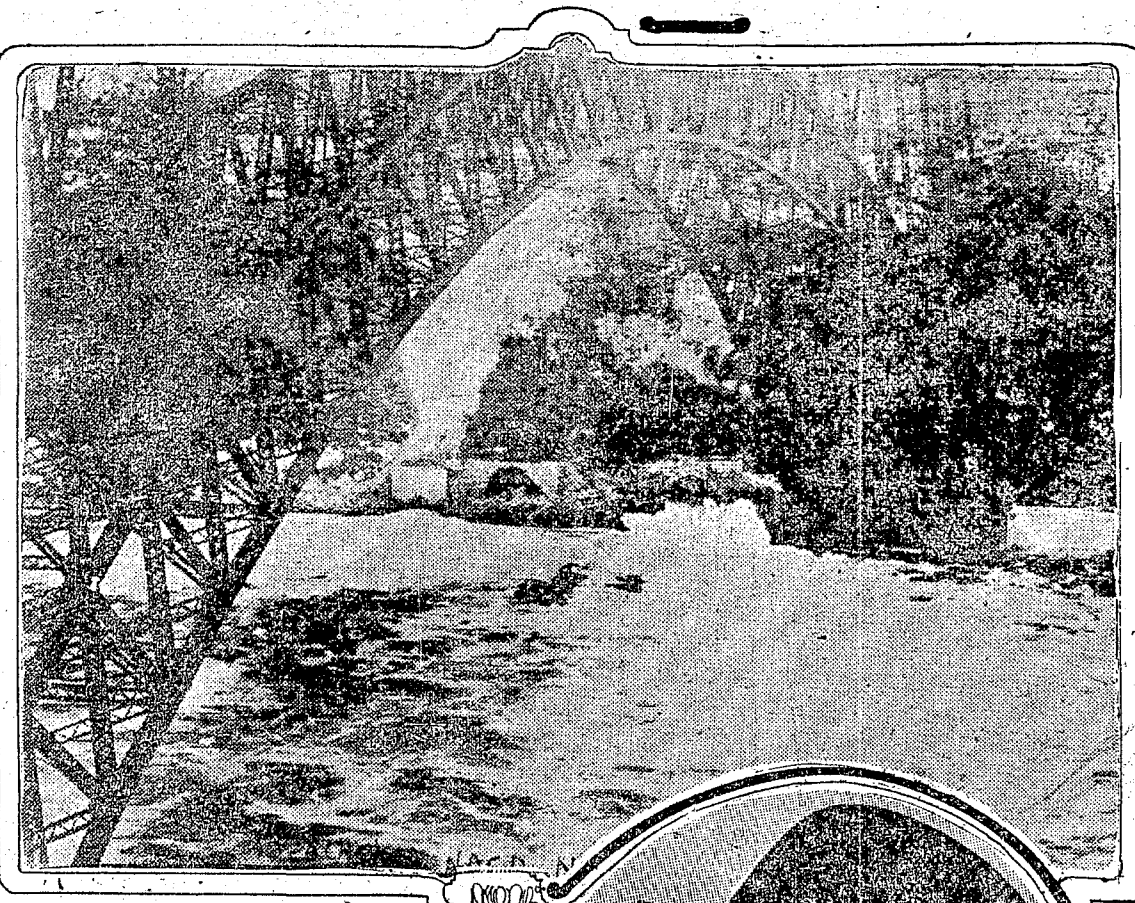

In Chile are several remarkable short railways which utilize the trade winds as motive power, the cars being equipped with sails. The idea of the sailing cars is credited to an engineer in charge of important government work. Impressed by the fact that a stiff breeze could be depended upon for several hours every morning and evening he built several cars and provided each of them with a sail. The idea proved so practical, according to the Railway and Engineering Review, that a number of such railways soon followed, the cheapness and practical worth making a strong appeal. The speed attainable by the sailing cars is said to be as high as thirty-five miles an hour, but this may be checked to any extent desired by the manipulation of the brakes. The trade winds blow with clock-like regularity.

LINCOLN BEACHEY AND 'TOM' SOPWITH TO BE STARS OF AVIATION MEET, TO WHICH UNCLE SAM WILL SEND MANY ARMY EXPERTS

'Smuggling by Aeroplane' Will Be Feature of Chicago Conests

American Birdman's Daring Flight Over Niagara Falls, Death-Dodger

AVIATOR LINCOLN BEACHEY, who recently flew over Niagara Falls and under the great arch that spans the Niagara river.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The most sensational flight ever made in this country was that of Lincoln Beachey on June 27, when he flew over Niagara Falls in an aeroplane. He flew over lower Niagara under the big bridge and high over the American falls. The ship seemed to skim the water as he made the bridge passage midway between two abutments and about 75 feet below the lowest steel girders of the structure. Passing the bridge, Beachey continued on down the gorge almost to the whirlpool rapids, clearing the water by not more than thirty feet, his biplane which was partly disabled, tipping unevenly in the peculiar air currents encountered in the deep pocket.

There was a cry of relief from the crowd when they saw the biplane at last soar in the higher altitude, and, clearing the wooded Canadian bank by a narrow margin, sail away in safety.

This flight of Beachey will rank with the mountain flying of the European aviators.

"It was the most exciting trip of my life," he said after landing at Niagara Falls, Ontario.

UNUSUAL FEATS.

Beachey and "Tom" Sopwith, the young Englishman who flew after a liner bound out from New York harbor, to deliver a parcel to passengers, stand both perform unusual and spectacular feats at the International Aviation Meet, to be held on Grant Park, Chicago, August 13-20.

Immediately after his return from the ocean liner Sopwith wrote to the Association in Chicago saying that he would like to deliver a package to one of the lake passenger steamships outbound from Chicago, merely in order to demonstrate his control of an aeroplane.

Beachey plans to make several inter-city flights from Chicago, aside from the regular program and on his own responsibility, and will probably visit Milwaukee, Michigan City and St. Joseph, on the lake and Springfield, South Bend and Burlington, Indiana.

Plans for the aviation grounds on the lake are nearly complete, and one of the most pleasing features to the public will be the fact that out of 50,000 seats which will be erected in the stadium, one-half will be free for occupancy by the public.

Included in the total of seats will be about 10,000 grand stand seats; 6,000 chairs, 50,000 stadium seats, while the remainder of the seating space will be taken up by about 500 boxes, each containing six chairs.

EXPERTS PRESENT.

President Taft has assured the presence of army, navy and signal corps aviation experts and aside from these will be present officials of the Department of the Interior.

The fact that these officials will be present brings to light a new and startling feature which has had its birth coincident with aviation. Aside from the necessity of aeroplanes and airships for use in time of war, Uncle Sam and all of the nations must prepare to combat another evil—smuggling.

The various customs houses can combat the smuggler who arrives on an ocean vessel or on a train. Revenue cutters can combat the smuggler in the motor, steam, sail and row-boat.

Frontier patrols can combat the horseman or pedestrian who seeks to bring dutiable goods in without paying the freight, but something new must be devised to combat the aviator who chooses to fly from one country to another, perhaps many miles beyond the frontier, with smuggled goods.

One of the articles for which the customs officials catch closely is jewelry, especially diamonds set and unset. Any article of great value which may be packed in a small area now comes within the ken of the birdman smuggler, and the customs officials are alive to the danger.

ALL KINDS OF AIR CRAFT.

At the coming meet will be all sorts and conditions of aircraft, some of which will be especially designed for speed and maneuverability. These will be most closely examined.

Just as the noiseless and exceedingly swift power boat is now utilized by customs officials to catch the smuggler by water, so will the most fully equipped and swiftest aeroplanes have to be used to catch the air smuggler.

It is apparently only a matter of time when every great nation will have its mosquito fleet of aeroplanes with which to pursue and catch them, and there will be presented the exciting race of the small revenue cutter airship darting after the reckless, speedy lawbreaker.

Mexico and the United States have already provided a clause in their treaty agreement by which an aviator desiring to fly from one country to the other must take out clearing papers, but this alone will not stop the deliberate smuggler any more than the law regarding boats has stopped the smuggler by water.

Through Congress, California, New York and Pennsylvania have already taken up the question of laws governing aviation. It has remained for Senator A. J. Gorman, of the Fourth Chicago senatorial district, to raise a point which is broader and reaching farther, and will probably prove more efficacious than any previously voiced.

TO LICENSE AVIATORS.

At the next session of the Illinois legislature, Senator Gorman will introduce a bill providing for the licensing of aviators, registration of machines, and the appointment of a state board which shall examine prospective licensed aviators in various ways.

This board is to consist of not less than seven members, composed as follows:

Two physicians who shall examine the applicant with especial reference to the condition of his heart, lungs and nervous system.

Two engineers who shall examine him with regard to his practical knowledge of mechanics and ability to operate the motor or motors furnishing the lifting and propelling power.

Three or more officials of recognized nautical sciences, clubs or associations who shall examine him with regard to his ability to actually operate his machine in flight.

"The board," he said, "are face to face with legal problems which must be solved."

The old doctrine of eminent domain certainly cannot apply to the air, nor can the expression of doctrine, "free as the air," be abridged.

"Yet it is certainly within the power of the state to declare that a person or persons shall not pollute the atmosphere with gas and soot laden smoke, which are breathed and fall upon alike the just and unjust, rich and poor."

POWERS OF STATE.

"Just so it is within the power of the state to safeguard the lives and property of its citizens by wise and intelligent restrictions regarding anything else that goes into the air by the power of man."

"Aviation is in its infancy. It has tremendous possibilities and I believe that its progress may best be aided by prohibiting its abuse. Moreover it will be greatly aided by popular approval and equally retarded by popular disapproval and opposition."

"The science must go on. Undoubtedly there must be more or less of fatalities among the aviators themselves, for nothing great is accomplished without some sacrifice, but it is the right and duty of the state to safeguard the public as much as possible."

"Real aviators I am sure will heartily support this measure. I notice that Harold F. McCormick, chairman of the executive committee of the coming meet in Chicago has issued a statement that ignorance and carelessness will not be countenanced."

"A board of control will have full charge of the aviators and their machines. Each will be examined with equal care, and if either appears unfit to make a flight, it will be prohibited."

"The measure I propose to introduce is simply a broader exposition of the same view, aimed to protect the public and the real aviator from the fool who didn't know it was loaded."

It is certain that the coming of the airship has knocked to smithereens the old property right theory that possession extends from the center of the earth to the uttermost parts of the heavens.

Various suggestions have been offered to determine just how far into the air property right extends. One was that the extent upwards should be measured by the extent of flat ground below.

This is obviously impossible, for a man with a piece of ground 100 feet square may erect a building 200 or more feet high if he chooses to do so. And it would be absurd to say that a man with a square mile of land could claim the exclusive right to the air for one mile above his property.

It must be the duty of the state to provide wise regulations regarding the nature and extent of aerial navigation, and especially the qualifications of the aviators.

ANOTHER SURVIVOR OF LIGHT BRIGADE DIES

LONDON, July 8.—The death of James Lamb, aged 82, of Salford-road, Warrington, removes another of the dwindling band of survivors of the Light Brigade, who rode "Half a League onward" at Balaklava in the teeth of the Russian batteries.

Lamb was formerly in the Thirteenth Light Dragoons, and fought throughout the Crimean being granted a pension of £2 per day for wounds.

His widow, who is a venerable dame of 88, gave her evidence in a quavering voice, relating how she went through the Crimean war with her husband. She had a state pension of 5s. a week and also 3s. 6d. a week from the Patriotic and Crimean fund—£8. 6d. in all.

The coroner said he hoped that the old lady would be taken care of in some institution, and if she could be cared for in some way it would be very satisfactory.

TO BE AN OPTIMIST

HAMMOND, Indiana, July 8.—President Frank Nelson, of the local bank, gave Frank Coorse an old silver watch this morning which only ran when Coorse ran.

Coorse gave 15 cents to a jeweler to make the watch tick and sold it for $2. With the two dollars he bought a skin horse from a farmer. This he traded for an old buggy and two wheels. He then traded the two wheels for the body of a road cart and put his buggy wheels on the cart, trading the body of the buggy for a set of harness.

For this outfit a farmer traded him a blind bronco. Coorse did not know the bronco was blind until it ran away with him and another farmer thinking the bronco was a spirited animal and not knowing it was blind, gave him $50 for it. After Coorse had ridden the bronco he had raised the animal from a colt. Lowell will now match Coorse against any other trader for a purse.

LOOK TO BRITISH FOR MODERATION

Germans Declare Asquith Will Act Quietly in Province of Morocco.

BERLIN, July 8.—The Lokal Anzeiger makes what apparently is an inspired guess on Premier Asquith's declaration that a situation had arisen in Morocco through which British interests might be affected more directly than heretofore, and that Great Britain in whatever part she took in the matter would have due regard for the protection of those interests and the fulfillment of her treaty obligations toward France.

The paper takes a reassuring view of the English position, saying Asquith favors a policy of moderation and calm common sense, and that his statement indicates that the British government will pursue a more active policy than heretofore and be guided by the interests of Great Britain rather than by the Morocco entente.

The Russian ambassador called at the Foreign office and held a long talk with Baron von Kiderling-Wachter, the foreign secretary. He had been directed by Emperor Nicholas to inquire in a friendly spirit, concerning Germany's intention in Morocco.

DIES IN A GRAVE; LABORER ASPHYXIATED

LONDON, July 8.—How a man died in a grave was described at a Stoke Newington inquest on William Henry Spencer, 57, of Gravestree, who was overcome by poisonous gases in an open grave at Abney Park cemetery.

James Hazel, who assisted Spencer in his work, said that they were preparing a grave for a burial. It had been dug for some days before, and was over two feet wide, seven feet long, and from twenty to twenty-three feet deep. There were already two bodies in it, and there was a thin layer of sand over the two coffins.

Spencer went into the grave, and when witness went across to it ten minutes later he saw him sitting at the bottom. He shouted "Harry," and getting no answer, called for help. He went down into the pit himself, and suddenly became insensible, remembering nothing more until 7 p. m., when he was at home. There was the usual smell in the grave, nothing exceptional.

Alfred Prentice, another gravedigger, said that Hazel called him, and he ran to the grave side. He saw Hazel about half way down, and noticed him fall into the corner opposite Spencer. Witness went down, and thought there was no hope for Spencer, and so directed his attention to the other man. A rope and windlass was procured, and the two men brought up. He was not affected by the gas, and was able to continue work. He believed Hazel slipped down, and he did not fall from the effects of the gas.

DUEL A LA MOOE FOUGHT AT PARIS

Regulation Swords and Severe Stipulations Rule Latest Affray.

PARIS, July 8.—The conditions under which the latest duel was fought in a private property at Neuilly yesterday were as follows:

The combat to be with regulation swords. A space of 7 1/2 metres behind each combatant.

Lost ground not to be made good a second time.

Each antagonist to wear a soft shirt and gloves a crispin to within two inches of the elbow.

The combat to cease only at the instance of one of the combatants.

The duel fought under these severe stipulations over a private quarrel was between Baron Pichon and Comte de Troismonts.

Baron Pichon, somewhat taller and equally vigorous, tried the same tactics. Suddenly the baron stepped back. "Stop!" shouts M. Breilmayer. A drop of blood oozes through the fannel shirt a little above the chest. The garment is removed. The wound is only slight.

"Go ahead," says Baron Pichon, "this is nothing."

The combat is resumed. Each side is a little more prudent. A second time Baron Pichon seemed to be wounded. "It is nothing," he exclaimed, smiling to his seconds. A third encounter was begun, this time even more energetically than before.

The two antagonists step by step was trying to force his adversary back. But he lost in the game, and this time he was touched.

"Stop!" shouted the director of the duel. Comte de Troismonts had a deep wound in his right forearm. The doctors compelled the combatants to enter into a truce for fifteen minutes, and the seconds finally announced that the duel was over.

BOSTON, July 8.—Charles J. Gildes and John Van Valkenburg, two prominent Massachusetts aeronauts, went to church in a balloon recently. They started from Lowell at daylight and at 2 o'clock landed at Haverhill, 20 miles from Lowell.

Here they attended a memorial service, the pastor, the Rev. W. H. Meacham, making a brief reference to the aeronauts who had come to church in their balloon.

Society

RS. CAMILLA BURGE-MEISTER will give a unique entertainment this afternoon when she will entertain a large number of guests at her studio.

German coffee will be served under the trees in the garden and an informal program will be enjoyed by the guests. The hostess will contribute a "Jamboree" of songs and Miss Emma Hessel and Edna Dore will give violin and piano solos, while Mrs. George Adams will give some classic dances.

Mrs. Burge-Meister is an active member of the American Women's League and today's entertainment will be for the benefit of the organization. Many local music folk will enjoy the afternoon.

RETURN FROM DANVILLE.

Miss Mabel Johnson and Miss Alice Johnson have returned from a three weeks' stay at their country home "Oak Villa," in Danville, Contra Costa county. They were accompanied by their father, Ben O. Johnson.

The Robert C. Adneys left today for their summer home at Boulder Creek, where they expect to spend the summer.

CLUB TO GIVE TOURNAMENT.

The Amistades Club of Alameda will give a whist tournament Friday evening, July 21, at Lafayette Hall. After the game and awarding of the prizes a dance will be held. The committee in charge is Miss Marie Ross, Miss Ethel Bieleck, Miss Rosa Flanagan and Miss Olive Flanagan.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Mrs. Charles Glimedouch gave an elaborate birthday surprise party to her husband Friday night at the family home, 1215 San Pablo avenue. The guests numbered twenty-four.

RETURN FROM HONEYMOON.

Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Lavenson have returned from their honeymoon, which has been spent at Lake Tahoe, and are at the home of the bride's parents in Franklin street.

George and Mrs. Lavenson were Miss Harriet Alexander, daughter of Captain and Mrs. E. Alexander.

IN LOS GATOS.

Mrs. Irving Burrill and Miss Edith Beck are summering at Los Gatos, having taken a cottage there the beginning of the season. They have been doing much entertaining. Miss Alay Coogan is leaving in a few days and will be their guest during the remainder of the month.

ARRIVED TODAY.

Dr. George Martin arrived today from Berlin to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Martin of Tenth street, this city.

Dr. Martin, who married Miss May Bates, has attained much success in his profession during his seventeen years' residence in Berlin.

The length of his stay will depend upon the condition of his father, whose illness is the cause of much anxiety.

Mrs. Evelyn Adams has been making short trips to the country this summer, spending pleasant week-ends with friends at near-by resorts.

Later in the summer Miss Adams will go to the Adams ranch in Mountain View.

TO VISIT HERE.

Mrs. Leon Coggin, whose marriage took place about three months ago, will be much entertained in this city, where she is well known.

Mrs. Newton Clark is another matron who will be entertained here and who will visit in this city a little later in the month.

MIDSUMMER BRIDE.

Miss Ruth Waterman will be a midsummer bride, having chosen July 26 as the date of her wedding to Carl Anderson.

The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Waterman, in East Tenth street, and will be performed by the Rev. Frank L. Goodspeed.

The ceremony will be witnessed only by the immediate members of both families, but will be followed by a reception, to which over a hundred friends have been bidden.

Miss Waterman will be attended by Miss Irene Carruth as maid of honor. Mrs. Desaix Clark and Mrs. Vernon Franklin (Miss Waterman's two sisters) are to be the matrons of honor.

Justet Marie will officiate as best man.

Miss Waterman is the possessor of a magnificent contralto voice and is the soloist in the First Presbyterian Church, San Francisco.

Anderson is the leading soloist in the Temple Emmanuel Church and of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, San Francisco.

A lovely new home in East Oakland, which is nearing completion, will be ready for occupancy upon the return of the bridal couple from their honeymoon.

TO GO TO YOSEMITE.

Miss Davis Hunt will join a party of friends in the Yosemite Valley, where she will spend a fortnight.

IN EUROPE.

Word reaches friends in the bay city that Mrs. Burch and her daughter, Miss Beryl Burch and Miss Louise Burch, have arrived in Europe, where they are enjoying a tour during the midsummer. It will be several months before they return to California. Miss Burch was one of the winter's debutantes. Her sister is a gifted musician and will probably continue her studies while abroad.

LETTERS FROM PARIS.

Miss Phoebe Binney and Miss Alice Graham, who are present in Paris, write that they are passing some delightful days. Miss Binney and Miss Graham will stop in New York and will not return until early winter.

AUGUST WEDDING.

Miss Augusta Mueller and Leslie D. Robinson of Lakeport will be married on August 16 in the Hillside Club, on Cedar and Arch streets.

SAILED FOR HONOLULU.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Sidney Elston, whose marriage was celebrated on the 27th of last month in Berkeley, sailed on Thursday for Honolulu, where several weeks are to be spent.

Mrs. Elston was Miss Nellie McCarthy, a graduate of the University of California and one of the most popular young women in society circles on this side of the bay.

Dr. Elston is instructor in the physics department of the University of California.

IN LAKE COUNTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Shaw and family are stopping in Lake county for their summer outing.

OVER WEEK END.

Fletcher Slosson of Berkeley is the guest for the week-end of the Robert Brewsters, who have a picturesque cottage in Ross Valley.

INTERESTING ENGAGEMENT NEWS.

Of interest in local circles is the engagement of Miss Margaret Ochiltree to Lieutenant Ray Longfellow Avery of the United States army. Miss Ochiltree has recently returned from a trip to Boston, where she graduated from Simmons College. She is a graduate of Miss Head's school with the class of 1908, and former student at the University of California, where she was prominent in the affairs of the Alpha Phi sorority. Lieutenant Avery is stationed at Fort McKinley, Portland, Me.

The engagement was not formally announced, but since her return from the East Miss Ochiltree has told the news to a number of friends. Lieutenant Avery is expected to arrive here in August and the wedding will probably be held in September.

Educating Teachers Along new lines

(By SELINE HESS.)

INTO the backbone of the old-fashioned branches of study—reading, writing and arithmetic—has been inculcated the stimulating germ of manual training and domestic science, which has lessened the interest, to an extent, in the study of the subjects and broadened the minds of the pupils. The idea of relegating the three fundamental studies to the shelves of a library for more practical work has been entertained by hosts of teachers for more than half a century and at last their wishes in the matter have been considered and there is rejoicing in the various institutions of learning.

In the great evolution of things, manual training appears to be unfolding in all its beauty and usefulness. It is wielding a powerful influence over the minds of the young Americans, who are striving to work their hands, while they are becoming elevated in an intellectual way.

The instructors in the public schools are preparing to meet the demands of these subjects and many of the women of the local school department are studying the various phases of manual training in special institutions, where instruction is given in the mechanical sciences. Recently such a school was opened in Mount Hermon, where teachers from all parts of the State gather to study out-of-doors. They are mingling business with pleasure during their summer vacation.

The teachers are devising all the means possible to facilitate the manual training courses to be given this year, although they will be bound to follow the curriculum laid down by the Board of Education.

The intricate problems in carpenter work are being studied in all their phases and they will be ready to convey their knowledge of the use of the implements and the materials to the children, who have shown an interest in the manual work.

HAMMER AND AWL.

With hammer and awl the members of the fair sex are experimenting and investigating the different methods of handiwork. They will endeavor to direct the students to attain the best results by the simplest means. The pedagogues assert that there is much to learn in basket-work, wood-carving and the making of benches.

Clad in their costumes and with sleeves rolled the young women are heart and soul in the manual training work. The fruits of their labor will be enjoyed by the pupils of the schools next term.

Within an enclosure of trees and shrubbery in Mount Hermon, the teachers are receiving their instruction preparatory to imparting their knowledge to the pupils. Addict has given expression to the following:

In discussing the phases of the arts and crafts as they are being taught in the schools, wherein the teachers are receiving instruction preparatory to imparting their knowledge to the pupils. Addict has given expression to the following:

PROBLEM TO SOLVE.

"When our training schools and colleges can send out well-balanced teachers of the arts and crafts, teachers who understand both the arts and crafts and who love to teach both, the question now before us will not be a difficult one to solve. This does not mean that teachers without training in each line should be forced to teach both; for if the teacher is an artist it is futile to try to get an exact balance of the two. If the teacher is a mechanic, the same is true. Let the teacher teach that which he loves, that which he feels and lives in that which he has the power to enthrall his pupils with, and to give them a thirst for more.

"The present tendency to introduce art and manual training into the already crowded curriculum of our public schools is due to this broader view of education, thoroughness and culture. Both these subjects touch in a vital way the very heartstrings of every boy, girl, man and woman. Each of these branches is related in some way to every other subject in the curriculum and by denying either of them a place in the course of study we only weaken that course and consequently the pupil; for we are thereby cutting off the full supply of experiences which give life and motive to the thoughts and actions of normal children.

"Art is not a subject to be isolated from all other subjects and then divided into its various parts for special study and arrangement; but rather a charming appreciation of all things beautiful, at all times and in all places. Consider for a moment the broad influence of art in the modern home. Notice the simplicity of lines in the wood work and furniture, notice the color scheme of carpets, rugs, tapestry, wall paper and decoration. While there are many things in our room, the harmonious blending of colors and of simple decorations impress one with a unity and simplicity that is exquisitely pleasurable. The darker tones of the floor lighten to the soft tints of the ceiling, producing a quietude in the individual similar to that felt when nature supplies the restful dark green beneath the woods and mountains in the foreground and the light blue sky above.

"An attempt to separate the arts from the crafts in such a home would mean annihilation of both. Without the delicate artistic touches to the structural and ornamental elements, there would be little need or appreciation for much of

Scientific Management of Navy Urged by Lieut. Tardy

NEW YORK, July 3.—From the day at Santiago when the American fleet destroyed the battleships of Spain, the nation has taken growing interest and pride in its new navy. "At the close of the Spanish war," writes Lieutenant Commander Walter E. Tardy, U. S. N., in the current issue of the Engineering Magazine, "the press and the people were satisfied with their navy. It had been successful, and their officers were fighting for it. But when stock was eventually taken, the small percentage of hits made became known, and naval officers realized that something must be done to justify the public confidence."

The result of that realization is what Lieutenant Commander Tardy embodies in his paper on scientific management and efficiency in the United States navy. "It is not uncommon to hear an officer," he observes, "for different experiments working at similar problems independent and without any knowledge of one another's efforts, to arrive independently and simultaneously at the same discoveries. Something like this has happened in the case of the navy and civil establishments; for only since the technical and popular press took up the general discussion of scientific management have naval officers begun to realize that their management was of the kind now so strenuously advocated for industrial pursuits of all sorts."

DIVIDED INTO THREE.

This efficiency may be divided into three parts—efficiency of the gun crew; efficiency of the fighting unit, or the ship; and the efficiency of the fighting division or fleet. For it is with fighting efficiency that a fighting machine, such as a navy is intended to be, is first concerned. But the effort for efficiency has not been bounded by fighting drill. Important economies have been won in engine practice; the aim has been to make engineering count equally with gunnery in determining the final ship efficiency. Celerity in coaling and economy in the stoke hold and engine room, when translated into action mean that a given ship, run to the full of her capacity, is able to steam just so much farther, to attain just so much wider a cruising radius, to clear from port in a hurry just so much quicker, to show just so much more speed in a desperate pinch, than the same ship or her sister when slackly officered.

Counting engineering equally with gunnery in determining the final performance of any ship—since to work her guns on the enemy her engines must first carry her into and keep her in range—the navy set itself this standard, as embodied in the rules for battle practice, 1911, and quoted by Lieutenant Tardy. "The measure of the battle efficiency of any vessel is her ability to deliver the greatest number of hits in the shortest possible time after the enemy is sighted, and with the least expenditure of coal."

THREE PER CENT HIT.

In this direction let us see what has been done. "The Texas," writes Commander Tardy, "was one of the American ships in the battle of Santiago. Less than three per cent of all the shells fired in this battle by the American fleet hit the enemy. There is no record that a single twelve-inch or thirteen-inch shell took effect. The ranges were less than 2000 yards. Recently the New Hampshire used the old Texas as a target. She fired at ranges of from 10,000 to 11,500 yards and landed whole salvoes on the Texas whenever she wished.

"Recently the Michigan, an all big gun ship, made twenty-two twelve-inch hits at ranges of 10,000 yards while steaming at fifteen knots, the target being only fifty feet long by thirty feet high. She fired forty-eight twelve-inch shells. Her percentage of hits therefore was about 45. The rate of firing was about two shots per minute per gun. This in a moderately rough sea, while the sea was smooth at Santiago."

These and other similar results recently induced the secretary of the navy to say in an address delivered before the New York Economic Club: "Scientific management experts who saw the recent battle practice told me that the battleship is the finest exhibition of scientific management they have ever seen."

HOW DEVELOPED.

Lieutenant Tardy tells how this efficiency was developed. "Every officer in charge of any part of a ship's battery," he writes, "was required to improvise the equipment and develop the best method of training within his capacity. After each had formulated and tried out tentatively a drill they came together, each accepting whatever was best in the other's drill. The interchange of ideas was not restricted to one ship, but after each ship had developed her method of drill and training, the officers of all the ships, by frequent conferences and by studying methods of practice throughout the fleet, crystallized all that was good into the first experiment, approximate drill regulations and instructions for our new ship. All guns and ships were put on a competitive basis. The result to be achieved was definitely stated. The hits per gun per minute."

Comes Now the Pin Freak; He Finds 4580

How many pins can a man find in a year if he picks up all he sees? C. O. Lee, ex-chief of police of Albany, Ore., has one answer to the problem. In Albany, which the 1910 government census says has 4275 inhabitants, Lee found 4580 pins in one year. During his service as a police officer, Lee formed the habit of picking up pins as he walked along the streets, and every day he returned home with the lapsels of his coat filled with pins, and

"Now, with this approximate, standardized drill, it became necessary for the battery officers to train their gun crews individually and collectively. Each man was studied both as to his mental and physical fitness. If the man gave promise of being able to do well the thing for which he was selected, a course of thorough, detailed instructions and drill was given to him. Finally, when the man did each and everything required of him with accuracy and confidence, there began a process of systematically increasing the speed. Each motion was timed by the stop watch, records of time were kept, and the man began to feel like a sprinter.

PERFECT FITTING COG.

"When all turret and gun crews have been thoroughly trained, each man as a unit, and each crew as a team, so that each human element has in reality become a perfect fitting cog in a gear train, the ship is ready for elementary target practice. Prizes, both for the individual ship and for the navy, are offered for the best gun of each caliber. If the score made by a gun is exceptionally high, every man in the crew is furnished by the department with a letter E, to be worn on his sleeve for the year. This E corresponds in the navy to the H or the V won by a Harvard Yale crew or football team.

"Having trained the individual, developed the individual gun crew, perfected the mechanism, and learned from the results of elementary practice what results to expect under favorable conditions from individual firing, it became necessary to train for battle efficiency. To this end, both turret guns were fired at the same instant; then methods of control were perfected and all guns of battle range on the ship were fired in salvo (or all at once). This perfected the ship as a unit. The final step was to control a division so that all the guns of four ships could be used as a unit."

Lighthouse That Needs No Keeper, Is Latest Invention

"What do you think of a perpetual lighthouse, needing no keeper, and yet as regular in its flashes of light as one maintained by the government?" asked Albert D. Van Wyck, a globe trotter, at the Raleigh.

"This natural light never fails, and that means much for navigation. It is a volcano on the island of San Salvador. This volcano lighthouse is about eight miles inland from the port of Acapulco. It is a veritable pillar of cloud by day, and the flash of the light by night has been visible to mariners for years. It can be seen far out at sea, and a burst of flame has gone upward every seven minutes, without the variation of a second, for many years.

"The few visitors who stop at San Salvador amuse themselves the first few days by holding their watches and timing the outburst of flame.

"A lighthouse fee is collected of all vessels that put in at the harbor near the volcano, and no skipper objects. He knows that the volcano is more reliable than the lighthouse kept by human beings on other coasts, and the novelty of the light is worth the price charged by the government. There is the usual detonation caused by the eruption every seven minutes, and the ground is shaken, but, after a short sojourn on the island, you fall to notice it, and would be more shocked if it did not occur."—Washington Post.

SEES BABY SWALLOWED BY ALLIGATOR

GUATAMALA CITY.—Mrs. Edwin Lawson, says her baby girl was swallowed by an alligator. Her husband, a railway conductor, was away from home and she took the little girl, just old enough to toddle about, to the river.

Mrs. Lawson was washing some clothes on the bank of the river and did not notice her daughter had left her until she heard one long scream. When she looked up she saw the great jaws of an alligator snap together upon the tender body of the baby. There was blood upon the river as the alligator sank with his prey. The woman fainted.

When she was found a little later her story was not believed until her husband made sure that the child was gone.

Custom of Locking Jury Up Is Outrage, Says Law Paper

Some of the shabby brocade of court etiquette has been cleared out of our courts, such as gowns and wigs. Some that still hangs in faded shreds is dusty but inoffensive. But some surviving practices are seriously objectionable. For instance, the outrageous habit of locking jurymen up. Why? During the progress of a civil case which lasts three or four days jurymen can go home nights. But when the case is given to the jury, the jury must go into continuous session, under lock and key, until it reaches a verdict. There is no sufficient reason why we should not go home at the end of the day, and come back to our work next morning, just as we men do in any other business. The imprisonment of a jury tends to hasty decisions, to the pacified for thinking. Much better to drop a difficult case, go home, sleep, come fresh to the jury room in the morning and resume deliberation. If jurymen are in danger of being tampered with after a case is given to them, then they are in equivalent danger of being tampered with during the progress of the case. The incarceration of the jury is, I hold, against the rights and liberties of citizens. I am willing to give a portion of my time, without pay, to public business; but I resent the turning of the sheriff's key behind my back. I resent having to walk down to the street to supper (or breakfast) in military or criminal column—by twos. The judge very often has to spend several days in deciding a question of law. When such a man up and tells him words to a juror, Case and Comment.

SEEN IN HOME.

"The union of arts and crafts is displayed in every department of a modern home; from the drawing-room to the kitchen, the principles of harmony, simplicity and beauty are expressed by the correlated work of the artist and the artisan.

"Preparations are being made in many cities to select a style of architecture suitable to the climate and most fitting the natural environment, also to give such cities an arrangement of public buildings that will add architectural beauty as well as meet the convenience and needs of the people. The conception of artistic civic centers, with landscape gardening, boulevards and parks is growing in popularity and evidences in a profound way the increasing public demand and appreciation for the union of arts and crafts; the union of the beautiful and the useful is being expressed even in the poles and fixtures for electric and gas lights, in billboards, shop fronts, fire alarm boxes, plates naming the streets, fountains, monuments and the arrangement of steps, flowers, shrubs, trees and lawns."

Old Niagara Falls! Well, well, how long has it been since I saw them last? And what a great day for me it was the last time I did visit here. You know, children, your Uncle Opie was the first man ever to shoot the rapids and battle the waterfall successfully? Right over there where you see that big spray coming up, only there isn't half so much water in the falls now as there was in those old days. I had promised to make the journey, however, and I quickly had made my arrangement for doing so.

OLD OPIE DILLDOCK'S STORIES

(Copyright: 1911: by The Tribune Company, Chicago, Ill.)

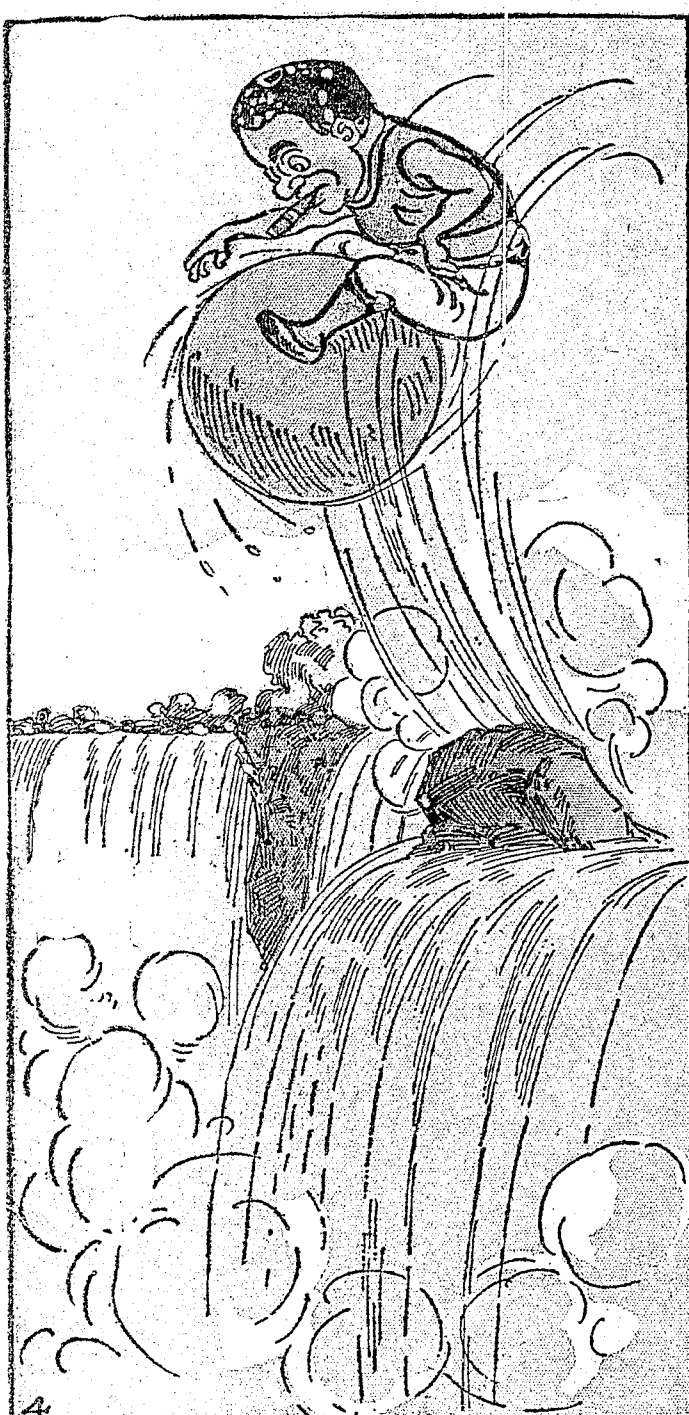

So across Niagara Falls I had stretched a wire. Upon this wire I tossed a large hollow ball. Upon this ball I stood, balanced myself nicely for a moment, and then started rolling the ball with my feet from one end of the wire to the other. This I did several times without much exertion.

Rolling the ball directly over the center of the falls, I jumped in the air and came down upon the sphere with my hands. I spun the ball with my hands in the exact spot on which it first had stood, making four thousand and seventy-nine complete revolutions before finally bringing it to a standstill.

Upon the ball, over the center of the great falls surging and seething beneath, I stood on my hands for half an hour or so finishing my cigar. Then, lighting a fresh weed, I nonchalantly shoved the ball out into space. A cry of horror arose from the vast multitude assembled on the banks.

Sitting astride the ball, I plunged down, seemingly to certain death. The millions of people who had gathered to watch my feat stood silent, holding their breath. I struck upon a large rock and bounced high in the air.

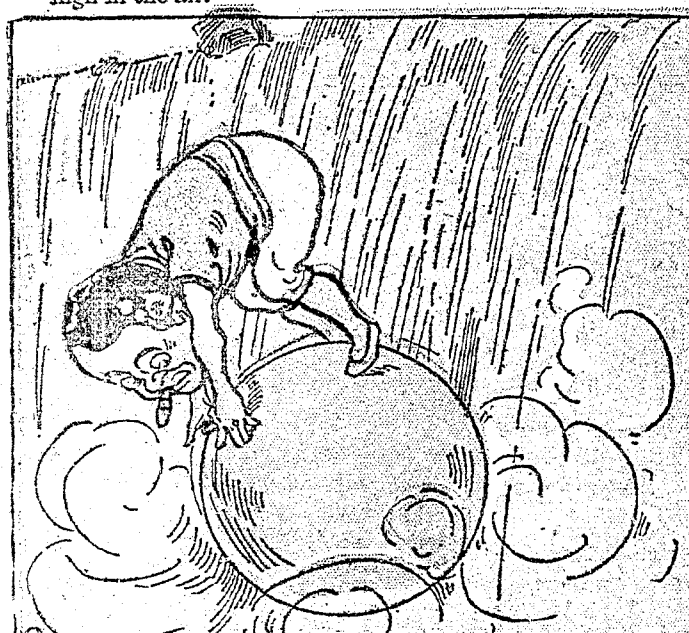

As I again descended the ball landed lightly upon the very brow of the great waterfall. With my feet I revolved the ball with great rapidity against the onrushing current of the waters, holding it thus for several minutes.

Then I plunged off the brink and rotated with the great spheroid. We struck the heavy spray thrown up by the falling cataract, and this checked the speed with which the ball was hurtling through space toward the rapids far below.

This spray rising against the ball made it easy for me to rest, but I did not desire to do so and kept right on somersaulting, to the great amusement of the thousands of children watching me. I had great fun bursting the bubbles.

Gradually and gently the big ball floated downward, buffeted here and there by a great cloud of spray. Meanwhile I was performing every circus trick ever known to man, and many that no acrobat ever before or since has tackled.

A large bubble came up and I mistook that for a moment and scrambled on it. Realizing my mistake, however, I quickly jumped back on the ball, the bubble, being shoved vigorously exploding with a loud, resounding report.

Hovering over a particularly nasty looking whirlpool I held the ball suspended in air for a moment and then released it. It shot quickly down, and I worked my arms about the heavy spray, keeping myself in air until the ball landed.

The ball was shooting down the rapids as I disengaged myself from the atmosphere and jumped upon it. Then, standing straight, my arms folded about my heaving chest, I floated calmly down the rapids and out of sight of the cheering spectators.

PATROL WATCHES FOR SEA TO YIELD UP DEAD

THOUSANDS AWAITED SUICIDE

San Francisco Attorney, Heir to $100,000, Blows Out His Brains

Philip G. Dodd, Disciple of Buddha, Writes Mother and Ends Life

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—But a short time before falling heir to $100,000, and a few moments after penning a letter to his mother, Philip G. Dodd, an attorney, sent a bullet crashing through his brain this evening and ended his life. His body lies at the morgue, while the police are making an investigation of the shooting.

James H. Jordan, who claims to have been a lifelong friend of Dodd, and who lives at 1330 McAllister street, was in an adjoining office to that of the young attorney, who was only 24 years of age, when the shooting took place. Jordan, who is employed by the Lincoln Loan and Mortgage Company, claims that Dodd asked him to leave the office a few moments, so that he could sleep, when he heard a pistol shot and found his friend in a pool of blood, lying beside the chair in which he was seated when he wrote the last note to his mother, whose home is in Atlanta, Ga. Jordan says that he had obtained a promise from Dodd, before he left the office, that the latter would not take a pistol from a drawer of his desk.

RACE FOR WEAPON.

This pistol, Jordan says, was contested for yesterday by Dodd and himself while they were at the Southern Club. Jordan declares that he went to the club with Dodd last night, and while there his friend took a revolver from his pocket and placed it at Jordan's head, saying that he was afraid to die. Jordan says that he dropped that he was not afraid to die, but that he did not see why he should. Dodd then made the proposition to him, he says, that they place the revolver on a billiard table and race for it, the winner to take the weapon. Jordan accepted the challenge and won the revolver. He opened it and found it was empty.

Jordan says that he and Dodd went to the Southern Club in the Commercial building against this afternoon and that after leaving there they went to Dodd's office, 314 and 316 Mills building. Dodd was a member of the firm of J. J. & Dodd, his partner, John G. Jure, being a resident of San Jose.

WROTE HIS MOTHER.

Dodd and Jordan went into the former's office and Dodd wrote a long letter to his mother. After completing this he asked Jordan to leave him alone and the shooting occurred. Jordan claims that Dodd was a disciple of Buddha and did not believe in earthly possessions. He says that he often talked of suicide. M. Strickler of 666 Third avenue, at whose home Dodd resided, also declares that he had heard his roomer say that he was not afraid to die.

Detective Frank Lord, who was detailed on the case, found a letter in Dodd's office evidently intended for Jordan, in which Dodd had said, "Your failure to pay me has embarrassed me. The police examined the letter and then handed it to Jordan. Realizing later that the letter might have some bearing on the case, Detective Lord searched for Jordan in order to obtain possession of the note again.

Dodd was the son of Mrs. H. C. Dodd of 355 Myrtle street, Alameda, Ga. He was to become heir to $100,000 when his sister Mary reached the age of 1, which would be in a short time. An estate of $300,000 was to be shared by his mother, a brother, Gustav T. his sister and himself.

Jordan told the police he owed Dodd $200.

Millionaire Plans Big Non-sectarian Hospital

Institution to Cost Two Millions, With One-third Free Beds, to Be Built in 10 Years.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 8.—R. A. Two conditions govern the donation. The church must raise another million dollars and a third of the beds in the institution must be free. The church already has raised $400,000 of the amount required.

Wife of Archibald Willis Adams Tells Police of His Absence

BERKELEY, July 8.—Archibald Willis Adams, former customs appraiser at this port and Honolulu, who is interested in the Hawaiian pineapple canning industry, has been missing from his home, 2400 Grove street, Berkeley, since June 5. His wife, Helen Clark Adams, believes that he has met with foul play. He carried with him on the day of his disappearance nearly $10,000 and a suit case containing valuable financial papers. Since his disappearance Mrs. Adams has heard nothing from her husband, although the police in this city, Oakland and San Diego have been notified. Mrs. Adams has personally searched for him, visiting San Diego, Los Angeles and other cities in the south without success.

GAVE HIM $2000.

On the day of his disappearance Adams bade his wife goodbye at the corner of Montgomery and Sutter streets. That was June 5. He told her that he was going to San Diego to look over some property in which he was considering an investment. The night before Mrs. Adams gave him $2000, which the couple had realized on an investment. In a brown suit case which he carried with him were his clothes and business papers. Failing to hear from her husband, a week later Mrs. Adams inquired of a friend in San Diego whether he had arrived there. She found that he was not in that city. To satisfy herself she made a trip to San Diego and ascertained that Adams had not been seen there. Upon her return from the south Mrs. Adams notified Chief of Police Vollmer, of Berkeley of her husband's disappearance. In addition to these efforts made to find her husband, Mrs. Adams called at various steamship offices and ticket bureaus. She failed to find that her husband

PASADENA, July 8.—In order that Frederick Weyerhaeuser, one of the richest men in the world, might save $81, the city council of Pasadena suspended the action of a city law. This fact came to light today when E. Main and W. The mayor promised to investigate immediately and authorized Councilman C. W. Rhodes to conduct the inquiry and report to the city council.

Alex D. Sharon Dies at Age of 72

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Alex D. Sharon, one of San Francisco's prominent citizens, who for twelve years managed the old Palace Hotel, died today at his home. He was 72 years old. As a young man Sharon studied law in the office of Edward Stanton in Steubenville, Ohio. Later Stanton became Secretary of War. When the rebellion broke out Sharon was listed. He is a cousin of the late Senator Sharon, who owned the Palace Hotel. The funeral will take place Monday at 1 o'clock at Pleasanton. The remains will be placed in a vault in Mountain View Cemetery, Oakland.

COLT KNOWS NOTHING OF SUIT

Husband of Ethel Barrymore Says Rumors of Divorce Are Ungrounded

Actress Bride of Two Years Still Refuses to Discuss Troubles

NEW YORK, July 8.—Russell Griswold Colt, husband of Ethel Barrymore, today declared the report that his actress bride of two years was about to sue him for divorce was news to him. Colt was seen at the office of H. L. Horton & Co., brokers, in which concern he has a large interest.

"I don't know anything about all this," he said. "I don't want to talk about it. It is all news to me. She did not notify me of anything like this."

"You don't know, then, that a messenger is on the way with the papers?" he was asked.

"Why should they come that way?" replied Colt. "Why should they come, anyway, I don't know. There is not a word of truth in all this stuff about our having a row in New Orleans."

NO WOMAN IN CASE.

"But if she has taken this step it is not because of infidelity on my part. I love her too dearly for that, and she is well aware of the fact. If Mrs. Colt has decided to try to divorce me it is because I have been drinking too much. I admit that she might have grounds for complaint on that score. All this talk about a mysterious New York society woman being involved in the case is not worthy of denial or comment."

"As for my not going along on Mrs. Colt's Western tour, I have my business here to look after. I must give some time to my business. Now that is absolutely all I have to say."

Jack Barrymore, when seen at his country home in Rockville Center, L. I., expressed complete surprise at the announcement that his sister was bringing divorce proceedings.

"It is all news to me," said the young actor. "Personally, I don't believe it, though it may be true. I have not seen Ethel for three months and have heard practically nothing from her. She has been touring out West."

"I know Mr. Colt was not with her, but I thought he had remained in New York for business reasons. I saw him only a week ago and he seemed perfectly cheerful and happy."

CHUM OF WIFE HINTED AT.

Friends of Miss Barrymore declare that what first deeply piqued and chagrined her was information that her husband was seeking more and more the company of her closest chum, a celebrated beauty of the stage.

Colt's rebukes to his wife on several occasions, when angered at what he regarded as her failure in domesticity, are said to have been of a violence unbelievable. These, she is reported to have emphasized in her complaint as reason enough for divorce.

Colt's alleged philanderings with her chum are not thought to have furnished her the legal ground required for divorce in New York.

MISS BARRYMORE SILENT.

LOS ANGELES, July 8.—Maintaining the attitude of silence which she assumed as soon as reports gained currency that she was preparing to institute suit for divorce from her husband, Ethel Barrymore again refused today to make any statement concerning her plans.

The actress is playing an engagement here and is staying at a hotel in Hollywood. She is being guarded by friends and employees. All of these have been instructed to keep away all interviewers. Today a note was sent into her dressing room as she was preparing for a matinee. "Miss Barrymore will see no one," came back the reply. "She has no statement to make."

$10,000,000 TO BE SPENT ON ELECTRIC SYSTEMS

Pacific Gas Company to Erect Additional Plant and Extend Service to the Bay Cities

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Ten million dollars will be expended by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company in extending its power supply system, the plans for the perfection of which were completed today. The additional hydro-electric capacity of the company's system will include a power line from a power plant on Bear river, Placer county, to the bay center.

The power plant will be erected on property that was formerly owned by the South Yuba Water Company's system. This system was absorbed by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company early in the year.

The South Yuba Water Company's system has been used for the generation of power at four power houses and has an aggregate capacity of 10,000 horse power. The Pacific Gas and Electric Company has a total capacity in eleven installed

Prince Helie's Creditors Can Take His Son's Land

BERLIN, July 8.—Prince Helie de Sagan, Anna Gould's husband, has just lost a long-fought suit in the German courts whereby he sought to set aside the right of his 2-year-old son, Prince Charles Jason Howard, to inherit the de Sagan family's estate in this country. Prince de Sagan set up the contention that as his son was born in France, the boy is not eligible to inherit the estate, hoping thereby to make it impossible for his German creditors to attach the revenues of the estate. The courts have decided that the baby prince is the legal heir to the properties and that the revenues may be seized to satisfy Prince Helie's debts.

body. He was taken to Providence Hospital in the machine by the driver, whose name was not ascertained, where it was found upon examination that his injuries were not of a serious nature. Following treatment he was removed to his home.

Death List Is Uncertain Owing to Darkness and Great Confusion on the Shore

Passengers Tell of Thrilling Trips to Land on Wave-Swept Rafts and in Nets Swung on Ropes

By JOSEPH TIMMONS.

SURF, Cal., July 8.—Captain Faria sits on a pile of life preservers on the beach of the little cove at the mouth of the Canada Honda tonight, his swarthy face wrinkled and tense with emotion, turned out to sea.

The broken hull of the Santa Rosa lies there within twenty feet of the tide line. Somewhere out in the ocean are the bodies of his third officer and three members of his crew. Maybe that mute forms of women and children, men, too, passengers on his ship, are driven here and there in the deeper currents of the sea or lodged against deep sunken reefs.

No Knowing How Many Are Drowned

That is one of the unknown quantities of the wreck to the present time. No one has been definitely reported as missing, but in such state of confusion is the checking of the list of rescued against that of the passengers that whether a score of lives has been lost or a dozen, or none at all, is purely a matter of conjecture.

Captain Faria is a kindly man. He is brave and he has served with the Pacific Coast Steamship Company nineteen years creditably. But he failed in the crucial moment. He listened to the voice of his employers, carried to him by wireless from the office in San Francisco, and perhaps gave too much thought to saving his ship in the firm conviction that no life was in danger.

Looking backward it is plain to all that the captain ought to have sent his passengers ashore early Friday while the sea was comparatively smooth and the danger almost nil. But Faria, haunted as he evidently is, by knowledge that he made the wrong choice of line of action, and that it may have cost lives entrusted to his care, vigorously defends himself against the clamor of indignant criticism of the passengers.

Faria Defends His Action

This afternoon Captain Faria leaned against a battered life boat on the beach and talked freely.

He denounced as cruelly false the assertion of some of the passengers that officers of the steamer had been drinking. He defended his conduct in refusing to take the passengers off until late in the afternoon. He impeached the courage of some of his bitterest critics among the male passengers. He explained from the navigator's standpoint the forces and events which combined to pile his ship upon the beach that would be her grave, and he made one complaint against Third Officer E. J. Thomas, who was on the bridge when the Santa Rosa went aground. That complaint involves knowledge which is a secret of the dead and is the most sensational statement which Captain Faria makes.

Left Order to Be Called

The captain admits the dangerous character of the coast at the point of the wreck. He asserts that at 11 o'clock Thursday night he wrote in the night order book and gave into the custody of Second Officer Edward Huston, then on the bridge, an order to call him at 1 o'clock that he might have oversight of the navigation of his ship. He says that he was not called, Thomas relieving Huston on the bridge at midnight.

"I do not know whether poor Huston gave the order to Thomas or not," said Captain Faria. "He was sent out with a boat crew early before I had an opportunity to ask him. He was with the boat all day, unable after the sea grew rough, to return to the ship, and carried the knowledge of whether he delivered the order or not to his death. I did not ask Thomas whether he got the order. The night order book was carried away by the sea and lost. Thomas is a young officer, and I do not blame him, nor complain of anything except that I was not called."

Log of Santa Rosa Is Lost

Another strange circumstance is that the log of the ship is lost so far as Captain Faria knows. He took it with him from his cabin as he prepared to leave the ship, the last man to go over the side. In the life net or breeches buoy he gave it to E. J. Jensen, a passenger and former mate, who was the only other man in the net with him. As Jensen was higher up in the net and better able to keep the log dry, Jensen claims that as he was pulled from the net he gave one of the rescuers the precious log, and that the man disappeared. Jensen rushed frantically about hunting the book, but no trace of it has been found so far as Captain Faria and the men still at the beach know.

The puzzling uncertainty as to whether any passengers lost their lives cannot be solved except by the steamship people themselves after they have carefully checked the list of passengers rescued and carried away by Southern Pacific trains from the scene of the wreck against the company's list of passengers with the added names of those who took passage at the dock in San Francisco just before the vessel sailed.

Women Struggle in Water

First Officer William Jackson says that at 5 o'clock he saw two women struggling in the water near the bow of the boat on the sea side. They had on life preservers and were swept rapidly around the bow and shoreward before any attempt could be made to reach

Grace Benson says: "Had anyone told me such wonderful results could be accomplished so quickly, I positively would not have believed it. My arms and hands were covered with freckles; my neck was dark and wrinkled from the use of high collars; my hands were tanned and the knuckles cracked. Now I am white, my hands are soft and my neck is clear. I received the first application of a free prescription, which I am pleased to give to anyone. It's just as simple as it is effective. Go to any drug store and get an empty two-ounce bottle and a one-ounce bottle. Fill the two-ounce bottle with the entire bottle of Kulux. Into the two-ounce bottle, add one-quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Shake well. You know you are getting it right. Apply at night and morning. It makes the skin soft and unguaily. Your hands and arms are white. One application will astonish you. Give it to your friends, your husbands or women, and they are all just as enthusiastic as I am. Try it on your neck and shoulders and you will be equally satisfied."

THIEVES PLUNDER HOME IN FAMILY'S ABSENCE

During the absence of the family, robbers entered the residence of A. Vander Nallem, Jr., at 4999 Webster street, yesterday afternoon, ransacked it from top to bottom, and made off with money and valuables worth about $200.

The robbery was discovered about 4 o'clock, when Vander Nallem returned home and found the house plundered, drawers open, bedding strewn about, and every place rummaged where the robber or robbers thought valuables might be found. The theft was committed some time between 1 and 4 o'clock taking their time. On a hasty examination Vander Nallem reported the following missing: A purse containing about $15 in money, and the value of about $150. A coin collection worth in the neighborhood of $1000 was overlooked by the thieves.

EUREKA SHIPPING.

EUREKA, Cal., July 8.—The steam schooners Vanguard, North Fork and Phoenix are due at this port tomorrow night but in all probability judgment by the weather will not arrive until Monday morning. The Vanguard will have passengers and mail and the Phoenix freight and passengers. The North Fork will also have a full cargo of miscellaneous freight.

FAMILY SKELETON POPS OUT

TROUBLES OF SHONTS ARE BARED

MRS. THEODORE P. SHONTS, wife of the millionaire railway magnate and civil engineer, who has been brought prominently into the limelight by reason of the reports from Paris that she is suing her husband for a legal separation. Mrs. Shonts is at present visiting her daughter, the Duchess de Chaunles, in Paris, and it is said her husband has cabled her to return to America immediately.

Madam Schmidt Discloses Marital Jars of Duchess de Chaunles' Parents

NEW YORK, July 8.—Notwithstanding the fact that Mrs. Theodore P. Shonts has emphatically denied the report that she is suing her husband, the millionaire railway magnate, who is at the head of the New York Interurban system, for divorce, it is said that there is a skeleton in the Shonts closet in the form of marital differences that have existed for some time. The exact cause of the differences is not known, and Mrs. Shonts shuns publicity. Her husband has written her to return to New York from Paris, where she is visiting her daughter, the Duchess de Chaunles, and it is reported, has wired her recently to return immediately.

Shonts was sued for alienation in 1909 by Fred Hish of New York. Hish found a note signed with Shonts' name asking Mrs. Hish to meet him at Asbury Park. Shonts denied that he sent the telegram and the case soon disappeared from the public mind.

The recent reports from Paris that a legal separation was being contemplated by Mrs. Shonts, have again brought the name prominently into the limelight.

CONGRESS BUSY IN SPIRE OF HEAT

Senate and House Each Disposes of Good Bit of Routine.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—What Congress did today:

IN THE SENATE.

The Cummins free meat amendment to the reciprocity bill was rejected. Agreement reached to vote next Monday on amendments to the reciprocity bill.

A bill providing for a great volunteer army in time of war was considered. It makes every citizen of suitable age and qualifications eligible for military service. At the request of Senator Reed no action was taken and the bill went over.

IN THE HOUSE.

The House, after transacting routine business, adjourned out of respect to the memory of Representative Mitchell of Kansas, who died yesterday.

Cox of Indiana introduced a resolution calling on President Taft to furnish the House with information relative to land near Controller Bay, Alaska, and its acquisition by the Guggenheims.

Committees: Before the Third Degree Committee, President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, today declared that Justice Wright deserved impeachment and intimated an effort would be made to impeach him.

The committee investigating the Interior Department decided to investigate Commissioner Dennett of the general land office to appear before it Monday.

ame Zunderman Schmidt, a former member of the Shonts household in Paris, who handled the finances that kept the late Duke de Chaunles and his Hungarian chateau out of the clutches of European money lenders. Madame Schmidt told among other things, of the importunings of Shonts for his wife to come home. She said the apartments Mrs. Shonts and the duchess had in Paris cost Mrs. Shonts 100,000 francs annually, and this, together with other large expenditures of his wife's, seemed to bother Shonts mightily, said Madame Schmidt.

"Why," she said, "he would inquire of Mrs. Shonts in all his letters, 'Why don't you come home? Spend our American-earned dollars in America. You are being held up by everybody in France and you are being outrageously robbed. Stop throwing money away.'"

SHE LOVED PARIS.

"Mrs. Shonts seemed to love Paris," said Madame Schmidt, "and Shonts' importunings never seemed to worry her. She asserted in her own emphatic way that she would stay in Paris and only return to New York for the winter."

Marguerite Shonts, the duchess' sister, seldom came to visit her mother or sister in Paris. When she did come it could plainly be seen that she had taken arms with her father and wanted Mrs. Shonts to go back to America. Mr. Shonts spoke of Marguerite as "the only one who had treated him right." There was no mistaking Mr. Shonts' opposition to the duke. His letters revealed that.

The first intimation that Mr. and Mrs. Shonts had disagreed appeared in a news cable from Paris a week ago. At that time the announcement was made by an attorney acting for Mrs. Shonts that papers in a divorce action would be served upon Shonts. The suit, it was announced, would be brought in New York, as both were legal residents of that city. Later it was stated that the papers had been withdrawn.

GAVE HIS LIFE TO SAVE HIS DOG

Aged Man Killed by Train in the Act of Rescuing His Pet.

NEW YORK, July 8.—When Michael Clowley of Mount Hope, New York, who is 70 years old, started for the village post office he called to his fox terrier, Kattio, his constant companion. Mr. Clowley recently built a handsome bungalow in the hills of Hudson Heights, where he and his wife intended spending their declining years. He had made a comfortable fortune as a wholesale grocer, retiring a short time ago and moving from Brooklyn to Mount Hope.

Kattio was friskier than usual, leaping and barking in front of her master. Occasionally she would pick up a small stick and bring it to Mr. Clowley to throw for her. As the man and the dog neared the Mount Hope railroad station Kattio ran down to the tracks.

Mr. Clowley heard the rumble of an approaching train and called sharply to Kattio, who only wagged her stub tail, planted her feet in the middle of the southbound track and barked defiantly. Vance, a Los Angeles musician, was seized with a hemorrhage which compelled him to leave the train at Salt Lake. He is at Emergency hospital and can live, it is thought, only a few hours.

for she danced delightedly between the rails.

When the train was not more than fifty feet away Mr. Clowley grabbed Kattio by the neck. Then he looked up, saw the engine and hurried the dog clear of the rails. The engine had thrown on the emergency brakes, but as Mr. Clowley stepped out of the locomotive's way a projection on the cowcatcher struck him. He was hurled twenty feet, striking on his head. He died an hour later in the Dobbs Ferry hospital.

CRAZED WITH HEAT, GOES TO SLEEP ON ICE

NORRISTOWN, Pa., July 8.—Excessive heat of the last few days is believed to have unbalanced the mind of Harry Rightmour, 43 years old, of Pottstown. He came here to see his wife who is cool at the Hotel Ramble.

Rightmour acted strangely, but his wife did not think that his mind was unbalanced until he was found sleeping in the hotel refrigerator, with his head under the door. He told the hotel proprietor he was trying to keep cool.

Rightmour put up a fight when taken into custody by Constable Robert Porter. He was sent to the hospital for treatment.

VISALIA AS DRY TOWN MAKES GOOD

But One Arrest Made Since Anti-Saloon League Won at the Polls.

VISALIA, July 8.—As the first week of the "dry" regime in Visalia has resulted in but a single arrest, not alone for drunkenness but for any other offense, the anti-saloon forces are jubilant and will use this as a strong argument in the campaign now on. The single arrest occurred a week ago today, the first day after the saloons shut up shop.

The drys will hold a second big mass meeting in the courthouse park tomorrow night when Dr. A. C. Bane, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, will speak. Indications point to a third dry victory, which will mean the closing of the saloons for at least two years.

COUNTRESS CASSINI COMES INTO HER OWN AGAIN

She Is Rehabilitated by Recent Marriage to Alexandre Lojowski.

PROVES SHE IS TRUE CHILD OF DESTINY

"Comes Back" From Place in Low Grade Paris Music Hall.

(By PAUL PIERRE RIGNAUX.)

PARIS, July 8. — Countess Marguerite Cassini has been rehabilitated by her recent marriage to Alexandre Lojowski, who is connected with the Russian embassy at Paris and the same extravagant, luxury-loving careless woman of the world that society in America gloried in and whose fascinating manner won for her such friends as Alice Roosevelt, Mathilde Townsend, Helen Cook and all that set in Washington when she was to win her married name, Count Cassini, then ambassador from Russia.

The Countess' life in Paris for the past three years has been precarious and quite in contrast with her brilliant career when she was loaded with social honors in America. But all uncertainties are now passed, and Marguerite is herself again. Her marriage with the wealthy Russian indicates the ascendancy of her lucky star.

No more romantic and extraordinary life than that of the Countess Cassini could be imagined. Her origin has always been veiled in mystery and has caused much speculation, yet it was never surely known even among her best friends.

ROYAL CAREER STARTS.

As a matter of fact her real career started many years ago when her aunt, Mme. Shell, who was then the protégée of Count Cassini, was desired of accompanying the Count to his newly appointed post as minister to China. This not being entirely within the limits of diplomatic ethics, the new Russian minister to China refused, but Mme. Shell at once suggested an alternative. She would take her little niece, Marguerite Desplanques, along with her, to whom she would be a companion and instructor.

Marguerite was the daughter of Madame Shell's sister, Madame Desplanques, and both mother and aunt were in the Martin quartette which toured America many years ago with great success.

This scheme of taking her niece along worked out more than well. Count Cassini went to Pekin, where the beautiful and attractive Marguerite was introduced as the Countess Cassini, a niece of the Russian minister.

GOES TO PARIS.

After Count Cassini was recalled from the United States, Marguerite came to Paris, where she had elegant apartments adjacent to the home of the prime minister of France, and began to study for grand opera, giving promise of success. But misfortune began to fall on Count Cassini and his recall from Milan and practical retirement cut off his source of income and things began to go badly for the beautiful Countess. Debts piled up fast and furious and the outlook was dark indeed. Several times the countess has been reported to be engaged to be married, once to Alexandre Moseley of the Valentine family of Richmond, who is said to have rescued her from a perilous position while climbing the Alps.

Another time to Dr. Simone, a man about town of Paris, but none of these engagements materialized into marriage, so the creditors pressed harder until her magnificent apartment, which must have represented an original outlay of tens of thousands of dollars, was sold out for the benefit of her creditors, who held something like $75,000 against her, for the mere pittance of $5000.

FLINGS AWAY PRIDE.

This was the hardest time for the countess and heroic methods had to be employed so she flung pride to the winds and engaged herself for a small part in one of the lower grade music halls, where as Mme. Fabia she appeared each evening. She felt safe in not being recognized for she knew but few of her former friends would frequent the little theater on an outer boulevard. But her plunge from pride and position proved her salvation. For it was at this theater she met Lojowski, who has just married her and paid all debts and Marguerite Cassini has again come into her own, while the fates evidently intended for her.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8. — Major Blanton Winship, judge of appeals, has been relieved from duty with the maneuver division, San Antonio, Tex., and ordered to Washington, D. C., for temporary duty, upon the completion of which he will return to San Francisco and resume his duties as judge advocate of this department.

FOUR OAKLAND WOMEN TAKE LONG ADAMLESS AUTO JUNKET

MRS. EDITH LONG (upper portrait) of Grand avenue, Oakland, who chaperoned a party of Oakland girls on an automobile trip through Lake and Mendocino counties, and MISS ESTELLE WAYNE, who piloted the big touring car on the jaunt.

An automobile trip through Lake and Mendocino counties by four pretty girls, with not a man in the party, is the latest feat extraordinary accomplished by a quartette of Oakland people. The trip lasted a week, the party including Mrs. Edith Long, a pretty young matron of Grand avenue, who acted as chaperone; Miss Estelle Wayne of Claremont, who drove the big touring car in the absence of a chauffeur; Miss Hazel Dutton and Miss Glenn Papineau.

The young women left Oakland a week ago Wednesday, and on their arrival at Lake and Mendocino counties stopped at various towns and resorts, spending a day at McCreels, another at Vichy Springs, and visiting at the principal towns en route. They passed through a small portion of Sonoma county, stopping at Santa Rosa, where their daring and independence made them the objects of many admiring eyes. The papers of that city made complimentary reference to their unique jaunt, and other towns along the way were equally well impressed by the manless auto trip. The quartette returned to Oakland Thursday morning.

Last year the same young women took a trip by themselves to Santa Cruz and other portions of Monterey county. This year's jaunt has proved so successful and interesting that they have decided to make it an annual event.

FRANKLIN K. LANE ARRIVES IN CITY

Interstate Commerce Commissioner Will Hear Rate Cases During Coast Visit.

Franklin K. Lane, Interstate Commerce Commissioner, arrived in this city from Washington, D. C., on Friday and will be in California for two or three months. He is at the Claremont Country club for the present. Several purposes have brought Lane to the Coast, the most immediate being the avoidance of the blast of hot weather which has been searing the East this summer.

"We missed the hot spell," he said yesterday. "The hot weather in the East is a real worse than a couple of earthquakes."

"Among other things, I shall do while here will be to look over various sections of the state for an estate for my wife and children. I want to acquire a homestead here, although my work will keep me in the East most of the time."

"I will take a vacation with me and I shall take a vacation with them for a few weeks. In a few days we expect to go out to the country."

"Some time in August I shall begin the hearing of a long series of important rate cases up and down the Coast. One of the most important will be a hearing of the long and short haul rates between San Francisco and Portland. The investigation will be to learn why the rate to intermediate stations is sometimes greater than for the whole route."

"When there is a terminal case on rates to Santa Rosa from the East. Another case that will be heard in August will be the Arizona rate to Los Angeles. I expect to be busy with the hearings till the middle or end of September."

UNDERTAKE LONG WALK.
PETALUMA, July 8. — C. S. Seward, G. N. Seward, C. B. Seward and J. A. Scofield, all residents of Illinois, arrived in Petaluma this morning on their way to Lake county. They intend to walk to Lake county. They will stop in the largest cities of Sonoma, Mendocino and Lake counties and if they are pleased will buy ranches.

CONGRESS WILL PROBE CONTROLLER BAY GRANT

Charles P. Taft and Former Secretary Ballinger Accused of Influencing Presidential Order in Interest of Guggenheims

WASHINGTON, July 8. — The alleged influence of Charles P. Taft in having the Controller, Bay, Alaska, waterfront thrown open to entry will be investigated by Congress. Two steps were taken toward this end today, following the publication of the alleged letter from R. S. Ryan to former Secretary Ballinger, in which the former declared that he had to invoke the aid of Charles P. Taft to induce the president to open to entry those lands which constitute the only available outlet on the Alaskan coast.

Representative Cox of Indiana introduced a resolution of censure on the president for all information concerning the executive order by which the land was opened to entry, including any influence exerted upon him by any of the persons mentioned in this connection.

Coincident with the introduction of this resolution announcement was made that at its meeting on Monday morning the House committee on expenditures in the interior department will take up the investigation of the story of Mrs. Abbott, the newspaper woman who claims to have discovered the remarkable letter in the files of the interior department which were thrown open to her at the request of a New York periodical.

PRESIDENT DENIES INQUIRY.

President Taft has already informally denied the charge that there is to be an investigation; and in reply to the allegation that by ordering the re-opening of the Controller Bay and the president has made it possible for the Guggenheim syndicate to secure control of the land, interior department officials assert that this would be impossible, as much as the law requires the government to reserve for its own purpose, i. e., the prevention of monopoly, alternate sections on all waterfront land that is thus thrown open. It was also declared today that no such letter as that alleged to have been found by Mrs. Abbott is in the files of the interior department.

At the department today all information was refused in the absence of Secretary Fisher. This statement was given out: "In the absence of Secretary Fisher we would not care to discuss the matter. All these matters will come out in time and pending an inquiry and in the absence of the secretary nothing will be said."

"Do you care to state whether, since the publication of Mrs. Abbott's story, you have examined the files, and whether that letter was in them?" was asked.

WOMAN STICKS TO STORY.

President Taft is out of the city and the only information obtainable from administration sources was that the order opening the Controller Bay lands, issued last October, three months subsequent to the writing of the alleged "Dick-to-Dick" letter, was promulgated on the recommendation of the forestry service, through the department of agriculture. Mrs. Abbott who, in any event, in the investigation that is to be begun, will be one of the star witnesses, adheres to her original story. She made this statement today:

"I have in my possession the paper on which I copied the postscript. I stated in my interview printed Friday, Secretary Fisher had instructed Mr. Brown, his secretary, to show me the whole record in the Controller Bay matter. Mr. Fisher was leaving for Philadelphia at 11 o'clock and I sat from that time to a quarter to 4 in the afternoon going through the records with Mr. Brown. I found a letter from R. S. Ryan to R. A. Ballinger, dated July 23, 1910, typewritten on printed stationery on the head of which was 27 Williams street, New York. It was signed 'R. S. Ryan.' "Attached to this letter was another sheet of paper which began 'Dear Dick,' and which said: 'I went to see the President the other day about this Controller Bay affair. The President asked whom it was I represented. I told him, according to our agreement that you represented myself, but that did not seem to satisfy him so I sent for Charlie Taft and asked him to tell his brother who it was I really represented. The President made no further objection to my claim.'

"Yours, 'DICK.' "The postscript was written with a pen and was illegible as to one word. I showed it to Brown and asked him what word it was. He said it was 'agreements,' so I completed my copy of it and have it now in my possession."

TRIES TO HIDE LETTER.

"When Brown and I were going through the record he was turning pages at first and I noticed that he several times turned two pages at a time. I made a mental note of that and when he had gone through the pile of papers I held out my hand for the bundle. It was apparent that he gave it to me with reluctance. He had remarked from time to time, 'You see this is all right,' or 'That is all right,' or words to that effect."

"I took the papers and turned through to where Mr. Brown had turned two pages at a time and found this letter with the postscript. It was so vital that I copied it verbatim."

"I realized that it was vitally important. It showed that an understanding had been reached between Ryan and Ballinger, that Ryan was to allege that he represented himself; that is, was independent of the Morgan-Guggenheim Alaska syndicate, and that the purpose of the alleged letter was to bring the President to the thing Ryan wanted in getting Controller Bay rights for the syndicate. It was perfectly apparent that Ryan meant to tell Ballinger that Charles P. Taft had told the president that Ryan really represented the syndicate and that having been so assured the President was asked to do the thing as to Controller Bay that Ryan wanted."

"I am ready to go under oath and reiterate the statements and to produce anywhere before an authorized tribunal my papers containing my copy of that postscript."

TEXT OF RESOLUTION.

The resolution introduced today by Representative Cox reviews the publication of the alleged letter, and declares, through Secretary of the Interior Ballinger and Charles P. Taft, the President to sign the executive order of October 23, 1910, which released the Controller Bay territory from the reserve and placed it in the public domain open to entry. The President is requested to furnish all information regarding any influence exerted upon him by any of the persons mentioned to induce him to open the land to entry.

"The history of the coal land tangle in Alaska is reiterated in the preamble of the resolution. Apparently the conclusion is drawn that the docking facilities at Controller Bay make it the only available terminal for the proposed road to transport coal to the interior of the territory. The rest sets forth that the President's order has made it possible for the Guggenheim syndicate to secure control of the land, by means of the land to secure the only railroad route and by means

'WELCOME--BUT WE WANT HOME RULE' IRISH GREETING

King George and Queen Mary Given Quiet But Cordial Howdy-do.

DUBLIN, July 8. — King George and Queen Mary received a quiet but cordial welcome to Ireland today. The attitude of the people is well expressed by a banner stretched outside the city council hall at Pembroke, a suburb of the capital, which refused to present an official address to the King, reading:

"Welcome. We Want Home Rule." The lord mayor of Dublin, whose threat that he would present an address to his majesty despite the contrary decision of the corporation, it was feared would lead to trouble, remained at home.

The royal yacht Victoria and Albert, having on board their majesties, the Prince of Wales and Princess Mary, anchored in Kingstown harbor last evening. Today the royal party entered the capital. They were received on shore by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland and were driven in state carriages to the castle, where appointments had been especially prepared.

MADE A HOLIDAY.

The occasion was made a holiday and the streets were crowded. Students from Trinity College gathered in force on College Green and gave their majesties an enthusiastic welcome. The threatened counter demonstration did not occur. The majority of those who looked on did not so much as raise their hats at the approach of the imperial ones, and as soon as the procession had passed the crowd walked quietly away.

The Nationalists adopted a passively friendly attitude. They did not participate in the official receptions, but did not interfere with them. They decorated their premises always, however, with Irish flags. If more than one flag was shown the second was the American emblem, so there was a liberal display of Stars and Stripes. In the general decoration there was a discreet intermingling of orange and green.

CROWDS ARE QUIET.

The police kept quietly in the background, the soldiers doing the work ordinarily entrusted to the police force. There was little of this work to be done.

The King's speech in reply to the greeting at Kingstown, in which he said: "I and the Queen hastened to the Irish people, in whose welfare our interests are deep and abiding," had the effect of establishing an immediate friendship between their majesties and the crowd filling the streets.

OFFICER TAKES LEAVE.
SAN FRANCISCO, July 8. — J. Burke, chief officer of the Hanalei, has taken a month's leave of absence, during which time he will take an examination for master's papers. The temporary vacancy has been filled by Second Officer O. Baumgartner.

PRESIDENT CLEARS PORT.
SAN FRANCISCO, July 8. — The Pacific coast steamer President, Captain Thomas, sailed for Seattle and Puget Sound ports today, full up with both passengers and freight.

The resolution has been referred to the committee on rules, which will give it immediate attention. It requests the production by the president of all letters, telegrams and other papers that may serve to throw any light upon the reason for issuing the executive order.

MISS MURIEL ADAMS SCORES ONCE MORE IN GREEK THEATER RECITAL

Artiste Displays Her Wonderful Talent Before Crowd

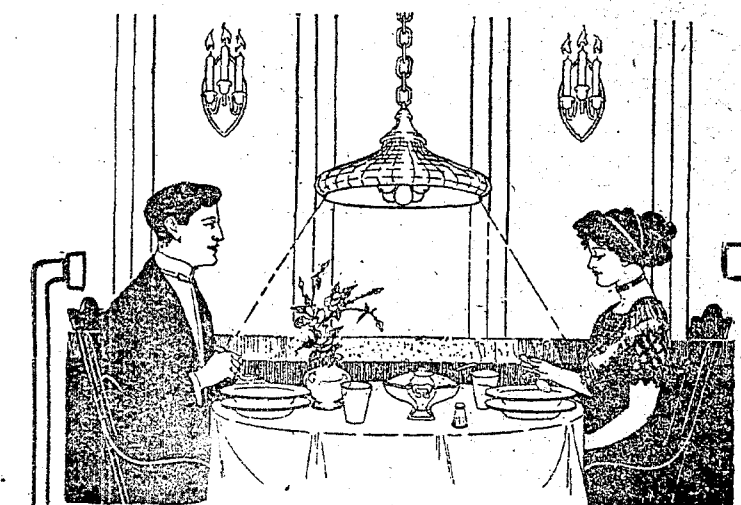

E. H. CLARK, violinist, whose playing delighted the guests at Mrs. Lincoln Church's musicale.

(By DOROTHY PEPPY.)
The Hearst Greek Theater was comfortably filled last Sunday with local folk who gathered to hear the talented violinist, Miss Muriel Adams, who played with her usual mellowness of tone and with an understanding of the works of several of the great composers.
She was assisted by Burton Sampson, violinist, and Miss Lola G. Gwin, accompanist. The ambitious program offered was as follows:
Largo, from Concerto for two violins.
J. S. Bach
Sol: (a) "Rondeau in G Major," Beethoven
(b) "Rondeau in G Major," Beethoven
Concerto, D Major, Wilhelmj-Paganini
HINRICHS RECITAL SUCCESS.
August Hinrichs, violinist and orchestra director of the Liberty theater, with two violin students, gave a most enjoyable hour of music at Ebell hall, on Thursday evening. The vocalist for the evening was Miss Ruth MacKenzie, contralto, daughter of Prof. John W. MacKenzie, who won the praise of Madame Calve upon her last visit here.
The program was keenly appreciated and consisted of the following numbers:
Piano Quartet
Piano, Miss Irene Lloyd; violin, Edwyn Arnold; viola, Victor Schott; violoncello, A. W. Black (pupil of Wm. Wertsch).
Violin solo, "Polonaise Brillante," Wieniawski.
Songs—
(a) "Good-bye," Toast
(b) "My Little Old Lady," Neidinger
Ruth MacKenzie
(Hazel S. MacKenzie at the piano).
Violin solo, "Legende," Wieniawski.
(Miss Myrtle Ward, accompanist).
Trío, "Andante and Rondo," Haydn
Piano, Miss Irene Lloyd; violin, Edwyn Arnold; violoncello, A. W. Black.
ORGAN RECITAL SERIES.
Louis H. Eaton, organist of Trinity church, San Francisco, will give the first of a series of four summer organ recitals at the First Presbyterian church in Berkeley the evening of July 11, under the auspices of the summer session committee. Other prominent organists will be heard during the summer.

PROGRAM ENJOYED.
One of the most enjoyable musical programs given in a long time was heard by 200 guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Church in Town and Gown hall this week.
The violinist whose playing delighted his hearers was E. H. Clark of Los Angeles, formerly of this city, who spent five years studying abroad and who is now on his way to Montana for a vacation trip.
The program opened with the quintette by Sinding, played by Clark, W. A. Clark Jr. violin; Charles Heinzen, viola; Arthur Weiss, cello. It is very seldom we hear Sinding played as it was performed then. The ensemble was perfect and the instruments blended well.
Miss Esther R. Church in rendering her number, "The Meditation," from Thais, by Massenet, and the Polonaise Op. 40 by Chopin, showed talent, and a bright future for the young pianist is predicted. For the encore Miss Church played "Lucia di Lammermoor," entirely with the left hand.
Clark in rendering his violin numbers, adagio by Ries and the Serenade by Brdla, showed wonderful tone, and it is an assured fact that he stands with the best violinists of California. He played on the beautiful Thomas Jefferson "Anita" violin. Clark and Clark Jr. played two beautiful numbers for two violins, A. Laigretto by Mozart and Andante by Schubert. W. A. Clark Jr. plays with the feeling and skill of a professional. He is the proud possessor of the "Amati" violin, and also a beautiful Maggini instrument. The piano parts were played by Thomas Wilde, who is an ideal accompanist. The closing number, A Sonata Op. 24, by Sogran, played by Miss Esther Church and Clark, was beautifully rendered, and gave the audience an opportunity of hearing the new sonata for violin and piano, which was the rage in Europe last winter.

Why Actresses Never Grow Old

(Theatrical World.)
Nothing concerning the profession seems more puzzling to the dear old public than the perpetual youth of our feminine members. How often we hear remarks like, "Why, I saw her as Juliet forty years ago and she doesn't look a year older now!" Of course, allowance is made for make-up, but when they see us off the stage at close range, they need another explanation.
How strange women generally haven't learned the secret of keeping the face young! How simple a matter to get an ounce of mercerized wax at the drug store, apply it like cold cream, and in the morning wash it off. We know how this gradually, imperceptibly absorbs old cuticle, keeping the complexion new and fresh, free from fine lines, sallowness or over-redness. We know, too, that this mercerized wax is the reason actresses don't wear moth patches, liver spots, pimples and the like. Why don't our sisters on the other side of the footlights learn the reason, and profit by it?

Did You Ever Think About It?

When you flood your apartment with brilliant light—when you create intense and instantaneous heat, such as no coal fire can give you, do you realize the forethought, the labor, the energy, the capital that goes into the organization that enables you to accomplish these things by the mere pressing of a button or the lighting of a match?

The Oakland Gas, Light and Heat Company represents an investment of $10,000,000 and years of development. It is a big, modern power plant in every sense of the word and its function is to furnish you with reliable and economical gas and electric service.

united with the singer's dramatic ability, electrified his audience.
Mrs. Grace Davis Northrup, on the same program, sang two groups of songs with delightful style and finish. Arthur Foote and Miss Anna Miller Wood were enthusiastically received Friday afternoon, when a series of the Foote compositions were given.
Thursday afternoon's program was especially good, when a recital of American Indian music was given by Charles Wakefield Cadman, with vocal illustrations, delightfully rendered by Mrs. Willis N. Tiffany of Los Angeles.
An address on "Chamber Music Composers," illustrated by quintette for piano and strings in C minor, was given by Herman Perlet in masterly fashion and received much applause.
The singing of Miss Caroline Holstead Little of this city on the opening night was the feature of the evening's program.
Miss Little sang with rare art a group of songs from Schubert, Schuman and Brahms, and received enthusiastic applause. The organ recital given on Thursday and Friday afternoon by William B. King and Dr. H. J. Stewart were deeply enjoyed and musicians on both sides of the bay are highly gratified at the remarkable success of their three days' session.

CONVENTION SUCCESS.

The music teachers' convention held in San Francisco closed Friday amid much enthusiasm and with a splendid program.
The three days' convention has been a great success, attended by large numbers, all of whom could not find accommodations in Century Hall and dozens of music lovers stood during the programs of song and instrumental music offered during the day and evening sessions. It is hard to say which day's program proved most attractive. Especial delight was manifested at the magnificent singing of Alexander Heilmann on the program for Friday evening.
Heilmann is a European and is but spending a month or two in San Francisco during the summer. He possesses a rich baritone voice of tremendous strength and capable of marvelous tone coloring, which

MANY OAKLANDERS INSPECT NEW CARS

P-A-Y-E Type Appears Designed to Be Popular Locally.

Many people took advantage of the opportunity afforded yesterday by the Oakland Traction Company to inspect the new pay-as-you-enter type street cars which were placed on exhibition at Twelfth and at Eighth streets and Broadway in anticipation of the new schedule which will go into operation on those lines tomorrow morning, thereby affording additional service both in respect to time and convenience for the traveling public. Operators in charge demonstrated the advantages of the new cars, and from the general opinion expressed by all those who boarded them, the P-A-Y-E car will be a success in this city from the very first.
It is the claim of the company officials that passengers can more readily be handled and with augmented safety by the patented devices at each end of the car providing for the opening and closing of gates when the car is at a standstill. At each end there is an exit, while passengers may board only at the rear and on the off side, out of danger of cars running in the opposite direction. The conductor stands near the gate and collects the fares as each passenger passes to the interior of the car. Change to the amount of $5 will be given if necessary, but it is the request of the company management that for the convenience of all concerned, passengers always have the correct change ready.

DOGS ARE BARRED.

As the rear platform will always be utilized, persons will not be allowed to stand thereon, nor will large bundles or freight of any description be permitted. Dogs also are barred from riding on the P-A-Y-E cars. The interior is spacious and it is claimed that travel will be more comfortable to the passengers in this type than in any other service at the present time. Three compartments are included in the seating capacity, with the seats arranged along the sides. There is also a spacious standing room, and in a crowded car persons will not be inconvenienced nor crowded by the conductor passing through to collect fares.

Electric push buttons arranged in convenient places will signal for stops. Smoking will be permitted in the front compartment, and all other rules of the company as heretofore in force will be adhered to, it being the aim of the management to give the best service possible. By the first of next month it is expected that sixty of the new cars will be in operation.

POLICE CAPTAIN SEES NAUTICAL EXHIBITION

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—For the first time since he was transferred to take charge of the Harbor Police Station, Captain M. O. Anderson made an official inspection today of the department's property along the waterfront. Whether Engineer J. Lattimore of the police launch patrol had been informed of the inspection or not is not known, but when Anderson arrived at the float where the craft is moored, "Red" was fully prepared. Although the launch possesses numerous fittings of brass, the closest scrutiny failed to reveal a single spot that did not shine resplendent in the clear sunshine.
"Now," said Anderson after casting an admiring glance over the natty craft.

SONS OF ST. GEORGE TO GREET DELEGATES

The regular meeting of Albion Lodge No. 205, Sons of St. George, was held last Wednesday evening. There was a large attendance and business and pleasure occupied the entire evening.

The committee on the local coronation celebration reported that the event had been a great success from all points of view.

A committee was appointed to take charge of an Oakland Day for the Grand Lodge Convention, which convenes in San Francisco in August. Plans are being made to show the visitors from all over the coast the beauties of Oakland and vicinity.

An Unusual Sale of Women's Suits $19.75 Monday at "Unusual" is the only word to describe this offering for Monday. It is unusual in the character of the merchandise, in the tailoring and material of the suits, in the excellence of styles, and decidedly it is unusual in the values. There are about 150 of these suits, the majority of them Tailored Styles, but a number of smart Trimmed Models in the collection.

Black and white half-line stripes; mannish mixtures in coarse, rough weaves; hard finished worsteds in pretty grays, in striped and mixed effects; navy blue serges and solid color fabrics and novelty weaves. All of them are beautifully lined, and the tailoring in every respect is up to the usual standard of excellence of this house. None of these have been priced on special sale at less than $25, and many of them have been $30 and $35. All sizes are in the lot and a splendid choice awaits you tomorrow at $19.75

Physician's Wife WINS BOUT AT Cigarette Smoking

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—I notice that Charlie Clarke at last came through with his $5000 for the San Mateo Elks. Evidently Charlie was in a parting mood, for generally it is not easy to part with his father's hard-fought money.

I know, in fact, he must have been in an easy mood. I was down at the Hotel Del Monte and he was expected there. The days came and the night trains were heard to ring in and ring out. But no Clarke came.

But do you think he was missed and mourned? Well, hardly, old top. There came to be recognized a regular colloquy at the hotel desk. The dashing Mrs. Clarke was a Miss Tobin, you know. She'd come down in a fetching gown and asked:

"Anything been heard of my husband yet?"

"Nothing yet, Mrs. Clarke."

"Well, then I'll have a game of golf."

And When I Smoke I Always Smoke With Billy

Down at the Hotel Del Monte the crowd who overflowed the great old place had much to talk about in the matter of a smoking contest. It was a combat in puffery between a lady and a gentleman, and the tales of prowess that are told are quite enough to keep the curiosity of many on edge.

The lady in the case is the wife of a well known physician. The gentleman is an artist of repute. Apparently there had been some sort of challenge for a combat in nicotine.

In any event the artist disappeared. His friends cannot find him. But to the apartment of the lady were sent, in three days, 600 cigarettes. There also were several bottles of whisky, but no food. And they say that when the servants came to clean up the three days' smoking bout the cigarette butts were inches deep.

The artist admitted that the physician's wife had won.

While the Plumber Was a Hero

During the recent pageant at Carmel-by-the-Sea, that haunt of culture, culturette and culturine experienced its first theft. The housekeeper at the inn heard a strange noise and traced it to a room. Entering she found a man in a closet. He was kneeling on the floor.

She screamed first and then asked the natural question:

"What are you doing here?"

"Oh, don't mind me. I'm only the plumber."

The housekeeper went her way. That night it was found that many articles of value and vertu had been stolen. Then the housekeeper told the story of the man in the closet who had said:

"Oh, don't mind me. I'm only the plumber."

"But didn't you know the plumber was Don Diego Millaflores in the pageant?"

Sure enough the plumber was in cuirass and helmet. The barber was the only Carmel functionary who was not a part of the pageant. He went over to Monterey and the story goes that he came back with the most artistic one seen that day in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

In the Days of Brazenhead the Great

They sat at the Bohemian club and talked first of Maurice Hewlett's new melodramatic novel called "Brazenhead the Great." It isn't much of a novel notwithstanding the praises of the critics. But the hero is a great drinker as well as a swashbuckler, and the talk naturally turned to drinking and capacity.

"Oscar Wilde put it all over us," said a venerable trencherman, combing the locks of his memory. "When he came here in the '80s he was in his Bunthorne mood—the lily and the sunflower always with him. So we thought it would be great fun to put the esthete under the table. We had him up to a jinks and sicked our best drinkers on him."

"Well, sir, that lily fellow just bowled over our chaps one by one. He conquered them in relays. Then when all were done he called for his coat and hat and walked blithely to his hotel."

Glad He Hadn't Indulged

"And do you remember that giant Englishman who was up at the Midsummer Jinks a few years before the fire?" asked another.

"Winthrop?"

"Yes, that's the chap—Winthrop. He had a girl like Falstaff and was equally merry and powerful. We tried some of our hearty drinkers on him and he laid them away. Then Dan O'Connell, who was about the best we had, was pitted against him. Dan hung on until it was pitiful. He had to be carried off. Winthrop drank about another pint and went to bed.

"The next morning the big Englishman was disporting himself gaily in the swimming pool. A man who had seen the bout of the night before said to him:

"Winthrop, you seem in fine fettle this morning."

"Yes, thank heaven I didn't drink much last night."

His Experience With Dude in Politics

"Did you ever run up against the dude—speaking of the capacity of human tanks?"

It was a Southern California member speaking, and he had a note of sorrow in his voice. Then he related this:

"When I was doing Democratic politics in Los Angeles with the late Senator Stephen M. White and George S. Patton we had a hard fight on to capture our delegation to the state convention in this city. In looking over the field I picked out a young dude named Gaty Pallen and ran him through as one of our delegates. He was an exquisite of the club and drawing rooms and utterly new to politics."

"When we got to San Francisco the fight grew warmer and we began to count noses carefully. Every vote counted, and I found that Pallen was just a bit shaky—inclined to go over to the other side. I thought that the way to hold him was to fill him up and get him away from the other side's workers."

"So I set my best drinkers against him at the Palace bar. But when I got around a few hours later he had laid them all away in moth balls and hadn't a mark on him anywhere. So I said to myself:

"This is no boy's work. I'll have to tackle Gaty myself."

"In those days I thought I could go against almost any man. But do you know that that dude put me to bed at a Turkish bath, borrowed $300 from me that I wouldn't have given up had I been normal, and then voted against me the next day."

A Good Ad For Oakland

The Southern Pacific was a good deal put to it to handle the Fourth of July crowds up and down our peninsula, and some of its makeshifts caused merriment or chagrin according as the matter was looked at. Many of the passengers in some of the cars in use felt unfamiliar and began to ascertain the reason for the feeling.

They ran their eyes around the cars and found that all the advertisements were unusual. They couldn't make out the firms or the street locations. Then their eyes taking in more of the advertisements they came to this in large letters:

"Buy all your goods in Oakland."

Then it dawned upon them that the railroad had been forced to levy on some of your transbay cars during the rush season on this side. But your merchants got some good advertising out of the necessity.

The Turkey Trot at Santa Cruz

Some time ago I wrote that while the dancing of the "turkey trot" was prohibited at Venice it had been permitted at the opening of the Casa del Mar at Santa Cruz. Perhaps that stirred Santa Cruz for at the dances during the whoop-up of the Fourth there was an industrious effort to stop the trotters.

There was a general success at shutting off the attempted wriggling by San Francisco clubmen, but in one case there was a conspicuous failure. An unusually large and graceful man occasionally swung into the trot and then just laughed good-naturedly when told to stop.

Finally Fred Swanton himself was sent for and appeared upon the scene. He made one or two efforts to check the grinning giant and then gave it up.

"It's no use," he sighed. "That's Big Bill Lange, and he's a law unto himself."

When Nat First Met Maxine

At the Family one of the men about town was gossiping over Nat Goodwin's book on "Why Beautiful Women Marry Nat Goodwin," and he told this:

"I met Nat just after his first meeting with the beautiful Maxine Elliott. It was at Delmonico's in New York, and as I entered with big Edgar Murphy, who was called 'The Irish Giant,' we spied Nat at a table and sat with him. Of course he soon began to yarn and said:

"I've just had a peculiar experience. I am looking for a leading lady for my next season and a friend recommended a woman of his acquaintance. So I called on her this afternoon. She received me reclining on a sort of Recamier couch, and I saw as beautiful a creature as I ever looked at."

"When I talked with her I found that her experience and training were all right, and I made up my mind that I would meet her terms as to salary. By the time I was ready to go I had about concluded that the leading lady problem was solved. But as I rose to go that beauty started to rise.

"Well, she kept getting up and getting up and getting up. Why, I couldn't have reached her with a step ladder. So I said:

"Madam, it's all off between us. My making love to you would look like Admiral Dot (the then famous dwarf) sparring with big Edgar Murphy."

"But for all of that the next thing we knew Nat had not only engaged Maxine as his leading lady, but had married her."

Democrats Are Busy

The Democratic candidates for President of the United States are not overlooking California as a field from which to gather delegates to the National Nominating Convention. They have had their agents here for some time and an extensive correspondence is being conducted. Governor Judson Harmon, through his campaign manager, Lieutenant-Governor Nichols of Ohio, has secured the names and addresses of the members of the California Democratic State Central Committee, the county committees of that party and also of fifteen hundred leading Bourbons of this, the Golden State.

Secretary John Murray of the State Committee has been kept busy supplying the Presidential aspirants with information desired by them. Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, through his campaign bureau, is also conducting an extensive correspondence in this State with a view to advancing his Presidential ambitions. Governor Marshall of Indiana is also making inquiries in California through his representatives.

Champ Clark, too, has his active supporters at work here. Congressman John E. Raker of Modoc, California's only Democratic representative, is classed as a Clark man. Raker has been treated very nicely by Speaker Clark and is grateful therefor.

Through his and other political instrumentalities Clark will have a number of warm friends in the California delegation. Clark, however, does not appear to be making the aggressive personal campaign that is being put up by the other candidates. Raker, as things stand, naturally is a strong man in the Democratic party in California and should there ever be any Federal patronage for the Bourbon faithful in this State he will have a voice in its distribution.

Notwithstanding the activities of Harmon's representatives, recent gossip from the east has it that the Governor of Ohio will not be a candidate before the National Convention for President. Whether this be a groundless rumor or not it is of interest in this neck of the woods, where the Governor of Ohio has generally been regarded as a strong candidate for Democratic Presidential honors, such as they may prove to be. The tattle from the National Capital runs that Champ Clark is to be the favorite son of the National Democracy in the present campaign.

Republicans Wait Instructions

If the Republicans are making any preliminary moves in a campaign for President Taft in this State they are doing so without any blare of trumpets or tinkling of cymbals. After the adjournment of the last Congress and the return of Representative McKinlay as Surveyor of the Port, it was told, without reservation, that he had arrived with full credentials to take charge of the Taft campaign in California.

This was followed by a long and deep growl from George A. Knight, Republican National Committeeman for California, who entered protest that the Federal brigade must not make themselves conspicuous in the national canvass, as such a course would be detrimental to the interests of President Taft. Whichever as the result of Knight's "kick" or for some other cause, I am credibly informed that McKinlay was "called down" from Washington, D. C.

Then there was talk of the selection of a Taft campaign committee for California, the members to be selected from among good Republicans known to be friendly to the President and his re-election, regardless of previous factional association. If any action has been taken on this line it has not been made public. National Committeeman Knight was at his ranch in Mendocino county last week. Not a peep has been heard from the Federal officials since McKinlay and his associates in the preliminary foray sought their cyclone cellars.

Probably a long campaign is not favored by the National leaders of the Republican party at Washington, D. C. The National Committee will meet in Chicago next December and a plan of campaign will be made known at that time. In the meanwhile enthusiastic supporters of Taft are chafing at the restraint of delay, but all concede that the Republican national campaign is in able hands and that whatever is being done is for the best interests of the party and its candidate for President.

The Municipal Campaign

The only local political organizations that are displaying any activity in the municipal campaign are the Union Labor party and the Municipal Conference of 1911. The leaders of the former have announced that it will place a full municipal ticket in the field with P. H. McCarthy at its head for Mayor.

The Municipal Conference has established headquarters in the Mills building and is proceeding with preliminary details of the canvass, such as following the registration and keeping informed as to the selection of precinct election officers and other matters that may prove material, if not vital, in the campaign. While this organization will confine itself to a ticket with James Rolph Jr. as its candidate for Mayor and eighteen candidates for Supervisor, the outlook is for its making an active campaign for this ticket.

The indications also point to the Municipal Conference being liberally financed, some of the quasi public and private interests that have heretofore contributed to the campaign funds of the old-time political organizations already giving signs of sympathy with this movement.

The Republican and Democratic county committees have undertaken to fuse. Thus far they have agreed upon Rolph for Mayor and candidates for all but two of the city and county offices. They are, however, at loggerheads over the ticket for Supervisors, eighteen of whom are to be elected. Fred G. Sanborn, chairman of the Republican county body, and Gavin McNab, the recognized representative of the Democrats, are conferring or dickering over this ticket, but to date seem to rather be pulling apart than harmonizing.

Fusion in Jeopardy

The Republicans are becoming restless in their desire to complete their ticket, while McNab for the Democrats expresses the opinion that the middle or last of August will be ample early to begin a canvass for a primary election which will be held September 26th. Two separate tickets for Supervisors are as likely to result from this pulling and hauling of the long-time political opponents as a fusion product.

A number of peace clubs of the non-partisan variety have announced their readiness to do business at new and at old stands, from which they have conducted "independent" campaigns for years. The number of the gullible among even those who indulge in the game of politics and assume to have a large measure of sagacity is indicated by the cleaning up of $9000 by two confidence operators in the last campaign who assumed to represent the young voters of the city.

This year numerous devices are being adopted to deceive both the voters and the candidates. One of the former character is the furnishing of an opportunity for the electors to hear all the candidates and judge for themselves those that are preferable, after which a ticket is to be made up on the representations that it is the choice of the electors, whereas, it is composed of those who make the highest bids to the schemers for places on it.

The field of candidates is so large under the latest primary law that the manipulators of the new system of nomination expect that this trap for the unwary will yield them large money returns.

"Red" Hayes Aspires to Toga

Although the present term of United States Senator George C. Perkins will not expire until March 4, 1915, the talk of activities on the part of Congressman E. A. Hayes, who aspires to succeed to the toga of the senior Senator, increases in volume as time passes.

It is understood among the politicians that Hayes' campaign manager is none other than that celebrated California Warwick, "Sad-Eye" Jimmie Kelly, long-time of San Jose, but recently a resident of Los Angeles, and who was once officially recorded and known as Secretary of the State Railroad Commission.

The attempted making of United States Senators is neither a new task or a novel pleasure with Kelly, although the star of his success has never shone with great effulgence. Other things being equal, however, "Sad-Eye" was always a willing worker in the vineyard of his specially chosen candidate. Kelly's first essay as a manufacturer and dealer in togas was in behalf of General M. H. de Young.

Kelly's next attempt to make a United States Senator had for its subject U. S. Grant Jr., son of the great war general and a resident of San Diego. In this experiment "Sad-Eye" had the able aid of Walter Bacon, then of Los Angeles, but now a practicing attorney of San Francisco. The toga was again elusive, but the experience cost Grant many thousands, said to have been at least $75,000, from the time he placed his campaign in charge of Kelly until all the bills were paid.

During the last State campaign "Sad-Eye" dallied with the Curry canvass in Los Angeles, but it has been a long time since Kelly has cavorted about a real supple Senatorial leg.

Congressman Hayes is reputed to be somewhat close in routine business matters, but when his own political ambitions are in the scales his liberality is averred to exceed that of an exhilarated marine on shore leave. Hence it is that "Sad-Eye" is regarded with envy by campaign managers, out of employment, and who declare that Kelly has a "good thing," and so has "Red" Hayes.

La Follette's Boomlet

As an incident of the attempt to create a boom for La Follette in California, Governor Hiram Johnson and Chetser Rowell of Fresno—Chet, not the Doctor and former State Senator—have been holding some very secret and deeply mysterious interviews with prominent Democrats. These conferences were, of course, of the most confidential and bindingly private character. The object of those calling them was to advance the La Follette political interests.

Johnson and Rowell are said to have informed their conferees that the Wisconsin Senator and his supporters had captured the National Republican organization and that the benighted Bourbons had better get aboard the band wagon before it is too late.

The Governor and Chet are reported to have been deeply chagrined to find that there was no great scramble among the Bourbons to secure seats among the La Follette musical instruments. Even a suggestion that if the disciples of Jefferson did not secure reservations on the wagon at once they might not be able to do so when the campaign became further advanced did not create a panic among the Democrats.

The fact is, the Democrats of this State, notwithstanding their political environment of two Republicans to one of their own party followers, believe, or pretend to believe, that they see in the present situation an opportunity to elect a Democratic President of the United States. Hence their lack of eagerness to listen to the songs of the La Follette sirens.

Boss Lissner Unhorsed

Politicians recently from Southern California report that Meyer Lissner has been completely unhorsed and no longer occupies the saddle as boss of that section of the State and Los Angeles in particular. During the brief period of his reign Lissner sat close and rode hard, ruling as with an iron hand. But they tell me that he is, now in the down-and-out class.

According to the general report the main contributing cause to the cropper that the little boss of Los Angeles recently came was Mayor Alexander. The latter appears to have become a keener politician than Lissner. The heretofore subservient Mayor had so developed as an understudy of the boss that he has crowded the former dictator of his political policies off the public boards.

I am told that the rates fixed by Lissner as chairman of the municipal board of public utilities for electric lighting, telephone and power were fair to the corporations, but involving an advance of the current rate for those utilities. The increase fell heaviest upon the small consumers or customers of the public utility corporations, who complained bitterly. Mayor Alexander, it is told, was not slow to see that the small rate-takers were in a large majority and he quickly aligned himself with them, he being a candidate for reelection.

Lissner's recommended rates were rejected, greatly to the satisfaction of the citizens whose bills were to have been increased and now it is said that Alexander is sure of reelection next fall, although Lissner's Good Government League, of which Alexander was a product, has gone to smash by reason of the little boss' downfall and the discord in its ranks that followed.

The life of a political boss, as such, is not usually of great length, but Lissner seems to have secured the record for brevity of leadership.

That Immigration Commissioner

The Washington, D. C., dispatches of two weeks ago indicated that Senators Perkins and Works had agreed upon General Samuel W. Backus to succeed Hart North as Immigration Commissioner at the Port of San Francisco. The wires published in the local press during the week just closed seem to show that the General has gone the way of his predecessors who aspired to this office. A late dispatch says that the two Senators have been able to agree upon but one appointment, that being Mrs. Mary S. Rutherford, a relative of Assemblyman Rutherford of Nevada county, for Postmistress at Truckee.

In the Federal political chatter here a story has circulated that an attempt is being made to secure the appointment of General Backus with the proviso that Harry Edsall, one of the attaches of the office at the present time, be made Assistant Commissioner, the latter to be the practical head of the department, performing all the duties of Commissioner except the drawing of the salary of that official, which arduous duty would devolve on General Backus. Should this plan be executed Edsall, so it is said in Federal circles, will be the special and compromise representative of Commissioner General Keefe.

Whatever the outcome of the contention over this office may be, the filling of the vacancy has caused more wire-pulling, correspondence and confabulation than has the appointing of any Federal official of recent date. Among the most active skirmishers in this battle for place have been the so-called Chinese lawyers, otherwise those attorneys having Chinese practice in the Federal courts, some of whom are closely related to Federal officials.

One rumor that will not down, and is repeatedly heard where Federal officials congregate, is that the resignation of Hart North, the suspended Immigration

Commissioner, has not yet been accepted at Washington.

Sutherland a Good Spender

A private cablegram from London announces the death in that city of Colonel W. J. Sutherland, a mining promoter and engineer whose massive figure was very much in evidence at the Palace Hotel prior to ten years ago. Sutherland operated both in Nevada and Alaska, and it was remarkable how he spent money when his pocket-book was plethoric and how, when in financial straits, he would hie himself to London with a lot of mining stocks and get more coin. When "broke" his friends always knew the colonel was due for another London trip. On one occasion a private car in which he was taking some of his British investors to see his mine at Candalaria, Nev., was detained by legal process because he owed a debt of $15,000 to a lawyer named A. C. Ellis, now of Salt Lake. Sam Davis, the well-known newspaper man of Carson, was foreman of the grand jury at the time. With the assistance of Davis, Ellis refused to let the colonel leave the State until he produced $7000 in part payment of the debt. The men came near having a duel. It is said the colonel had to borrow the money from one of his guests before he could mollify Ellis and proceed back to this city. The colonel had many staunch friends in this city and was one of the best epicures this goodly town has ever harbored. Always gallant and popular with women, the colonel at times would indulge in a whimsical cynicism against the fair sex by telling in his own inimitable Scotch way about a book agent who tried to sell one of his countrymen a volume about a hundred different ways in which to attract women. The intended victim remarked that he knew personally two hundred ways in which to attract women. What he wanted to know most of all was how to get rid of them.

Why Butler Is Detained

There is much disappointment that Nicholas Murry Butler, the president of Columbia University, is not able to attend the convention in this city of the National Education Association. Butler, who is a former president of the organization and one of its brilliant members, has troubles in his university faculty which are keeping him home. Harry Thurston Peck, who, I believe, was recently suspended from the faculty because of a suit for breach of promise against him following his wife's action in divorcing him, has stirred up a lot of strife for Butler. Peck not long ago charged he was the author of an address in Latin which the president of the university delivered on a formal occasion some months before. Peck is an able man and has some following, but local people familiar with the case think Butler will triumph in the end. It was the ex-wife of Peck who, in speaking of him on one occasion, called him an "ink maniac." She said she meant by this that he had an irresistible desire to write letters, and it was not surprising that some woman should produce burning love epistles from him.

He Was Ambitious

Humboldt Gates, well known in many mining camps, has tabooed the swagger life and is taking a course in law and political science under private tuition at Stanford University this summer. During his spare time, Gates is a guest at the St. Francis. Both in Alaska and Nevada, this young fellow made a goodly fortune some seven or ten years ago. Since that time he has been educating himself alone and by private tutors. He hails from Humboldt county, this State, and his friends say he is preparing for both a legal and political career. Gates is represented as having watched the careers of some of the favorite sons of Humboldt and thinks he can achieve at least some part of the success they have had. He has watched such men as George A. Knight and former Governor J. N. Gillett, who have come out of Humboldt; also United States District Judge De Haven and former State Senator Frank McGowan. His friends are encouraging him in his ambition and plan to help him into the legislature from Humboldt when he feels ready to commence a political career.

Prince a Fine Host

Prince Cupid, territorial delegate from Hawaii to Congress, did not attend the prize fight on the Fourth. He arrived from the East en route home from Washington the Friday before. The next day a cable message from the princess, his wife, was received begging him not to remain over for the pugilistic affair but to sail on Monday, the 3d, for home. He and twenty-five of his Hawaiian friends in town had a joyful time before he left. They had a dinner last Saturday night, he being the host, and nothing was too good or expensive in the eating and drinking line. The pleasant, gentlemanly prince was toasted to his heart's content and modestly received such salutations as "the next governor of Hawaii" and "the first Senator when Hawaii shall have been admitted to the sisterhood of States." A rollicking automobile ride out to the beach resorts was the finale of the night's entertainment. Since the extra session of Congress opened the prince has only been in his seat in the House ten days. His financial affairs are now said to be in splendid shape.

It Was Climate

It remained for Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix of the Methodist Church to tell a new story about California climate. The bishop, who lives at Kansas City, is an able, eloquent and dignified personage. He was here recently in attendance at the convention of the International Sunday School Association. In a pleasant introductory to one of his evening addresses at the Coliseum the bishop told of an enthusiast Californian who happened on one occasion to be talking to a German who was partial to Chicago. The man from the Golden State told of peaches out here so large that a wheelbarrow would only hold one.

"How's dot?" asked Hans, the German, in surprise.

"Climate," was the answer.

The Californian, easily warming up to his subject, went on to tell how pumpkins out here were so large that a wagon would hold but two.

"How's dot?" again inquired the astonished Teuton.

"Climate," was the strongly given answer.

"Well in Chicago," blurted out Hans in an effort not to be outdone by any man from California, "we has twenty-story buildings mit no elevators."

"My goodness, Hans," said the man from the Golden West, surprised in turn, "how do you get up into them?"

"Climit," was Hans dogmatic and quick-rejoinder.

Glass Making a Success

Louis Glass, the telephone magnate, is in the Philippines preparing for extensions to the telephone system which he and other San Franciscans own in the islands. The company has several millions of capital and it is finding that the Filipinos are rapidly acquiring the telephone habit. About 5000 subscribers now use the system and the company is earning annually a good net income. It is expected that the number of subscribers during the new fiscal year will be increased to 10,000. Only a part of the island of Luzon is now covered by the system. In time it is planned to bring all of the principal islands into the service by the long-distance arrangement in vogue in the United States. Some of the San Franciscans who originally went into this investment with Glass and who still are associated with him in the enterprise are Henry J. Crocker, Homer S. King, Edward and John Coleman, Charles J. Deering, A. L. Lengfeld, J. O'B. Gunn, I. W. Hellman, John Martin, Percy T. Morgan and Charles H. Crocker. The young Filipino girl rapidly becomes an expert "hello girl" like her American sister, say officials of the company.

Presents of Sketches

Mrs. Larz Anderson of Washington, D. C., has been presenting Mrs. Eleanor Martin and several other of her society women friends here with some of her art sketches. They are said to display much artistic ability. Mrs. Anderson before her marriage was considered the richest heiress in all New England and comes from one of the old Boston families. Her husband is a grandson of the Major Anderson in charge of Fort Sumter when it was fired upon by the Confederates at the outbreak of the civil war. Mrs. Anderson has visited this city several times, the last occasion being when she was a member of Secretary of War Dickinson's party en route to the Philippines and around the world. On the occasion of her first visit she was entertained by Mrs. Eleanor Martin along with the then Alice Roosevelt and Miss Mabel Boardman. Local friends of Miss Boardman are pleased to see where she has been given an honorary degree of master of arts by Yale University, she being the second woman to receive that honor in the history of the university. Miss Boardman was given this honor for her work in connection with the Red Cross. She had some of the work of that organization to do at the time of the San Francisco disaster in 1906.

Tall Hat and Short Coat

The Prince and Princess Croy of Paris, who were here a few days ago, had their ideas of the artistic in dress shocked at seeing so many men on the streets wearing straw hats and overcoats. According to their Parisian taste about the fitness of men's wearing apparel nothing can excuse the combination of a winter garment with straw summer headgear. Prince Croy, who admitted he was finicky in matters of dress and who in his clothes could be said to be faultless, remarked that such a style was as execrable as wearing a tall or plug hat with a short coat. He related a popular French story about the latter combination of apparel in splendid English. A handsome, athletic young fellow at one of the French bathing resorts had heroically rescued from the water the only and idolized daughter of a rich merchant of the bourgeois class. The father could not express his gratitude and wanted to do all sorts of things for the hero of the episode.

"Name anything," he kept repeating.

The hero, who prided himself on knowing what was proper in the way of dress, was shocked to see the father of the young woman in high hat and short coat. Turning to him in all seriousness he replied:

"All I ask of you is don't, please don't, wear that kind of a hat with that kind of a coat, and I will feel amply repaid for whatever service I may have rendered your pretty daughter."

Case of Red Tape

There is talk about an unusual case of red tape at the Mare Island navy yard. A few days ago a lot of ingot copper, said to be worth $80,000, was found under the floor of one of the foundries. The present regime at the navy yard was surprised to stumble on this hidden and valuable lot of material. One navy officer in quietly talking about the matter last night said that after an investigation it was ascertained that about five years ago these ingots were cast from scrap copper, which had accumulated in the steam engineering department. For awhile it was stored in a pile on the foundry floor and then in order that it might not be lost or stolen it was buried in a pit in the foundry by order of the late Rear Admiral Bowman H. McCalla, the commandant. No other reason is given for its burial than that "under the previous law they did not know to what appropriation to give credit, nor what to do with it, so in order to keep it from being stolen the then commandant ordered it buried." Now navy people are wondering if any more valuable material lies hidden away in order to escape the intricacies and perplexities of red tape.

Looks Bad for Depositors

Messrs. Wilson, Barnett and their confreres in New York have asked Julius Raphael, president of the Depositors' Association of the California Safe Deposit and Trust Company, for another extension of time of sixty days in which to complete their scheme to raise $1,000,000 in cash and reopen the defunct institution. They have been asking for these extensions of time ever since the middle of 1909. The bank failed in October, 1907, owing 12,000 depositors ten million dollars. Raphael says he has refused to grant another continuance unless the parties at the other end show good faith by immediately depositing $100,000. The other $900,000 he wants paid by October 1st. The first receiver of the bank, the late E. J. Le Breton, never had any hope of the bank being opened again, and the present receiver, Frank J. Symmes, is practically of the same opinion. It looks more and more now that Receiver Symmes will soon have to liquidate the institution with as little delay as possible. The indications are that the depositors will be lucky if they finally get twenty cents on the dollar. It has long been conceded that this was one of the worst bank failures in the history of the country.

Fair Attendance

Charles C. Moore, the president of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, has collected data showing the percentage of daily attendance at expositions for the past thirty-six or thirty-seven years. At all of them the daily percentage attendance, as compared with the populations of the cities in which the fairs were held, was larger than was the case with the Midwinter Fair in this city in the early nineties. In the latter case, the daily attendance was two and two-eighths of the then population of San Francisco. At Seattle it was ten per cent of the town's population. There was a similar percentage at Nashville, Atlanta, Buffalo, Portland, Ore., and even at Jamestown. The same is true when the Chicago and St. Louis fairs are studied. In fact all other fairs but our own appear to have had this ten percentage daily crowd. Why San Francisco made such a poor showing in this respect is something Moore and his fellow directors are trying to solve. In getting an answer to this problem, they, or at least most of them, think they will get light on how and where to secure an exposition site that will bring about the highest possible maximum of daily gate receipts. Moore and other strong men on the board of directors are said to take the broad view that in selecting a site the interests of all the bay cities must be taken into consideration and not solely those of this city.

Bought Keith Pictures

I understand that Sir Ernest Cassell, a London banker and financial representative of the late King Edward, and Jacob H. Schiff of New York, the nearest approach in this country to J. Pierpont Morgan in banking and financial power, have written letters to relatives of the late William Keith, the dean of California artists and its best landscape painter, expressing sympathy about his recent death. Both Cassell and Schiff bought pictures from Keith. I know Sir Ernest bought one for $2500 and Schiff paid about the same figure for another one. It was shortly after the Russo-Japanese war while they were in the city en route on a trip to Japan. Both men are art connoisseurs and had heard of the fame of Keith. They were taken at their own request to his studio, which was then over the old California Market on Pine street. A pleasant hour in chatting was spent by the artist and the two money kings. It was then that they saw what they wanted and the pictures were picked out and paid for. Schiff still has his painting in his New York City home, while the other is in the London mansion of Cassell.

Andy Lawrence's Visit

W. W. Naughton, the sporting editor of the Examiner and president of the Press Club, was given a dinner at the rooms of that institution last Wednesday night as a formal welcome home from his recent visit to Australasia. Covers were spread for some seventy gentlemen. One of the latter was A. M. Lawrence, the head man of Hearst's Chicago Examiner and formerly with the Examiner here. It is understood Naughton is to be given a second year in the presidency of the club at the approaching annual election. During the next year it is planned to create a fund with which to buy a site and build a home for the club. It is now in a more flourishing condition than ever before in its history. Lawrence, who arrived this week from the lake city to spend a two-months' vacation, denies the published report in various Eastern papers that, following his success with the election of Carter Harrison for mayor of Chicago, he desires to succeed Roger Sullivan as the member from Illinois on the Democratic National Committee. He says he has no desire for that political honor. He says he still sees the hand of Bryan here and there in Illinois, where he is strong with the farmers but weak in the cities.

THE KNAVE.

EAST AURORA SAGE WRITES OF STAGE

Discovers Local Orpheum Stagehand Is Educated

ELBERT HUBBARD, the "Sage of East Aurora," who gave the readers of THE TRIBUNE his views on various earthly and heavenly subjects while he was at the Oakland Orpheum, has made some interesting comments on the people and the scenes he found in vaudeville while touring the Orpheum circuit.

In the June number of his magazine, "The Fra," Hubbard discourses in a sprightly way of life behind the scenes on the Orpheum circuit. When he was in Oakland he wrote for THE TRIBUNE each day an article that dealt with various problems which trouble humanity. There was a vast deal of interest in the series of articles and those who were entertained by Hubbard's wit and wisdom at that time will probably peruse with interest the extracts from his latest essay on vaudeville.

Hubbard discovered that the stage hands of the Oakland Orpheum theater are an intellectual class of gentlemen. His discoveries in other theaters are equally spicy.

The following extracts are taken by permission of Fra Elbertus from the June number of his magazine. They constitute his official opinion of "My Lady Vaudeville," as he terms it:

In vaudeville you meet just fourteen audiences every week. This means, say, twenty thousand people, or more, for you never preach to the same congregation twice. A very good time to make a speech is when you have an audience.

No preacher in the world talks to as many people as I do in vaudeville. No preacher I ever saw gets as much fun out of life as I do.

No preacher in the world makes as much money as I do.

TEMPER OF THE HOUSE.

Do you say that a vaudeville audience is made up of ignorant, idle and frivolous people? If so, then they need me. Why should I pick the cultured and the educated? They know more than I do. They do not need me.

But you are wrong about a vaudeville audience—they are not an idle, trifling lot of people. They are, as a rule, active, busy, useful people. They work with their hands and head; they often have the hands that labor, the backs that carry heavy burdens, and the hearts that grieve. They know the intricacies of the stage as well as the sinews of their community.

They go to the Orpheum for rest and diversion. There they find change, and are able to forget, for a brief space, the cares that crowd the hours that gnaw. They laugh and they relax, and thus are they refreshed and rested.

Amusement is a panacea. To divert is to bless. "The laughter of merry laugh doth good like a medicine," says Solomon. On this is so, then the Orpheum is a whole-sale drugstore with a Peruna factory on the side.

PEOPLE OF PURPOSE.

As for the players in vaudeville, they are people of purpose. It is easy to turn a corner and find a man who is clever twice a day for a month, on the minute, that is different. These players are hired not only for their skill in supplying amusement, but also because they conduct themselves like ladies and gentlemen. On the Orpheum circuit you must not only have talent, but you must also be consecutive. Conduct counts with the booking office.

The under or the boozier may get one engagement, but there he stops.

Life is too short for dealing with the man who needs a keeper. Vaudeville is business, and business men who are actuated by many motives. They keep faith with the public, and therefore the people whom they employ must be true. They must be genuine. I have never seen an in-tact stagehand around an Orpheum theater stage. I have never seen rudeness or discourtesy among stage hands or artists. Always there is kindness, courtesy and the desire to co-operate and lend a hand. And the tendency of Orpheum vaudeville is to be not down; more and more it appeals to men and women of worth. It supplies the laugh in which there is no bitterness. It amuses without degrading. It relaxes tired nerves. Incidentally, it instructs. Always it rests and refreshes. It forms a fit preparation for the work of the morrow—more work and better work.

GETTING A START.

The success of modern vaudeville, from the salary point of view, has turned the head of a good many girls at the glove counter.

My old friend Billy Gould is running a weekly article in "Variety," headed "Getting a Start in Vaudeville." The curious thing about Billy's very entertaining dose is that he never tells how to get the start. Probably the reason he does not tell is because he does not know. Anybody who knows will not tell. Those who can, do; and those who can't start a dramatic school. The fact is, there is no formula for getting a start. The thing all turns on personality. You can, or you can't. And those who can, cannot tell how they do it. But depend upon this, the people who get big pay render a big us stage hands than one of the acts."

On my last night in Oakland the leader of the orchestra passed me up the biggest bouquet I ever saw; it took a bushel basket to hold that bunch of roses, and Smiles had to pop out from the No. 1 entrance and help me carry off the posies. It really knocked me silly. It only proves that a man can wrestle scenery and props and yet be filled with very big and generous emotions.

SUCCESS IN VAUDEVILLE.

Vaudeville does not interfere with my writing. I have the whole of each forenoon to myself, and from the stage experiences I get many a good idea. I am proud that I can keep well and do my tasks with joy and satisfaction. I am glad that I can work, laugh, play, study. I am glad I can mix with many people and influence them. I am glad I can laugh with them, and I am glad I can laugh at myself. Vaudeville is no place for a whipped-out man. The very essence of vaudeville is smiling spontaneity.

The person driven into vaudeville to retrieve the hazard of a lost fortune is a failure from the moment the spotlight hits him. Now you know why so many eminent writers, singers and players have failed in the twenty-minute act. They went down into vaudeville, instead of going up. And the gloomsters were engulfed by their own gloom. The equilibrators of fun was a thousand miles away. They had talent, but their think cells were not vitalized by the friendly joy germ.

BLENDED WORDS.

In vaudeville your words must be blended by the actor's ray of personality; otherwise, you are flat, stale and unprofitable. You can't memorize things, and then calmly shoot them into the orchestra and gallery and have them go. You have to get acquainted with your folks—be on friendly terms with them—even chummy and confidential, for only then can they understand you.

You might as well commit to memory a few nice things and then go pass them out to your girl as to hope for success by playing vade perferum. You can only win when you jabber on like a bear on a tight out of your heart; then she understands, no matter what you say or how you say it.

Awkwardness is not fatal, provided there is a man behind it. In vaudeville, time and tempo are the two great things. So says Bill Cressy, artist, writer and man of brains. Ten seconds too quick or too slow and you have missed the mark—as George Washington wrote in his diary after having proposed to Mary Phillips and been turned down hard: "I believed ye lady was not in ye mood."

Vaudeville presents no problems. It does not send you away mystified, in doubt, depressed. Vaudeville exercises your diaphragm, liberates the secretions, aids elimination and fortifies your nerves, making you immune against unkind fate.

LITTLE RECIPROcity.

In vaudeville there is very seldom reciprocity complete between the audience and the actor. The actor stands on the stage and does his stunt without the collaboration that art requires. This is why he is emptied and exhausted with his effort at twenty minutes. The pressure is not the same on the outside that it is in. He is doing his work in a vacuum. You say that one hundred dollars a week is very big pay for this little bit of fun and frolic. I think one hundred dollars a week is very small pay indeed, and depend upon this, the man who gets five hundred dollars a week in vaudeville does not get a cent more than he is worth.

When you get one thousand, or two thousand or three thousand dollars a week you are then, not only doing the work, but supplying the usufruct, or the cumulative good name and good will of a life that has done big. That is, when they pay Uncle Joe Cannon three thousand dollars a week they pay not only for his performance, but for the use of his good name and his record—with the momentum of great thoughts, great deeds and big, bitter fights in the imminent, deadly breach.

INTENSITY OF WORK.

In vaudeville the intensity of the work makes the business decidedly narrowing. Any one with mental ambitions and aspirations can not afford to go on the vaudeville stage. The leisure, the peace, the equanimity, and the big, broad, out-of-doors are to such a one lost and tabu forevermore.

You live in the narrow world of the mine, and your little life is bounded by the boards—the footlights to the south, the wings to the east and west, and north of you is the olio. Above in the clouds, partially overhanging you, with grim-set faces, sometimes picked in alcohol, crouches that thousand-headed thing called the gallery.

Inside, you are ready to burst. Outside is the vacuum which you, yourself, are obliged to fill, or else be smothered through the lack of recip-

POSTOFFICE INSPECTORS ACCUSED OF CONSPIRACY Entered Into Plot With William J. Burns to Ruin Rival Detective Agency, Is Sensational Charge

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Charges that a conspiracy exists between United States postoffice inspectors and the W. J. Burns detective agency, the conspiracy being aimed at the destruction of their business, was made in a petition filed by the Perkins detective agency of Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Indianapolis, with the select committee appointed by the Senate to investigate the "third degree" methods of the police.

Charles A. O'Brien, city solicitor of Pittsburgh, wants the committee to undertake an investigation of circumstances surrounding the raiding of the Perkins agency offices in the three cities and the seizure of its papers by postoffice inspectors and operators from the Burns agency.

O. B. Perkins, Walter W. Perkins and A. Thomas were accused recently of having written to C. Strong of Erie, Pa., that unless $50,000 was forthcoming the Strong house and mausoleum would be blown up.

The letters were alleged to have been anonymous and forwarded to Mr. Strong with the idea in view, it was contended, that the Perkins agency would gain employment in ferreting out the authors and preventing the carrying out of the threat.

The petition sets forth that raids were made on the Perkins agency in all three cities by postoffice inspectors and Burns detectives and that the former, acting under federal law, seized valuable papers and personal records. In addition, the offices and employees of the Perkins agency, the petition further charges, were subjected to "third degree" methods to extort evidence or confessions.

In asking for an investigation, the petition says their case is not an isolated one, but that they are prepared to prove that like conduct on the part of postoffice inspectors is not an infrequent occurrence in other parts of the country.

"Our petitioners further believe and therefore aver," the petition proceeds, "that some, if not all, of the aforementioned United States postoffice inspectors engaged in the conspiracy in this petition particularly set forth are pecuniarily interested in the Burns detective agency and are prostituting their offices and exercising assumed and unwarranted powers thereunder for the purpose of furthering the interest of said agency to the great peril of the rights and liberties of the citizens and the scandal and debasement of the public service."

DEMANDS FULL INQUIRY.

The petition concludes with the request that the committee inquire fully into the matter of the alleged persecution of the Perkins agency and also as to whether there is any unlawful co-operation or connection between the Burns detective agency and certain inspectors of the postoffice department.

W. J. Burns, head of the Burns agency, was a former secret service official in the treasury department. He achieved considerable reputation for his work in connection with the anti-graft crusade in San Francisco and at present is in the limelight as a result of his work in the investigation of the destruction of the Los Angeles Times plant. It was under his direction that the labor leaders now held for that affair were arrested.

LEAGUE OF THE CROSS CADETS WILL CAMP

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Members of the League of the Cross, Cadets under the command of Colonel James E. Power, will leave San Francisco on the steamship Harvard on Saturday bound for Santa Barbara for their annual encampment of eight days. Nearly every member of the regiment has arranged to attend the encampment. In conjunction with their annual encampment, the cadets have arranged an excursion to Santa Barbara for their friends and in addition to the attraction of an ocean voyage will be social features that assure a good time. The League of the Cross Cadet band of forty pieces will be in camp and a vaudeville show is being prepared for the trip on the ocean.

RESIDENCE RANSACKED.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—The residence of William McCarthy, 2895 Polson street, was ransacked by burglars today and valuables to the amount of $72.50 were taken.

GRAIN MARKETS NOT SO BULLISH

Interests Under the Prices Are Nearing End of Speculative Rope.

(By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.)

CHICAGO, July 8.—The feeling in the various grain markets on the Board of Trade were less bullish today as those who have been under prices and boosting them doubtless felt that they were about at the end of their speculative rope. For more than a week some of the leading houses in the trade have remained on the bull side of all the cereals and when there was a "taking of stock" today they doubtless found that they were holding good lines of wheat, corn and oats, and at a time, too, when the excitement over the hot weather scare was subsiding in both the spring wheat and corn belts. The weather in the northwest was more favorable for the growing wheat crop, and as usual conditions were promised, for the corn belt, there were many long on the selling side. In addition to this, it was popular to put out short lines.

Crop reports from the spring wheat country were unfavorable at the opening this morning and prices suffered. The advice as sent in by John Ingles, the well known crop expert, who was in Fargo, N. D., today, took the wind out of the sails of the bulls. Mr. Ingles reported crop conditions improving with the wheat heading out in that vicinity.

While Michigan is not considered a big corn state, the condition of 92 as published yesterday, and a condition of 86 in Wisconsin and 88 in Illinois, caused the average long in corn to "sit up and take notice." The government July report will make its appearance Monday afternoon and some of those in the trade who have been rampantly bullish on the cereal seem to realize that the figures to be sent out by Secretary Wilson may prove to be less bullish than looked for. Many of those who had profits in corn threw over their lines and in addition there was some short selling.

Oats finished close to the bottom prices reached. The provision market was under selling pressure at the hands of packers and the support was poor the market weakened and it showed very little reactionary power.

BEWARE OF FALSE PROPHETS

S FAR back as recorded history goes, and even farther, the founders of new religious cults have been prone to mingle erratic fancies with the strange doctrines they inculcated. Many of them introduced lascivious practices into their alleged religious rites, and in the forms of worship they promulgated the grossest sensualism was mingled with the loftiest professions of piety. While Baal and Astarte have lost honor as deities the erratic rites formerly celebrated in their adoration are from time to time revived by charlatans who pose as prophets, seers and revelators, and even as actual divines.

After the death of Solomon many of the Judean Kings were attracted by the sensual and sensuous religious rites practised by their heathen neighbors, and despite the anathemas of the prophets and priests of Israel led their people away from the simple and pure worship of God to the obscene abominations practiced in the name of religion by the Assyrians, Babylonians, Philistines, and Egyptians, and even the Greeks settled in Syria. Human sacrifice and vagrant lust heated by the fervor of an impure and licentious faith usurped the place of sober worship and the lofty symbolism of an elevated and moral belief.

In later times the same proneness to lapse into the iniquities of the flesh have been exhibited by men who have set up as religious leaders. In the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries many of these unclean sectaries arose. All clung to some tenets of the Christian faith, but violated the fundamental laws of morality and the teachings which emphasized continuance and purity of life. One by one these sectaries sank and disappeared, only to be succeeded by others, till they were put completely under the ban of the law because of the lascivious orgies in which they indulged, and the impious immorality which they promulgated in the name of religion.

In our country we have had numerous examples of religion degenerating into immorality and free love. The most notable is that afforded by the Mormons in their earlier history. Joseph Smith called himself a prophet and made polygamy a cardinal tenet of the religion he formed. There is abundant testimony that he practiced free love among the women of his disciples, teaching that the prophet of God could commit no sin. The Oneida community founded by Noyes was even more flagrant in casting aside the elementary principles of sexual morality and practising free love in the most unrestricted manner. Yet in the main the people of this community were industrious and intelligent, and were apparently not without sincere convictions. Noyes was a man of ability and great executive capacity. His cult practically died with him.

A procession of imitators followed Joe Smith and Noyes, Schweinfurth, dubbed "the Illinois Christ," Schlatter, Teed and Evelyn Arthur See, now on trial in Chicago on a charge of abducting a young girl and prostituting her to his base desires. See calls his cult "the absolute life," and his refuge a temple. His chief votaries are credu-lous women of the erratic, neurotic type. He envelops his bestialities in a halo of sacred mystery. His teaching is a queer mixture of mysticism and eroticism, while his practices are those of the primitive brute. See seems to have borrowed from Joe Smith, Schweinfurth, Schlatter and Teed in turn, and added something of the occult ceremonies of the mysteries of Ephesus and the polluted rites of Isis. Strange to say he has caught mothers in the same net with their daughters. These women have given him money, adoration, reputation---everything in fact that counts for something in life. Mrs. Bridges, mother of one of the girls See is alleged to have debauched, is one of the prophet's most devoted adherents. She admits that she often kissed him, that he fondled her and called her his doll, that she gave him money in large sums. But she insists that he is a "holy man" and that they were in such spiritual accord that they could not do wrong. All this is fantasy, of course; it merely shows that the woman has lost the power to distinguish between right and wrong, and has come to look upon the grossest sensualism as pure and holy. She is under the influence of a morbid religious mania, in which eroticism is the dominating manifestation. The things that should appal and revolt her have become sacred, dear and familiar; lust has been made holy in her sight and a lascivious mountebank transfigured in her eyes. That is one of the pathetic phases of religious delusions of this character, and illustrates the enormous capacity for evil such men as See have.

When Mrs. Bridges says See is holy it is pertinent to inquire what she considers holy. It frequently happens that indecency is holy in the eyes of people laboring under a religious delusion. When a woman so abandons herself to the control of a man that she will surrender herself and her daughter to him she will tell any sort of a story to shield him; she will do whatever he asks or whatever she thinks he wants her to do. It is possible that no overt acts of impurity have taken place between See and Mrs. Bridges, but the lessons of human experience lead to a different conclusion. It is evident that See has been engaged in duping and imposing on women, alienating them from their families and leading them into a moral morass. He is obviously a dangerous faker, a religious fraud and a corrupter of morals. He claims to possess divine attributes and to have the power to make that pure and holy which common sense teaches us is foul, indecent and unholy. Yet he has believers and disciples who appear to be charmed by the vice that is offered them as spiritual comfort. A religion that gives free rein to carnal desire insensibly attracts many by its monstrosity and by its subtle appeal to the primordial passions.

But what is to be done with these self-styled prophets and the voluptuous doctrines they teach? It is apparent that the delusions they inculcate are dangerous and corrupting to society, that they exert a degrading influence on all who fall under their spell and are the vehicles of many kinds of fraud. Still the application of a remedy is a problem for which no solution is offered. Shall we follow Dogberry's admonition and call See a filthy rogue and let him go on preying upon women and corrupting them to his evil ends?

Every adept criminal is capable of telling a hard luck story of much interest and verisimilitude. The more adroit the scoundrel the more artful his lie is in appealing to sympathy with tales told with convincing earnestness and apparent candor. In the argot of crime these yarns are termed "handing out the 'bull con.'" A case in point is furnished by this item of news in the New York Sun:

"A hard luck story written by a man who had fallen on evil ways impressed County Judge Fawcett of Brooklyn so forcibly that he sentenced the author, Jacob Svoboda, to only four years in prison, though he might have got twenty. The man was arraigned yesterday for sentence following his conviction of two burglaries committed six years ago, one panning out $1500 and the other $2000.

"The story that Svoboda laid before Judge Fawcett was fortified by official papers, newspaper clippings and other evidence. It said that in 1892, when he belonged to the United States Life Saving Association of San Francisco, he saved Lillian Stanford from being drowned and was presented by her father, Senator Leland Stanford, with a gold watch studded with diamonds. Five years later he rescued a woman and child from a fire in Chicago and was burned himself in making the rescue. In 1898 Svoboda enlisted in Company C, Forty-seventh New York regiment, United States volunteers, and in 1899 he was honorably discharged. His discharge, citizenship papers and certificates indicating that he had contributed to several patriotic subscriptions were among the exhibits he submitted."

Californians will be astonished to learn that Senator Stanford had a daughter living in 1892. His only child, so far as popular information out here goes, was a son, Leland Stanford, Jr., who died several years before the alleged drowning incident related by this New York thief. Stanford University was erected as a memorial to the only child of Senator Stanford. If the other details contained in Svoboda's story are no better grounded in truth than the tale he told of rescuing Leland Stanford's daughter from a watery grave, the Brooklyn judge was sadly imposed upon. By the way, there was once confined in the state prison at Folsom a clever criminal and a gifted liar named Jacob Svoboda. Wonder if he and the Brooklyn rascal are not one and the same.

"If the recall may be used on a judge for his decisions, why may not the referendum be invoked against the decisions themselves?" asks the Portland Oregonian. Why not, indeed? In Oregon they are trying to recall a judge because of an instruction he gave in a murder case tried before him. The relatives of the dead man claim to know the law better than the judge and assert that the acquittal of the slayer resulted from an erroneous instruction. But the instruction may be correct in law and the judge recalled all the same. The soundness of the judge's law would not save him from ignominious expulsion from the bench if an excited electorate took it into their heads to get rid of him. It is clear that the popular anger against the judge in question was aroused and heated by persons with a grievance. Those persons are incensed that the jury acquitted the defendant and blame the judge for it. Now if the people of the district are to recall the judge, why should they not be permitted to recall the verdict? Would it not be simpler and more direct to have the case tried by popular vote?

Every time somebody feels displeased at the action of an official he threatens to invoke the recall. In Berkeley Mayor Wilson had hardly warmed his seat when he was threatened with recall because he had appointed to the office of city attorney a man some of his followers did not want in the office. In Alameda there is talk of recalling Mayor Noy and nearly all the councilmen because the playgrounds commission was abolished. Every dissatisfied person hurls the threat of recall at every official who displeases him. This would be a fine condition for sane, wise and courageous judicial administration. A petition for recall would be started every time a judge displeased any powerful interest or any considerable element in the community. The recall would be working over time all over the state, and judicial elections would occur so often that one could hardly keep track of them. There would be plenty of excitement and very little done in the way of adjudication.

The continuance of the heat wave in the East would indicate that the weather clerk is unduly friendly to the Ice Trust.

Bachelor Musings

A man doesn't call it deceiving his wife if his excuse works.

A girl sees to be crazy to have red hair, unless she has it.

Theory can start a man, but he'd better finish on horse sense.

It is worthy of note that there were fewer personal offerings on the last Fourth of July than usually occur on Independence Day. There were also fewer arrests than usual. Perhaps there is no connection between the peaceful and sober character of the last celebration and the cessation from noise and fireworks, but the coincidence is significant nevertheless. The carnival of noise attending the indiscriminate explosion of fireworks in the streets was noticeably absent in many large cities on the last Fourth. In consequence there were few fires and a noticeable diminution of casualties. That there should also be a marked decrease in the number of rows and arrests argues that sanity in one direction is begetting sanity in another. When there are no shooting and explosion of fireworks in the streets there is less drinking and fighting.

A cablegram says Castro has landed in Venezuela and is now at the head of 1000 men. Doubtless he is hailed as a "liberator." Our Latin-American neighbors alternately hail their leaders as liberators and denounced as tyrants. Castro has been both liberator and tyrant. It is time for him to be liberator again. Diaz was a liberator in Mexico for a generation and was then banished as a tyrant. Madero is a liberator now, but in a little while he, too, will be a tyrant. Turbide was once idolized by the Mexican people as their liberator, but they shot him for being a tyrant. Old Santa Ana was liberator and tyrant by turn for a long period. Castro seems to be in Santa Ana's class.

PRETENDERS IN ABEYANCE

The death of Princess Clotilde has aroused some languid academic interest in the status of the various pretenders to the abolished throne of France, to some of whom she was closely related. The discussion causes no perceptible disquiet in the republic.

It is true that the recent disturbances in the Aube and Marne over the question of what constituted champagne gave rise to some sporadic talk about a "savior of society" and the like, none of which was taken or deserved to be taken seriously. Prince Napoleon, the head of the House of Bonaparte, has indeed put forward a long "interview" in which he deplors the disturbed state of France and emphasizes the order-maintaining functions of Imperialism, and suggests that the true remedy for the strikes of state employees and the jacquerie of the wine growers is to be found in a restoration of the policy not of the emperor but of the first consul. At the same time he makes it quite clear that he will not take advantage of these disturbances to push his claims, nor seek to promote his interests by fomenting disorder.

The Duke of Orleans, on the other hand, although he is the representative of staid and dignified Bourbon royalty and nominally the very antithesis of the mob, seems inclined to appeal to the spirit of disorder and rowdiness. Perhaps the touch of the tarstiek of Boulangerism still taints the faction which once was typified by the Faubourg St. Germain. At any rate, the duke appears to have separated himself from the traditions of his house, both Orleans and Bourbon, and to have associated himself with the vagrant forces of disorder. One of his foremost spokesmen has openly declared in print that in a supreme crisis the Royalists and the Reds would be on the same side of the barricade. The aristocratic Apaches and hoodlums who call themselves Camelots du Roi are now the chief supporters of the "cause" which was once led by the Count of Paris, and also of that which was typified by the frigid exile of Frohsdorff.—New York Tribune.

20 YEARS AGO IN OAKLAND

Danny Needham has gone into training at the Neptune Gardens, Alameda, for his fight with Billy Mahan at the close of this month. He is trained by Fitzpatrick, who trained Jackson for his fight with Corbett.

Among those who were entertained last evening in the home of Miss Lulu Burke were the following: Misses Lillie Burns, Lucy Farley, M. Whitte, John Fogarty, Frank Burns, Mat Brown and others.

A pretty church wedding was celebrated in the Market Street Congregational church last night, the contracting parties being Harry B. Eiden, Clerk of Department Three of the Superior Court, and Miss Susie Louise Floud, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Floud of this city.

A rainbow trout which weighed 2 1-2 pounds was caught by Elzy Southern at Sims on the Little Sacramento and beating the record previously held by Walter J. Mathews of this city, who killed a fish, weighing 2 1-4 pounds last year.

Michael Feeney of Twenty-fifth avenue and Twentieth street lost a couple of fingers a few days ago. He was leading a cow and the animal gave a sudden jerk and the rope twisted off his digits.

A quiet wedding took place Thursday in Pleasanton when Jacob Schneider of this city and Miss M. J. Graham were united in marriage by the Rev. T. W. Lincoln.

A reception was given Major General W. H. Dimond at Camp Markham yesterday. The chief was accompanied by the following members of his staff: Albert E. Castle, A. D. Cutler, Horace G. Platt, Joseph R. Laine, Warren B. Engle and William B. Hooper.

BOARD OF CONTROL ALLOWS AWARD

Seventeen Men Who Exterminated Nevada Indian Murderers Get $55.55 Each.

SACRAMENTO, July 8.—The state board of control has allowed the $1000 reward offered by Governor Johnson for the capture of the band of Nevada Indians which last January massacred four men at Little Rock Canyon, Washoe county, Nevada. The reward will be paid equally to the seventeen men, led by Captain J. P. Donnelly of the Nevada State police, who pursued and killed eight Indian men and captured one man and two Indian girls. The eighteenth member of the party, Edward Hogle, was killed in the fight with the Indians and his share of the reward will be paid to his mother.

Those who will receive an equal share of the reward, all being either California or Nevada cowboys, are A. E. Smith, J. P. Donnelly, leader and state policeman; B. F. Cambré, C. H. Stone, W. M. Beyer, Sidney Pascal, M. W. Prussia, J. Reeder, F. V. Perry, Warren Fruit, M. Parson, George Hughes, Henry Hughes, O. D. Van Roman, D. M. West, Jack Ferguson and Mrs. Hogle, whose son the Indians killed in the final stand made last March.

Each member of the posse and Mrs. Hogle will receive $55.55.

WOULD AMEND ACT.
ST. LOUIS, July 8.—Resolutions were adopted by twenty-nine national, state and clearing house bank examiners assembled in St. Louis advocating an amendment to the national banking act to empower national banks to lend money on real estate security.

DANGERS OF FAT

STOMACH
The stomach is the seat of digestion, wherein are separated from food the nutritious elements that build and sustain our bodies. When the stomach ceases to change the fat producing elements of food, into muscle and sinew, there comes an excess of fat, where there should be firm, hard flesh. This excess fat collects in most undesirable places, impeding motion until movement becomes an exertion. The layers of fat check the stomach's natural movements for digestion of food—thus increasing the trouble. But so many people have found relief in the famous Marmola Prescription that there is hardly any necessity for obesity. And now that Marmola Prescription Tablets can be obtained there is even less excuse for too much fat. Dieting and exercise are rendered unnecessary by this new form of fat reduction. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or the Marmola Co., 78 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich., at 75c the case. They quickly and harmlessly reduce the overfat body at the rate of 10 to 15 lbs. a day, improve digestion, clear the complexion and promote bodily health.

TIPTON-KIERUFF WEDDING OCCURS TODAY IN FRESNO

MISS EVELYN TIPTON, of Fresno, who today will become the bride of Charles T. Kieruff, manager of the land department of the Peoples Water Company of Oakland.

A pretty and picturesque wedding will take place today in Fresno, when Charles T. Kieruff, Berkeley manager of the land department of the Peoples Water Company, will claim Miss Evelyn Tipton of Fresno as his bride, at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Richard K. Lomborg. Both young people are well known. The bride-to-be is a very attractive belle of the inland city. She is the daughter of the Rev. B. T. Tipton, retired minister of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. The family have been prominent for many years in Fresno and the wedding is of wide interest. After a trip to the Yosemite Valley the young couple will be at home about September 1 to their friends in a pretty home awaiting them in Berkeley.

ROLLS INTO CANYON; IS SERIOUSLY HURT

PORTERVILLE, July 8.—While trailing a deer in the mountains above Springville day before yesterday, John Summers, a young businessman of Fresno, fell into a gully, a distance of 15 feet, and suffered a broken leg, a dislocated shoulder and serious contusions and cuts from sharp rocks. Summers was a member of a party which left the hotel at Springville for an early morning deer hunt. It was, with considerable difficulty, that a litter was rigged and Summers brought to this city from the hills.

RIVER CAPTAIN ENTERS TRADE ON OWN HOOK

Captain Pigott, formerly master of the steamer St. Helena, has launched out as both owner and skipper of the river steamer Aetna, which has been thoroughly repaired and overhauled. The Aetna had been laid up for a long time and it was generally believed that her days of usefulness were over, when Pigott purchased the craft. Pigott will use the barge Columbia as a tow and from now on the two crafts will be a familiar sight around the bay and up river.

FRUIT MARKET RULES STRONG

Apricots Held at $80 Per Ton,
While Prunes Are Steadily Soaring.

SAN JOSE, July 8.—The fruit report of the San Jose grange this forenoon was as follows:
Apricots, $60 to $65 a ton, green, and 17 cents a pound, dried. The Campbell growers have agreed not to sell for less than $80.
Prunes—Latest reports from abroad are that there will be only half a crop in France, Austria, Serbia and Bosnia, and that all quotations in Europe have been withdrawn. In consequence prices here have advanced 1/2 cent, and 1/4 cents is being offered.
Peaches—From $35 to $40 for free stones and $40 to $50 for lings are offered, with no sales.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Illness will prevent Rev. Julius Puendling, pastor of St. Mark's German Lutheran Church, from occupying the pulpit tomorrow morning. The service announced for tomorrow has been postponed to next Sunday, July 16, at 10:30 a. m.

LEAVES RAILROAD ON PENSION AT 65

David W. Horsburgh Retires
Auditor's Department.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—David W. Horsburgh, auditor of freight accounts of the Southern Pacific Company since 1902, and who has been in the employ of that railroad system for forty years, has retired and gone on the pension rolls of the company, joining in that respect such former prominent officials as General T. H. Woodman, E. Black Ryan and J. L. Willcutt.
Horsburgh, who is 65 years of age, has been in the railroad business for fifty years, his first work having been with the Great Western Railway of Canada, when he was a lad of 15. He is a native of Scotland and came to California via Panama in 1869.

DEEPLY REGRETTED.
When Horsburgh entered the employ of the Central Pacific, now a part of the Southern Pacific system, the general office force numbered fifty men and the railroad mileage was less than 1000 miles, as compared with 3000 men and 7000 miles today.
The retirement of Horsburgh is deeply regretted by the staff of the general offices of the company. Although he admits sixty-five years, he is still alert and active, both mentally and physically. His splendid physique he attributes in great measure to life-long abstinence from the use of alcohol and tobacco, and to regular habits engendered by a strong attachment to the church. He had been a man of family for twenty-seven years, having married, in 1884, Miss Lizzie Eddy Atkinson, a descendant of the Mayflower heroes.

FINE APPRECIATION.
His brother, James Horsburgh Jr., is the present general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific Company.
A fine example of the appreciation of his many years of service and the esteem in which he is held is evidenced by the fact that A. D. McDonald, general auditor for the Southern Pacific Company, has ordered that Horsburgh's desk shall be reserved for him and be given a permanent place, in order to induce him to return occasionally and give to his old department the benefit of his advice.
His successor has not yet been named.

Rhys Fryce, Librado Rivera, Anselmo Figueroa, Pedro Solis and Ricardo Flores Magón were re-indicted upon the same charge. The jury returned eighteen bills in all but some of the persons indicted were not named publicly because they had not been taken into custody.

THE MANAGER OF KAHN'S SHOE DEPARTMENT SAYS—My opening bargain is an eye and purse opener. I am going to sell about 800 pairs of $3.50 to $6.50 shoes at $1.95. They're broken lines, to be sure. But that's a sign of merit. Their mates wouldn't have stepped out so lively if styles and qualities weren't right. The offering consists of button and lace Low Shoes—Oxfords with ribbon laces—Button Oxfords—Pumps with ankle straps and buckles—and some High Shoes. There's a splendid range of sizes in the combined lot. Come promptly. These $3.50 to $6.50 shoes won't go begging for buyers at $1.95

CHILDREN'S AND MISSES' KID SHIPPERS—Also White Canvas Shoes and Oxfords—broken lines. Sizes 5 to 2. $1.50 to $2.00 values. Now all reduced to 98c

Millinery—All Reduced One-Half or More—Bargains

THE MANAGER OF KAHN'S MILLINERY DEPARTMENT SAYS—If I don't have a record-breaking business this month, it won't be for lack of bargains. Some of my reduced prices come very close to nothing. These for example—
WOMEN'S BLACK HAIR TURBANS AND TOQUES—Feather trimmed with roses and gulls. Values to $5.00. $1.48
MISSSES' HAND-MADE HATS—Trimmed in various "glitzy" ways with ribbons and flowers. Values to $3.00. $2.98
SAILOR HATS with straight or rolling brims—black, white and burnt. 75c to $1.98
BABY ROSES—Pink, blue and red. So true to nature you will almost expect their petals to wither. Values to 35c. 15c

Women's Handbags—Bargain That Is More than Great

THE MANAGER OF KAHN'S LEATHER GOODS DEPARTMENT SAYS—Only room to tell you of this one bargain. But it will give you a fair idea of my values. The reins for driving have been put in my hands, and I am going to distance all records.
WOMEN'S HAND BAGS in various leathers and styles—lined with calfskin and fitted with coin purse. $3.50 and $4.00. $2.78

Beautiful Wash Fabrics at Tiny New Prices—Bargains That Assure Lively Selling

THE MANAGER OF KAHN'S WASH GOODS DEPARTMENT SAYS—I am going to make a strenuous effort to win the prize that the firm will give the manager who shows the largest increase in sales this month. Every day will be a bargain day in my department. It will be a sort of continuous performance, and every attraction will be a headliner. Follow the crowds, if you want to see the best spot in this busy store. Here are a few of my bargains—just enough to whet your curiosity and make you anxious to see the others:

The Great Race For a Selling Record Starts Tomorrow

—This sale needs no introduction. It is not an innovation. It is a fixed annual event. Every July we turn this business over to our department chiefs to conduct as they would if it were their own.
—They are given full swing. We do not restrict them in any way. They can sell goods at cost—at a loss—or at a profit. All we insist upon is that they conduct the sale with strict honesty—adhere to exact truthfulness in all their claims and statements—and see that all customers honoring them with their confidence and patronage are pleased and satisfied with the merchandise purchased.
—Each year our department managers have conducted their sale with energy, enthusiasm and marked ability. They have accomplished wonderful things in the past. This year we expect them to accomplish still more wonderful things. And they will if determination counts for anything. For months they have been working—buying—planning—developing values and ideas—to make this their banner sale. Sale starts tomorrow morning with a multitude of bargains, of which this page gives only a hint.

BATHING SUITS ALL AT REDUCED PRICES.

THE MANAGER OF KAHN'S FAMOUS THIRD FLOOR OF FASHION SAYS—My bargains for this sale are big enough to cause a riot. Regular prices have been massacred—literally butchered. The difference between the old and new prices represents a loss of thousands upon thousands of dollars in profit.

My reason for this great sacrifice is a double-barreled one. First—I want to rid my stock of all summer garments. Second—I want to show my appreciation for the record-breaking patronage extended to my department this season by giving you the greatest values ever offered in ready-to-wear garments.

From the multitude of unprecedented bargains these few have been selected for special mention today. All the others are equally amazing.

PILLOW CASES—Size 45x36 inches. Well made from fine muslin and neatly hemstitched. 19c

HEAVY TOWELING CRASH—17 inches wide. Will give long, satisfactory service. 9c

ALL SILK AND VELVET REMNANTS JUST HALF MARKED PRICES.

Rich Silks At Store-Crowding Prices—Bargains That Totally Eclipse All Previous Offerings

THE MANAGER OF KAHN'S SILK DEPARTMENT SAYS—The bargains I have secured for this sale are most staggeringly good. And there are so many of them it was a puzzling problem to select items for special mention today. But I finally settled on the following. Every item advertised is sensationally cheap—every item is a bargain without a peer.

TUB SILKS—32 inches wide. White ground with navy, gray, helio or black stripes. Will wash as well as muslin. The very thing for men's shirts and women's waists and dresses. Regular 88c

FOULARD SILKS—All silk. Fine color assortment. Values to 75c a yard. 39c

FANCY SILKS—Checks, stripes and jacquards. This season's. Values to 75c a yard. 39c

ALL SILK FOULARDS—24 inches wide. This season's patterns in all the fashionable colorings. Shower proof. Silks that sell in every good store at $1.00 a yard. On sale while the lot lasts at 65c

RAJAH SILKS—27 inches wide. Pure silk. Good color lines. $1.00 and $1.25 values 48c

Sensational Dress Goods Bargains—Values Never Even Dreamed of Before

THE MANAGER OF KAHN'S DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT SAYS—I gave you very wonderful values last year. But the bargains I will give during this sale make them seem tame and commonplace. Never within the memory of living woman could fashionable dress fabrics be bought at such amazingly small prices. It's the opportunity of a lifetime—to miss it will be extravagance.

SILK AND WOOL IRISH POP-LINS in all wanted colors—44 inches wide. The most beautiful fabrics ever loomed. Our regular $1.50 to $2.00 grades. 98c

FANCY WOOL SUITINGS in solid color effects, with shadow stripes and checks—double width. The qualities that usually sell at $5.00 and $1.00 a yard. 49c

PENCIL STRIPE MOHAIRS in black with white stripes, white with black stripes, brown with white stripes and navy with white stripes—44 inches. 37 1/2c

CREAM STORM SERGES—52 inches wide. One of the most popular dress fabrics of the season. The grade that usually sells at $1.25 a yard. 88c

CREAM STORM SERGES—One yard wide. Strictly all wool, and full of honest service. Only 400 yards in the lot—that means hurry. 48c

Lace Curtains and Drapery Goods—Regular Prices Sunk Into Oblivion

THE MANAGER OF KAHN'S CURTAIN AND DRAPERY DEPARTMENT SAYS—This is the opportunity to old friends that my department is the "Prince of Value-Givers." And I am going to take advantage of it to the limit. New bargains will greet you every time you visit my floor. Here are a few of the specials upon which I rely to make things bright this week:

LACE CURTAINS—Three yards long and 50 inches wide. Choice, beautiful patterns. Regular price $1.25 a pair. 85c

COUCH COVERS in rich Oriental effects—3 yards long and 60 inches wide. Regular price $1.75 each. 1.39

DRUMMERS' SAMPLES OF CURTAIN ENDS IN BRUSSELS, IRISH POINTS, BATTENBERGS AND NOTTINGHAMS—1 3/4 AND 2 YARDS LONG—SALE PRICES, 25c, 30c, 50c and 75c EACH—WORTH DOUBLE OR MORE.

Embroidered Flouncings—27 Inches Wide—75c and $1 Values on Sale at 33c

THE MANAGER OF KAHN'S EMBROIDERY DEPARTMENT SAYS—If this bargain don't start off the selling with a bang in my department, I will lose faith in little prices. These flouncings are fine for women's skirts and children's dresses.

Brass Fern Dish and Fern Set On a Mirror—Worth $2.50—

THE Manager of Kahn's China Department says—This bargain typical of hundreds of others, is a big one. The 6-inch fern dish is made of hand-hammered pure brass, and has graceful claw feet. The handsome natural fern is everlasting. The mirror is bound with metal and measures 8 inches in diameter. Complete $1.25—just half price.

GIGANTIC CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD THE GOVERNMENT

COSTLY GEMS PAY NO DUTY

Millionaires Said to be Involved In the Big Smuggling Plot.

Result of Testimony Given by the Dashing Widow, Mrs. Jenkins.

NEW YORK, July 8.—As a result of the testimony given by Mrs. Helen D. Wells Jenkins Friday, and to be continued Monday, covering a gigantic conspiracy to defraud the government of duty on jewels, which was revealed to her when she was the companion of Nathan Allen, the indictment of two millionaires by the Federal Grand Jury before the middle of the week is said to be certain.

This information comes from a high authority and it is also known that the United States district attorney is already satisfied that convictions can be made even if the investigation went no further. While other indictments may be expected to follow, the first two will involve the millionaires whose names have been conspicuously linked with the beautiful Mrs. Jenkins, whose romance with Nathan Allen, the multi-millionaire of Kenosha, Wis., has furnished such a strangely interesting story.

NOT YET RECOVERED.

Today Mrs. Jenkins had not entirely recovered from the ordeal of appearing before the Grand Jury Friday, when she caused more commotion in the Federal building than has occurred there in many a day by fainting.

At her apartment in the Wellmore, tonight she said she would be on hand when the Grand Jury was ready for her again, and expected to be called Monday.

It is known that a tremendous pressure is being brought to bear on Secretary MacVane and Collector Loeb to permit the men likely to be indicted to settle the case against them by paying whatever demand the government makes. But there is no possibility of this being done now, as the district attorney's office has announced an intention of vigorously pushing the prosecutions.

The indictments in this case are believed to be but a stepping-stone to a smuggling conspiracy which will involve many wealthy persons who have been successful in bringing free of duty jewels and other dutiable treasures worth millions.

FINGER OF SUSPICION.

A number of men in the customs service are necessarily involved and the finger of suspicion already points to one high official connected with the department here.

Secret agents of the government, are searching both in this country and Europe for the maid and butler formerly employed by Allen and Mrs. Jenkins at the Lorraine. Mrs. Jenkins has testified that the maid was present and aided in the packing of much dutiable goods brought in by Allen. The butler was also familiar with the facts, having unpacked the trunks when they reached New York. He is an Austrian and was last heard of in Chicago. The maid is in France.

The present plan is to hasten the trials as much as possible with a view to bringing out evidence that will aid in the investigation which now leads into more than one European mansion.

The wife of the New Yorker banker that is declared to have suggested the smuggling scheme to Allen in London is held to have a necklace of pearls valued at $1,000,000, on which not a cent of duty has ever been received by the government. The pearls were brought in a few days ago and are believed to have been passed by the same man against whom suspicion now rests.

Governor Dix Honors Their Extrajudicial to Pittsburgh as Mellon Divorce Witnesses.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 8.—Alfred George Cupprey and Captain Thomas Kirkbridge of London must go to Pittsburgh to testify in the Mellon divorce action. Governor Dix honored today a warrant for their extradition.

Vice-President, Electric Fan and Sun All on Job

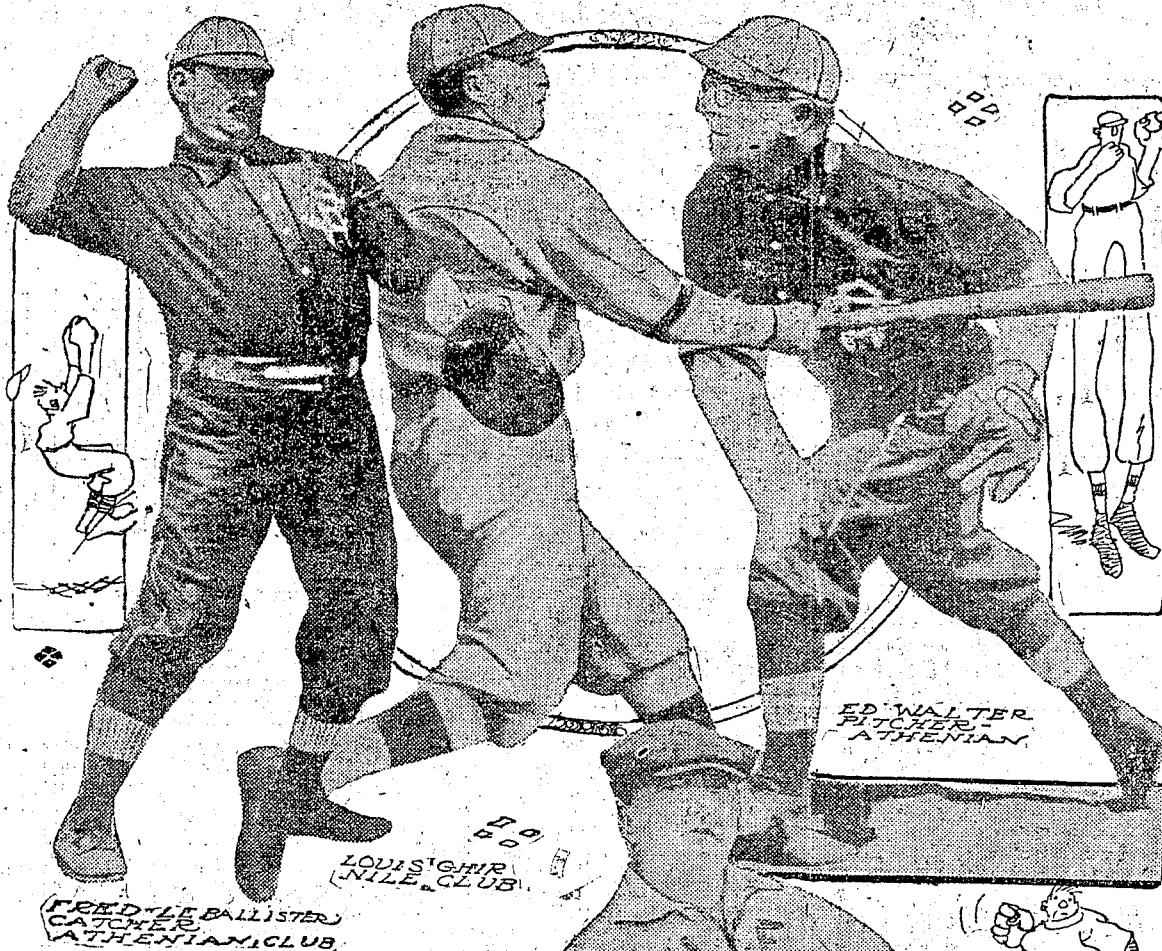

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Vice-President Sherman has acknowledged defeat in his fight to withstand the rigors of the present heat wave. For the first time in the history of the Senate an electric fan has been installed in the Senate chamber and it is placed on the desk of the presiding officer. Owing to the deadlock in the Senate

Reports Husband Missing; Found Hanging to Rafters

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—After reporting to the police last Tuesday that her husband, E. J. Bennett, a clerk in the employ of the Southern Bell Company, had disappeared, Bennett went into the garret of a rooming house today and found her husband's body hanging to the rafters. He had been dead several days. Mrs. Bennett says that her husband had been despondent and ill for some time, but she did not think that he had ended his life. The Bennetts reside at 62 Webster street.

NILE CLUB WINS CLOSE GAME OF BALL BEATS ATHENIANS BY SCORE OF 9 TO 8

Well Known Clubmen Who Met In Combat On the Diamond Yesterday Afternoon.

Contest Is First in the Series Transbay Clubs Will Hold

In a hard fought contest before a goodly number of supporters of both teams, the Athenian and Nile Club baseball teams struggled through a nine-inning game yesterday afternoon at Freeman's Park, with the result that in the final frame, with the score standing 8 to 8, the amateurs of the Nile aggregation succeeded in putting one man over the plate when Pitcher Beatty of the opposition made a wild throw to home. The score gave the challenged, Nile, first blood in the series that will be played about the bay in the next few weeks, when a number of prominent clubs, among them the Claremont Country club together with several on the other side of the bay, will participate.

APPEAR IN CLUB COLORS.

Garbed in regulation regalia of the diamond, the Nile team in white uniforms trimmed with green and the Athenian in the maroon of their traditions, the eighteen or more men well known in business and financial circles in Oakland put up an exhibition that was far from the ordinary. Not a few of them have in days past occupied important positions in various organizations and in such capacity were chosen as the representatives of their respective clubs. Arms that have long been accustomed to handling the pen, the cue or the steering wheel, took up the glove and the bat yesterday in a manner that proved that a true American never outgrows the national pastime, and from the grandstand they were heartily cheered throughout the performance.

SOME ARE STAR PLAYERS.

Schnable, as shortstop for the Nile men, put up a clever exhibition with little for criticism except that his throws lacked somewhat in distance. Al Wilkinson and Ed Walter, twirlers for the Nile and Athenian clubs, respectively, occupied the mound in becoming style. The game was without any particular features with the exception of the three-bagger knocked out by Gaskill of the Athenians, and the wind-up incident when Beatty, still home after stealing third when two men had fallen before the twisters of Kerr, who substituted Walter in the last two innings.

Louie Ghiradelli, former University of California player, found the redoubtable Walter a little too fast and without any of his one-time form at handling the stick succeeded in crossing the plate once for a tally.

With the game won by such a narrow margin the Athenian club fans assert that they will be out in full force next time to assist their team in tying the series so that a third game if played will have all the spirit of rivalry and the side line enthusiasm incident to such a contest.

City of Smoke Is in Midst of Ice Famine

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 8.—Pittsburgh is on short rations of ice tonight. There is not enough ice in the city to last its inhabitants over tomorrow. All dealers and producers at 3 o'clock this afternoon had less than 3000 tons on hand. The consumption of ice has been 4000 tons a day for the last week.

The last of terv reserve supply was used this morning. Director of Health E. R. Walters issued an official warning that the hospitals and the sick should be supplied first. He characterized the use of ice the last three days as sinful waste.

The laundries broke down under the burden of double the usual quantity of soiled linen. Thursday's regular deliveries had not all been made tonight. In the outskirts of the city tomorrow will be "dirty shirt" Sunday.

Wolgast and Britsher At Richmond Labor Day

NEW YORK, July 8.—G. McDonald, manager of Matt Wells' British lightweight, signed an agreement this afternoon with Tim O'Day of San Francisco for a match with either Ad Wolgast, the American champion, at 133 pounds, at 3 o'clock, or with Paddy McFarland of Chicago, at 133 pounds at 3 o'clock on Labor Day.

The agreement calls for the Richmond arena, in which Nelson and Wolgast fought, but provides that any other San Francisco club may be named, if O'Day wishes, notices of a change to be served a month before the fight.

McDonald asks a side stake of $2500 for McFarland and $5000 for Wolgast, with an additional forfeit of $1000 for

JAMES R. KEENE RECOVERING HEALTH

Walks in Pleadly While the Temperature Is 85 in the Shade.

Mentally Alert, Despite Long Illness, He Talks of the World Affairs.

LONDON, July 8.—The answer of James R. Keene to inquiries today in regard to his physical and mental condition, was a two-mile walk he took in the heart of London in the blazing sun, with the thermometer showing a temperature of 85 degrees in the shade. He tackled the traffic in Pleadly without hesitation.

"I enjoy the heat," said Keene, "but I am endeavoring to recover from a severe illness and do not think it would be advisable to run into New York's hot spell. I expect, however, to return to that city in a short time."

"I had a severe time with my stomach and intestinal troubles. I was for five months an inmate of a sanatorium at Bordighera. A month ago I had a severe turn and it was doubtful if I would survive. Since then I have been gradually getting better. I have lost thirty-five pounds and am now down to 120. That is too thin for me."

"One of the worrying features of my case, the internal troubles, has decreased greatly."

SPEAKS OF RACE BILL.

Mr. Keene said he was not reading the papers, but he seemed to be pretty well informed. The first question he asked was:

"Has the New York legislature adjourned? What was the fate of the racing bill?"

"Then he talked of the measure for reciprocity between the United States and Canada now pending in the Senate and said it ought to pass."

"It certainly would be a good thing for the United States," he said. "The ultimate result probably would be the annexation of Canada. Then if the arbitration treaty between England and the United States was adopted there would be an interesting question as to whether the matter of annexation should be submitted to The Hague tribunal."

Talking about Opirano Castro's appearance in Venezuela led Mr. Keene to speak of the Monroe Doctrine.

"That is one of our big responsibilities," he said. "If England continues to support the Monroe Doctrine it will stand. If England withdraws its support I am afraid it would be difficult for us to maintain alone."

Mr. Keene then talked of German commercialism and spoke of the government of that country having its finger in every pie. On militarism he said:

"I am told the French army is in a high state of efficiency and preparedness than ever before."

Referring to the recent outbreak about Morocco, Mr. Keene observed:

"There is a melon to be cut and Germany is declaring it wants its slice."

Master Flagmaker Will Defend Device Suit

VALLEJO, July 8.—A sensation was caused in this city yesterday when it became known that Lawrence Tlerman, master flagmaker at the Mare Island navy yard and special assistant to Prof. T. J. See, in charge of the naval observatory at Mare Island, had been sued for divorce by Mrs. Mary Tlerman.

Tlerman, who is one of the best-known men in the naval service on the Pacific Coast, is the only man in California who is able to handle the delicate instrument at the observatory in See's absence.

The wife wants the custody of the three children, $500 attorney's fees and $75 a month alimony. Tlerman plans to bitterly fight the action and claims that he will be able to absolutely disprove all of his wife's allegations.

He has already employed City Attorney William T. O'Donnell and other lawyers will also be retained.

Driverless Fire Truck Dashes Madly Down Streets, But Dodges Pedestrians.

The Intelligent Animals Swerve From Side to Side to Avoid Collision

Several persons on East Fourteenth street owe their escape from injuries and possible death yesterday afternoon to the intelligence of two fire horses belonging to the Brooklyn fire house, when the animals dragged a heavy fire truck six blocks along the thoroughfare without the guidance of a driver and skillfully dodged cars, vehicles and pedestrians while running at breakneck speed.

A fire alarm was rung in from box 143 at Twenty-eighth avenue and East Eleventh street. The horses ran to their places and were hustled into their harness. Before the driver, John Meyers, could climb to his seat, the horses plunged out of the door and dashed eastward along East Fourteenth street.

At Thirteenth avenue a woman pushing a baby carriage was crossing the path of the team. She became confused or frightened when she saw the horses, but the latter swerved their heavy truck aside and passed her without injury. The same thing occurred a block further on, when the horses turned to the left side of the road to pass a street car and an automobile.

At Nineteenth avenue Joseph Vincent, a horseholder, ran out of his shop at the sound of the racing team. He had shod the horses many times and they obeyed his command to stop. As they slowed down Vincent climbed onto the running board and to the driver's seat where he got possession of the reins and stopped the runaways.

Cattle Falling Dead As Result of Heat

Two-Millions Will Be Loss Sustained by Owners of Ranches.

GALVESTON, Tex., July 8.—Thousands of head of cattle have died from heat, hunger and thirst on the ranges in Western Texas and in the Pecos valley and the losses even now are estimated from $600,000 to $750,000, and unless generous rains fall within ten days the losses will be a couple of million or more.

QUESTION WHETHER DALTON WILL GO UPON THE STAND

Attorneys for Assessor Have Not Decided Whether or Not to Have Him Testify

The case of County Assessor Dalton, charged with having asked for and accepted a bribe from the Spring Valley Water Company, will be resumed tomorrow. The session will be held in Judge Brown's department of the Superior court.

It is expected that the case will be brought to a close before the end of the present week, unless there should be very lengthy cross-examinations on the part of counsel on both sides of the case.

At the conclusion of the session yesterday at noon the attorneys for the prosecution declared they felt they would be able to bring their side of the case to a close at the latest before tomorrow night. In the event, however, the defense should desire to make an extended cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution, such an ending could not be expected.

DALTON TO TESTIFY

There was some speculation indulged in as to whether or not the defendant, County Assessor Dalton, would take the stand in his own behalf. The matter was brought to the attention of some of the counsel of the defense and from these it was ascertained that there were several meetings to be held among themselves for the purpose of deciding upon that feature of the case. It was stated, among other things, that there was to be a meeting of counsel for the defense at the residence of one of the counsel, Dalton yesterday afternoon for the purpose of determining upon the matter, but that no agreement had been reached, and that there might be several meetings between counsel held on the subject before the next meeting of the court.

At the same time there was an impression received that Dalton would take the stand in his own behalf regardless of what technical objections might be made by counsel in his behalf.

One of the principal features of the session of the trial yesterday was the testimony of Miss Harms of Pleasanton, this county, who told a story in support of the counsel of the defense and from these the latter showed the alleged conference regarding the agreement between Eastman and Dalton, for the passing of the first installment of the alleged $25,000 for the purported reduction of the assessment of the riparian rights of the property of the Spring Valley Water Company in Alameda county.

SPECULATION RIFE

There has been some speculation on the part of the people who have been following the case as to the individuality of the man, who, under the name of Kelly, appeared in a special issue of the county restaurant when the alleged conference was held there between Eastman and Dalton.

WALTER LEIMERT TO WED EASTERN GIRL HE MET ON EUROPEAN TRAVELS

Engagement Recalls His Betrothal to Avis Stirling and Sudden Break.

Society is pleasantly agitated over the news that has just come from Williamstown, Mass., of the engagement of Walter H. Leimert, the wealthy young business man of this city, and Miss Henrietta Doughty, daughter of one of Williamstown's oldest and wealthiest families.

Back of the announcement, which has not yet been made formal, lies the story of a chance meeting between the Oaklander and the Massachusetts maid in one of the continental watering places. Miss Doughty, with her parents, was making a world tour when she met Leimert. The latter was spending six months in Europe sight seeing.

The story of the engagement leaked out on Leimert's return recently but the secret was carefully guarded within the circle of his closest friends until yesterday, when somebody told. And then it was learned that Leimert was not in town; that he had gone east, and further, that he was in Williamstown, Mass., the guest of his fiancée's parents.

FORMER ENGAGEMENT.

Three years ago Leimert was engaged to marry Miss Avis Stirling, sister of the poet and Carmel resident, George Stirling. Of a sudden Miss Stirling announced from her home in the Key Route Inn that the engagement was broken. This came after a wedding date had been set and all arrangements for the marriage practically completed.

And a little less than a year ago it was whispered in the Oakland clubs and over the tea cups that Walter Leimert had lost his heart to one of the Rooney sisters of San Francisco. But Leimert steadily denied the story and left shortly afterward for Europe.

And now comes the announcement of his engagement to Miss Doughty. Cupid lost no time and stood gallantly behind the Californian until victory crowned his efforts. Then the little god of love fled to tell the story of his conquest.

Walter Leimert has for a number of years been associated with Wickham Hart, a wealthy real estate syndicate. He is one of the best known business men and real estate promoters of the bay region. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Leimert, pioneer Oakland residents.

STORK AGAIN HOVERS OVER DUKE'S CHATEAU

PARIS, July 8.—The Duke de Talleyrand, husband of Anna Gould, is the proudest man in France today. The kindly stork is expected to bring a Christmas gift.

It has been stated that Kelly is one of the best known private detectives in this city, and that he has been called upon to render great service to the office of the district attorney in following up the tracks of offenders against the law. In the majority of cases convictions follow. Among these cases, it has been stated, have been many of those which grew out of the alleged violation of the anti-racing law at the race course in this city.

OAKLAND AUTOIST MASTERS MACHINE IN SHORT TIME

Sylvester McKee Motors to Vancouver Two Months
After Purchase.

OTHER TOURS ARE PLANNED FOR FUTURE

One to El Paso, Texas, and Thence to Kansas Will Be Undertaken.

It was only a few years back, when the automobile, while considered as one of the most wonderful creations of man's fertile mind, was still an imperfect piece of work and at that time many there were who looked upon the motor car as simply a fad, enjoying an almost unbounded craze, as did the bicycle which came before—furthermore that the time was not far distant when this supposed craze would die out. That such was not the case is too well known to need any discussion at this time. In those days they could get over the ground in remarkably fast time and they soon became the rich man's toy. To undertake other than a short journey was considered foolhardy.

What a vast change is represented in the automobile of the present day! But a few days ago Sylvester McKee, 65 years young, accompanied by his daughter and granddaughter, returned from over a two months' tour in an E. M. F. While gone they motored, leisurely, as far north as Vancouver, B. C., taking in, while en route, many short side trips to different points of interest. Six months ago McKee knew nothing of the supposed intricacies of an automobile. He had never owned nor driven one.

TAKES CAMPING OUTFIT.

Two months after his purchase, to be exact, on April 26, he left Oakland with his family, carrying with him an entire camping outfit. During his tour he never slept under a roof—each night as they arrived at some suitable place camp was pitched—to be again broken on the following morning and the journey again continued.

In easy stages they traveled, having no set schedule to follow, and content upon enjoying the scenery and country. Portland, Seattle and Vancouver were reached in due season without any of even the minor mechanical troubles being experienced. A few days were spent in each of these cities. The return trip home was undertaken about three weeks ago and on July 4 Oakland was reached.

After a few days' rest McKee intends touring the San Joaquin and Sacramento valley territories and working his way south to Los Angeles in easy stages.

Among other tours of note he intends taking this summer are a motor trip as far as El Paso, Tex. From this point he intends to work his way north as far as Kansas.

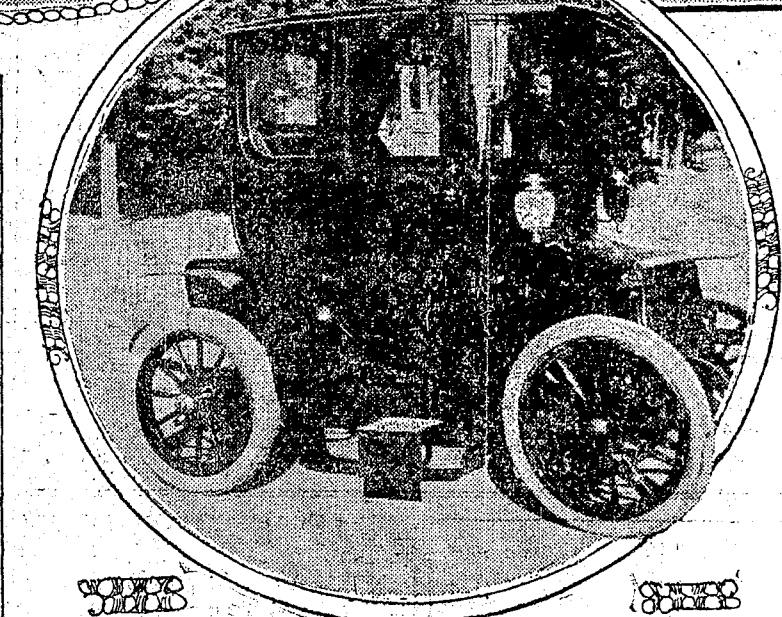

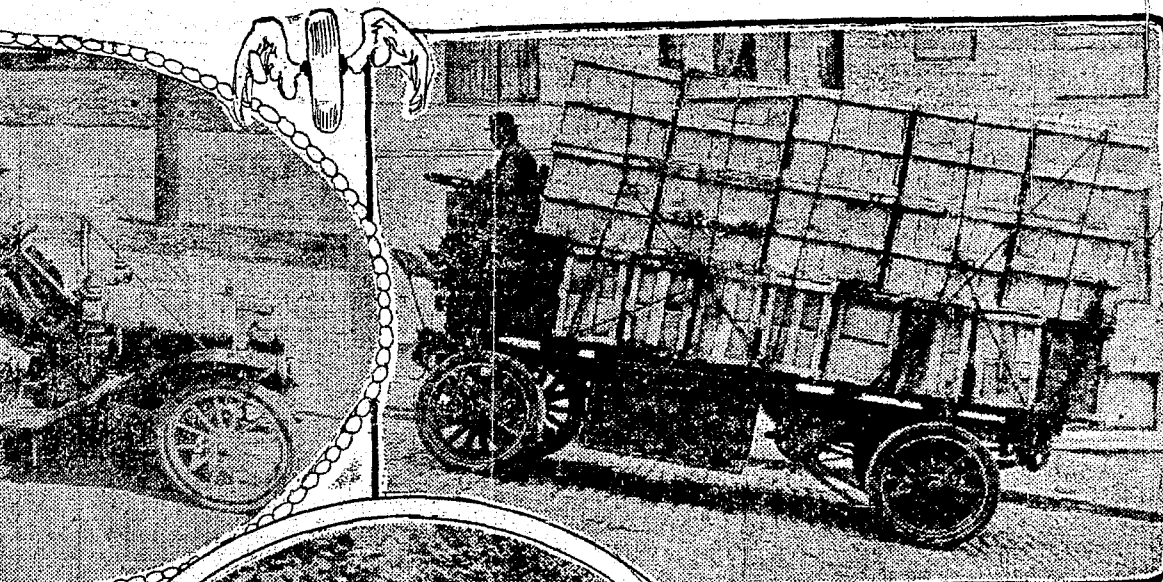

When interviewed regarding his recent journey and his future plans, McKee waxed enthusiastic over his accomplishments. He has a great deal of faith in his car and is more than satisfied with what pleasure, without trouble, he already has had. He recalls, in speaking of road conditions, one place in Douglas county, Oregon, where he encountered, on a road which was nothing more than an old cow-path, a mud-hole of considerable width. Cutting some hazel brush he made a pontoon bridge over which he was enabled to cross.

Firestone Tires and Burman Are Winners

The Speed King is still at it.

To further demonstrate his right to the title of king of speedsters, Bob Burman in the Milwaukee race met broke the track record for a mile, covering the distance in 50.15 seconds, won the five-mile free-for-all, and then to show the natives some real speed tore off an exhibition two miles in one minute and 43 seconds. The breaking of records is now a regular diet with Bob and it looks as though the famous $10,000 head-dress presented to him at Indianapolis by H. S. Firestone would remain in the possession of his kingship for some time to come.

Burman used regular stock Firestone tires at the meet, as did several other fast ones, and the score shows six firsts, three seconds and one third to the credit of the crown donor.

Ford Is Many Times a Winner

DETROIT, July 8.—News of two splendid motor car triumphs by Ford Model T cars, were received from Ford dealers yesterday at the offices of the Ford Motor Company in Highland Park. In a big hill climbing contest at Forestville, N. Y., four Ford cars were entered and they made a clean sweep, all the other contesting cars finishing behind the quartette of Model T's. There were thirteen entries. The free-for-all event also was won by the Ford.

From Des Moines came the information that the two Ford Model T's entered in a 700-mile reliability run, covering a large portion of the state, finishing with a total of only seven points scored against the two cars. One of the Fords had only one point scored against it, with six for the other one. The winning Cadillac had no points against it, while its running mate had twelve, making twelve points against the Cadillac and seven for the Ford. Twenty-five cars were entered in the run.

C. J. Herring, the Ford dealer at Des Moines, was at the Ford factory yesterday trying to get some more cars for his state. He said the big reliability run was the most successful in stimulating motor car interest that had ever been held in the state.

MOTORCYCLE NOTES

CHAMPIONSHIP RACE CARD.
With more than $1,000 in cash prizes, perhaps as much more in other awards, medals and the honors of three national championships, and the Bosch silver trophy to crown it all, there is little wonder the America's fastest and most daring motorcycle racers, as well as the rank and file of American motorists, are now looking to Buffalo and the track at Fort Erie, where these prizes and honors are to be contested for on Friday and Saturday, July 14 and 15.

Motorcycling itself has a firmer grip than ever this year on the riding public and this situation is reflected in the widespread interest shown in the coming national meet of the Federation of American Motorcyclists at Buffalo. Pleasure jaunts and social features will play a big part in the meet—and in this department Buffalo has outdone herself of motorcyclists, who will attend the meet. A new feature of the entertainment is a boat ride on the lake Thursday evening, July 13, for all visiting motorcyclists. Then on Friday and Saturday come the races, with the following program, just announced by C. J. Murray, general manager of the event.

Entry blanks have been sent all over the country and from all over the country they are coming back signed. It is assured that there will be real competition during the two programs at Fort Erie and that America will have an example of the thrill of a modern motorcycle race as well as a strenuous test of its reliability and utility, features now regarded as important as that of speed—all three being combined in the motorcycle of today.

Final arrangements are being made and the preliminary for the two national tours which will start today (July 9), bringing the army of motorcyclists into Buffalo on Wednesday. The interest manifested in these tours has exceeded all expectations, riders everywhere welcoming the opportunity to motor to Buffalo in congenial company, under well-laid plans and under riding conditions that will make their journey a real pleasure instead of a grinding competition.

GASOLINE GALLANTS.
The jousting days of Old England, when knights rode forth to do or die and were always ready to break a lance for a lady's smile, will be recalled by the gallants who, astride modern steeds of steel, will charge under the arches at Walbrook, Md., July 4.

Their "steeds" will puff and snort as in the olden days, but in their reins will course the new, magic blood of the Twentieth Century, for the "knights" are to go to the arena mounted on motorcycles. At Walbrook, the new, and the old will be happily combined to make an American holiday.

The riders will test their skill at spear-throwing rings, riding at a speed of not less than 20 miles an hour. And he who spears the most will be declared victor. Tandem teams will also have a competition of their own, and another prize will be awarded the "knights" who spears the most rings while carrying a "ladies faire" seated on his handle bars. The Baltimore Motorcycle club is staging this unique affair and promises to have at least fifty riders in competition.

TRIUMPH IN ROAD TESTS.
June brought several unique motorcycle tests over country roads—all of which have been safely concluded with the motorcycle staggering under additional laurels.

Perhaps the severest test was that of Nelson J. Hodgkin, of Indianapolis, who rode to Chicago and back in 14 hours and forty minutes—the distance being 418 miles—or 299 each way. He left Indianapolis at 8:10 o'clock in the morning and arrived at 6:15 a. m. He started back at 10:25 and arrived in Indianapolis at 5:50. He found bad roads in one or two places, but his machine never faltered for a second.

Another test was that of four Cleveland riders who, twitted about "looking tired" after just completing a 2,000 mile motorcycle endurance run, proved that they were not. They jumped on their motorcycles at 2 o'clock one Sunday morning and were in Buffalo at noon. They remained just long enough to deliver a message from a Cleveland newspaper and were off again for Cleveland, arriving safely the same day.

Another Indianapolis record was made by William Grepp, who returning from Cleveland, O., made the distance from Bellefontaine, O., to Indianapolis—163 miles—in 4 hours and 45 minutes.

Royalty Owns

Chalmers Cars
From the T. I. Hagen Company, Moscow, Russia, the Chalmers Motor Company recently received an order for a Chalmers touring car for a member of the Russian royal family, said E. P. Burdick, of the Pioneer Automobile company, the local Chalmers agents. The car is to be shipped to Hamburg, as the Grand Duke, for whom the car was purchased, cannot tell if he will want it in St. Petersburg or at his estates at the Black Sea.

The Mikado of Japan also owns a Chalmers car—a "30" limousine. This car was bought for the personal use of Japan's ruler by Dr. Jokichi Takamine during the visit of the Japanese commission to this country.

YEARLY MODELS HAVE NO PURPOSE

National Official Claims it a Remnant of Early Stages of Making.

"According to my study of the automobile industry the yearly model should go," says George M. Dickson, secretary and treasurer of the National Motor Vehicle Company. "It is one of the remnants of the days when business was regarded as a game. Although this practice may have had some excuse in the early stages, this time has long been passed. With the automobile in its present state of practical perfection, yearly models have no purpose. Body lines may change from time to time, but basic ideas have become permanent. New designs, apart from the chassis, are so frequent that they all resemble special orders rather than stock bodies."

"Taking all these features into consideration there is only one purpose that yearly models serve. They do help the manufacturer to unload his product. The pernicious result is the great depreciation in value of all previous cars in the hands of owners. This is unjust to the purchaser of any car to have another model supplant it that practically has no point of superiority. Now people buy service and satisfaction, rather than expensive luxuries and fads."

"The wide distribution and the varied uses to which the motor car has been put is the result of the same way in which their purchasers bought them. In our own case for instance, two years ago we arrived at the type of the present National 40 motor. This does not mean that we have stood still, but improvements have been incorporated so constantly and gradually that there has been no time that we could announce a new model. If we had followed out the model idea we would have been forced to announce a new monthly model, rather than a yearly. For this reason at that time we discontinued selling yearly models and adopted the series plan."

The new system goes far to protect the purchaser. In the first place he buys service rather than an expensive toy with a certain date of manufacture. Secondly, it protects him from the great periodic loss in investment value that every announcement of new yearly models brings to every car of the same make in owner's hands.

"And greater than all these benefits is the fact that at the date of purchase the car selected will represent

CHALMERS NAMED GLIDDEN WINNER

Supreme Court Decides Long Disputed Title as to the Trophy Owner.

All doubt of the right of the Chalmers Motor Company to the possession of the Glidden trophy has been set at rest by a decision of Justice Maclean of the New York Supreme Court, dismissing the action brought by another contestant to set aside the award of the trophy to the Chalmers "30" No. 5.

The Pioneer Auto Company, local dealers for Chalmers cars, have just received definite announcement of the decision which finally settles the Glidden tour controversy and leaves the Chalmers "30" in undisputed possession of the trophy and of the laurels it won in the longest and hardest touring contest ever held.

It will be remembered that, at the close of the tour, the referee, in spite of a protest by the Chalmers company, awarded the decision to the Pioneer car. The Chalmers company protested the decision before the National Board of the American Automobile Association on the ground that the Pioneer car had carried in the tour other than regular stock equipment under the rules.

The protest was sustained by the contest board, and the Chalmers "30" declared the winner of the tour.

An application was made by the Pioneer company for an injunction against the delivery of the trophy to the Chalmers company. This was refused and the trophy was delivered to the Chalmers company. Plaintiff then carried the case through for the trial on its merits.

The action came up for trial before Justice Maclean of the New York Supreme Court April 5. Three days were consumed by the taking of testimony and argument of counsel.

After several adjournments at the request of plaintiff, the action came up for final decision July 26, on which date plaintiff's attorney consented to the dismissal of the action without offering further evidence.

Seventh Year of Sixes

STEVENS-DURYEA SIXES for the season of 1912 have incorporated in them the refinements and developments brought out by three years' adherence to one identical model. The proven success of this model can be attributed largely to its "Unit Power Plant," "Three-Point Support" and "Multiple Disc Dry Plate Clutch"—features introduced years ago.

Six-cylinder cars were made and advocated by the Stevens-Duryea Company more than six years ago. At that time certain "wise ones" called sixes "Fads," but they are now making or introducing sixes.

Our lead is being followed in other respects; the three cardinal Stevens-Duryea principles—"The Multiple Disc Dry Plate Clutch," "Unit (Integral) Power Plant" and "Three-Point Support"—are being widely adopted. When our manufacturing friends approve so heartily, our car must be its own best advertisement, and the price is not excessive. Details and specifications on request.

FISH AND FLUFFY FARMERS VICTIMS RUFFLES SAIL TOGETHER OF RIVER PIRATES

New York Widow and Boston Belle Shipmates With Finny Tribe.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Falling to heed the "all ashore" warning given just before the steamship Harvard sailed from San Pedro yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Jessie Alexander, a vivacious beauty from Boston, was forced to return to the southern port aboard a fishing launch which happened to pass the ship soon after sailing. The facts became known here this morning when the Harvard, under command of Captain Jepson, arrived at San Francisco.

A few minutes after the big turbine had steamed from the dock the two women, who had been bidding friends bon voyage, ready to board the launch and rushing upstairs to the hurricane deck, demanded that the skipper stop the ship.

"I would like to oblige you," explained Jepson, but this would involve considerable danger, excepting after we reach the end of the bay.

When the ship came to a stop Jepson offered the alternative of a trip through to this city or a return to San Pedro by the first available craft.

"We will return," replied Mrs. Alexander. "There is a boat now."

HOMEWARD VOYAGE.

In response to the hoarse call of the Harvard's siren, Antonio Cuneo, seated in the stern of a fish laden power boat, drove alongside the steamer and upon being asked to provide passage to San Pedro for two exquisitely gowned women, immediately gave his consent and stood by prepared to assist.

The descent into the cockpit of the little craft was accomplished with some difficulty, but, thanks to the gallant Antonio, both women were soon safely seated upon a heap of fluff, and the fishing launch was thoughtfully covered with an old sack.

With the eyes of nearly every one of the 300 passengers turned upon Antonio's fair cargo, Jepson gave the word for full speed ahead, and the fishing launch was soon lost to view.

Scandal Grows in Stokes Case

NEW YORK, July 8.—The hearing of the case of the Misses Graham and Conrad, who are on preliminary trial charged with the attempted murder of the millionaire hotel proprietor, W. E. D. Stokes, was halted today by the disappearance of Witness Hart, the negro elevator boy in the Varona apartment house.

Hart was on duty in the Varona the evening of the shooting and it was said would contradict the version given by the millionaire of his visit to the young women in that apartment house.

It was expected the elevator boy would be the first witness of the day. When he failed to appear the proceedings were delayed while officials went in search of the missing witness. After waiting half an hour for the appearance of the witness, Magistrate Preschi adjourned the trial until Tuesday.

Police Commissioner Waldo today ordered a searching investigation into the scandal of the shooting and the disappearance of nine of the letters written by Stokes to Miss Graham. Fourth Deputy Police Commissioner Dillon was placed in personal charge of the investigation. The news that Commissioner Waldo was aroused and demanded a thorough investigation spread from headquarters to the department by "underground" in record time.

The very first person to appear as a "voluntary" witness was W. E. D. Stokes himself. He was informed by Dillon that he had not been sent for. But he insisted upon stating that the first thing he knew about the discovery of the let-

TRAVELS 50 MILES UP IN A BALLOON

Polish Aviator Has Hard Luck in Flight and Glides Over River.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Leo Stephens, the aeronaut in the new spherical balloon "Wanamaker," after achieving the distinction of being the first person to start on an aerial voyage from the roof of a building in the heart of the city, landed today at West Nyack, N. Y., after traveling fifty miles. Stephens with W. D. Cash as passenger, left New York this afternoon in an attempt to reach Philadelphia, but adverse winds drove them to the north, where they landed in the vicinity of a cottage on the outskirts of West Nyack.

Shortly after Stephens started Ladis Lewkisz, a Polish aviator, using a Blériot monoplane, started from Garden City to fly to the ball grounds. Central Park. When over the heart of the Bronx his fuel gave out and from an altitude of 9000 feet he was compelled to glide over the Hudson river and the Palisades into the Hackensack meadows, where he landed unhurt. His machine was badly damaged.

Letters that were introduced in court was when informed by his own attorney that they had been turned over to the state's attorney.

Late tonight Dillon decided that he would be unable to make his report before Monday morning.

It became known tonight that the policeman who had testified before Dillon of "this finding over thirty letters in the apartments upon the night of the shooting." They were brought down to headquarters today from the West 68th street station, where they have been held. After an investigation Deputy Dillon was convinced that these letters bore no part in the shooting case and they are now in the custody of Inspector Hughes of the detective bureau.

Franklin Owner Takes Long Tours

Harry Butley of Los Angeles, a driver of racing cars, won fame as a humorist a few days ago when he started out to drive in Mexico, the United States and Canada, using a 1906 Franklin touring car of 12 horsepower.

Mr. Butley had no trouble in driving in the United States for an unlimited distance and anticipated no difficulty in motoring in Canada, but was somewhat doubtful of his ability to do much touring in Mexico.

Believing, however, that he could accomplish his purpose if he got only one wheel on Mexican soil, he went to the Mexican border, where he was held up by soldiers. To them he laughingly explained his desire of motoring under three flags, and one of the uniformed men said he thought he might accommodate him.

On the border line at this point is a post marking the boundary and, under the watchful eyes of the soldiers, Butley was permitted to drive around the post, into Mexico on one side and out on the other.

Having accomplished this part of his tour, he went back to Los Angeles, where he is completing the plans for his northern trip.

GIRLS STEAL TO ADORN WITH FINERY

PHILADELPHIA.—To bodeck themselves with finery, two girls charged with robbery, presented an unusual case at the hearing before Magistrate Hughes at the Fourth and Snyder avenue police station recently.

After it had been testified that the two little girls had clambered over roofs, "jimmied" open windows and robbed a house, each was held in the custody of her parents to appear at the house of detention on Monday morning.

It was a chance remark made to a playmate which ended in their arrest by the police. Noting the costly silks which 11-year-old Beatrice Heaton wore in a game of "gipsy," a chum asked:

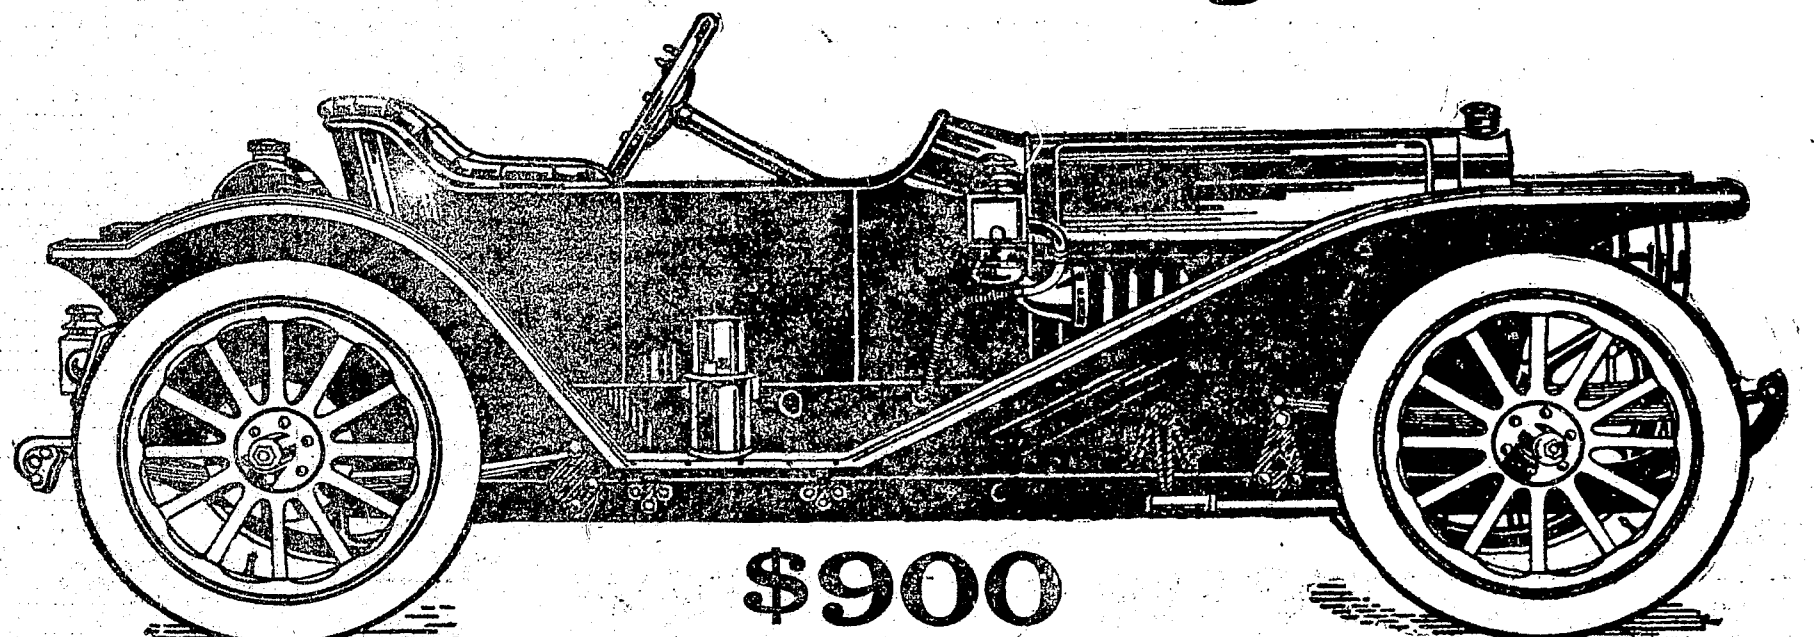

"Where did you get that, Tessie?" "Stole it," said Tessie. An investigation showed that the residence of Howard

Black, No. 625 Winton street had been robbed.

The fact that Mary Welles, 8 years of age, 305 Winton street, offered a valuable diamond ring to her sister as a birthday present also aroused the suspicions of Policemen Key and McCullough of the Thirty-eighth district, who submitted her to a severe examination with the result, they declare, that she told them where the articles had been stolen and how the robbery had been made.

Public Confidence and the Regal "20" Underslung Roadster

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE IS IRRESISTIBLE

No figure of speech can describe it. When the Public places its mighty "say-so" upon man, event of things, then, the whole country becomes a unit of expression that defies argument. What the people have proved they sternly believe in, they enthusiastically support, they loyally buy. Their confidence has been exchanged for confidence and when the "deal" is that between buyer and seller—the pledge of mutual faith exchanged in the open market-place—a friendship has been established upon which the world's greatest enterprises have been built.

THE TREMENDOUS SELLING POWER

behind the Regal "20" Underslung Roadster is Public Confidence, another name for popularity that in volume of orders and enthusiastic ownership is unparalleled in the history of the Automobile Industry. So great is the demand for this car, so urgent the insistence that these individual requests be immediately filled that we have had to treble the output facilities of our factories at Detroit to give Regal agents and dealers sales prestige with their thousands of customers.

EVERY EFFECT HAS A CAUSE

This is an age of reason. Men do not now take evidence on hearsay; they must see, they must know, they must have convincing proof—the absolute "reason why." So the natural procedure is to investigate the cause behind the phenomenal sales of the Regal "20" Underslung Roadster, to discover why this car is positively outselling all others; why discriminating men in every State of the Union prefer it, why they "boost" it; also what these thousands of owners have done to create a "Public Confidence" which compels an ever growing army of prospective purchasers to decide that the Roadster they want and what's more they must have is the Regal Underslung "20." This is the evidence that you naturally desire—evidence that will definitely, convincingly reveal to you the cause which placed the Regal "20" upon the pinnacle of public favor and gave this car a national fame. Let us see:

SOME FEW YEARS AGO A NEW FORCE

sprung into existence, destined to revolutionize older methods of manufacture; to place the making and selling of automobiles upon a new plane, giving the expectant public a car which at that time was a miracle of quality and setting a standard of value that up to this moment has never been surpassed.

TO EVERY PERSON

connected with the Automobile Industry the name of the Regal Motor Car Company is synonymous with an achievement, whether acknowledged openly or not, that towered above all competition; the making of the Regal Motor Car Company did first the "one thing" thought impossible, that was even ridiculed as an idle dream—it built and gave the world a standard "30" horse power Touring Car which in chassis essentials has never been surpassed, and at a price which destroyed forever the fetish that the automobile belonged exclusively to the so-called man of means. This was the first appeal to Public Confidence.

THEN CAME A CAR

that, figuratively speaking, turned the automobile world upside down. So revolutionary and startling in design and price that it seemed as if the impossible had happened. The Public had been led to believe that the limit had been reached in motor car design—of all types the conventional Roadster type seemed the most permanent, but once more the Regal Motor Car Company was to further emphasize the fact, that engineering design could be vastly improved and so was given to the world the Regal "20" Underslung Roadster, a car that literally leaped into public favor and so many were its advantages over rival cars that it immediately eliminated competition. All over the country it was enthusiastically received. It was eagerly bought—it fulfilled more promises than were made for it. When men tried to make comparisons with it they discovered no comparisons could possibly be made. It was at least a year in advance of all others. It is still ahead. Everywhere it compels attention. It is the one car that creates in people's minds the need of a car. It has made an overwhelming appeal to Public Confidence.

WHAT DOES "UNDERSLUNG" MEAN?

First of all it means safety. It is an insurance against "turning turtle" the cause of 75% of all automobile accidents. This type of construction also practically eliminates skidding. You can drive it as fast as you like and it will stick to the road. The low center of gravity, the weight of motor, body and passengers being carried well within the wheels, gives this car an ease of suspension that is almost perfect. "Underslung" also means economy. Side-sash so wearing on tires and springs is reduced to a minimum. Then, again, it makes possible a straight line drive from motor to rear wheels, conserving power which in dollars and cents saves gasoline. "Underslung" means comfort. It's a new experience to travel in a Regal "20"—The roughest road is smoothed. There is none of the side-sway so noticeable in the old type of suspension—You can turn corners at speed with bewildering ease—Every line of this car exploits comfort. "Underslung" also means beauty. It's the car that impresses you. It's conspicuous in its appeal to good taste. The body being hung below the axle gives the car a distinct trim, that rakish, straight-away look you cannot find in any other automobile upon the market, and under that low, powerful body are 10 inches of clearance, as much as any other style of suspension.

AT $900 IT IS A SENSATIONAL CAR.

By all comparisons of value it is $1000 below any of its so-called competitors. Everywhere, wonder is expressed how we make such an advanced, beautiful car for such a price. But the same economies of manufacture and development of resources that produced the "Regal 30" Touring car for $1000 have been emphasized in the Regal

"20" Underslung Roadster at $900. We anticipated a huge demand. We knew we possessed the Public's Confidence, but our greatest anticipations have been overshadowed in the tremendous sales of this car. Our huge plants are being tested to the uttermost to meet orders. Our reputation is built into every inch of every Regal "20," and the public has found it out. It's the biggest seller in the country, and that has a great deal to do with the price—$900.

SO PUBLIC CONFIDENCE HAS GROWN

All over this broad land owners are talking about their Regal "20" Underslung. When we say a national interest has been awakened we are truthfully declaring the actual fact. Every car sold has added its quota of enthusiasm to Public Opinion. Every man who owns one passes the "good thing" along to friend, neighbor and acquaintance. The price is compelling, but the performance of this car in actual service, its speed, power and endurance, its wearing and wonderful riding qualities, its beauty and mechanical distinction—these are some of the factors of its record-breaking success.

THE SEAL OF PUBLIC CONFIDENCE rests upon every Regal car that leaves our shipping platforms at Detroit. When you buy a Regal "20" Underslung Roadster you get with it the strongest guarantee ever placed upon an automobile, for Public Confidence has said and is saying that this car is not only a "good" car, but it is a car that has built into it more enthusiasm, more satisfaction than any other automobile ever offered for sale. The unanimous approval and recommendation of many thousand owners is no little argument. To please and enthrall a great army of individuals such as this, each with personal likes and dislikes is in itself a tremendous tribute to the workmanship and mechanical efficiency of the Regal "20" Underslung Roadster. But to say that any one of these owners (which you can pick at random anywhere in the country) will tell you that his Regal "20" Underslung has given him the highest service at the minimum cost of upkeep—this is a declaration of vital interest to every man who is trying to decide the pressing question—what car shall I buy?

GERMAN PRINCE
DODGES CAREER

The Military Life Distasteful to Maximilian, Who Would Get Into Politics.

BERLIN, July 8.—Great interest has been excited throughout Germany by the unusual case of a German prince, in direct line of succession to the throne, preferring a parliamentary career to a military one and withdrawing voluntarily from the army.

Prince Maximilian of Baden, holding the rank of a major general and commanding the 28th Cavalry Brigade, has retired from the army, according to an announcement in the official "Kaiserliche Zeitung," because his responsibilities as president of the upper house of parliament of Baden left him no time for his military duties. So remarkable was this step in Germany that the official version received scant credence, and rumors that the prince's retirement was due to a personal conflict with Emperor William, the Over-Warlord, were current until formally denied by the military superior of Prince Maximilian.

Prince Maximilian, as president of the Baden House of Peers, has shown himself more liberal than the majority of peers, coming out strongly in favor of an act on village administration, endorsed by the Socialists and the Baden ministry, but rejected by the House of Peers.

APPROACHES COMPLETION.

Though more than six years have passed since the marriage of the German Crown Prince and Crown Princess, the wedding present of the Prussian cities to the imperial couple is not yet an approaching completion. It will probably be presented this autumn, before the departure of the Crown Prince to take up his remote military command at Danzig.

It consists of an ornate silver table service designed by a number of the leading German artists and sculptors, one artist, for instance, working out two groups of elephants and obelisks, bearing the names and arms of the Prussian cities, another designing a series of male and female figures to represent the months and the seasons, while still others labored on intricate carvings of bowls and ornamental figures of horses and riders, cattle, etc. Under these circumstances it was difficult to obtain uniformity of design, and while some of the pieces have reposed several years in the vaults of the Imperial bank, others have been cast and recast and are even now unfinished.

HEAT OF SUN.

Professor F. Kurlbaum, of the technical university in Chemnitz, has just made an expedition to Upper Egypt for the purpose of determining the heat of the sun. His observations were made on a hill near Assuan, more than 500 feet above the sea level. It was necessary to take the observations in the driest possible climate, the sun being in order to get perpendicular rays, and at an elevation so as to operate in an atmosphere where conditions are equable.

The observations were made only on days which were perfectly cloudless and showed a minimum of moisture in the atmosphere. The method of observation, which was too technical to be described here, consisted in comparing the radiation of heat from certain black objects with that of the sun. The results of the scientist's observation showed a temperature of between 5,335 and 5,509 degrees Celsius. This was according to an older scale of measurement, but according to a scale adopted in 1907, the measurements would range between 6,002 and 6,232 degrees. The estimates of two other scientists had already shown temperatures of about the same. Dr. Goldhammer's estimate is 10,000 degrees.

FOURTEEN-STORY HOME
FOR NEW YORK B. P. O. E.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The new home of the New York Lodge No. 1, B. P. O. E., is ready for occupancy by its members when they return from their convention at Atlantic City. This will be on July 17. The immense 14-story structure, which is considered the most palatial headquarters of any lodge in the B. P. O. E., was formally dedicated yesterday. The building, with its furnishings cost $125,000.

The principal feature of the new building is the lodge room. It is larger than the grand ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria. The new home has at the disposal of visiting members 250 rooms with bath. There will be two roof gardens, each opening from the cafe, which extends the full width of the building. The structure occupies a plot 100 feet square. It is built mainly of granite, marble and limestone.

MRS. NOBLE MCCONNELL, formerly Mrs. Harry Wallerstein, an active member of fifty woman clubs.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Fifty women's clubs must alter their records because the once Mrs. Harry Wallerstein is now Mrs. Noble McConnell. Mrs. McConnell probably holds the world's record as the banner club woman of America. As Mrs. Wallerstein, she was an active member of all those fifty clubs and keenly concerned in their management. Her marriage to McConnell followed her divorce from Wallerstein.

WANAMAKER BASKS
IN KING'S SMILES

Presented to Queen by George V and Has Royal Time Generally.

(By CHESTER OVERTON.)

LONDON, July 8.—John Wanamaker, who sailed on the Oceanic, received marked attention from King George. Wanamaker spent a week before sailing as the guest of the Lord Mayor at Mansion House. He was introduced to the king by the mayor at Crystal Palace and chatted with him half an hour. The king in turn presented Wanamaker to the queen. Mr. Wanamaker occupied a distinguished visitor's seat at the coronation and also at the Guild hall function attended by the king.

Discussing his majesty, Mr. Wanamaker said: "I found the king charming, democratic and unlike what a king is supposed to be. As is possible, the queen is sweetly womanly in every way. I never enjoyed a visit to England as this. The king and queen gave a large ball Thursday night. All the week the house was in disorder and it was emptied practically for dancing space. Huge candelabra, twelve foot palms and grand pianos were sent to storage in preparation for the event."

Neighbors of Mrs. Mildred Drummond, in the aristocratic Carlton House terrace, are amused by the activity of the hostess who gave a large ball Thursday night. All the week the house was in disorder and it was emptied practically for dancing space. Huge candelabra, twelve foot palms and grand pianos were sent to storage in preparation for the event.

Mrs. Drummond lived up to tradition and cut Americans right and left. She was taken into dinner by Lord Robert Innes-Ker, whose visit to America started a rumor that he would marry Miss Marjorie Shonts, daughter of Theodore P. Shonts, president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of New York. Lord Robert is 39 years of age, unmarried and increasingly Bohemian, so that he seldom appears at the dinners of his sister-in-law, the Duchess of Roxburghe.

TWO KILLED BY EASTERN STORM

Ohio River Swept and Packet Boat Has a Narrow Escape.

WHEELING, W. Va., July 8.—Two deaths, the wrecking of five motor boats on the Ohio river and a narrow escape from destruction of the Pittsburgh-Cincinnati packet Queen City, was caused by a severe storm that broke over the city.

The Queen City was torn from its moorings and blown ashore, where it crashed into and destroyed five gasoline launchers anchored at the Ohio Valley Yacht Club's landing. The steamboat was not damaged.

On the Ohio side of the river, near Bridgeport, Fred Young, a mill worker, was feeding his pigs when a small rain cloud fell almost in an instant and carried Young and his pigs in a torrent down the hillside into Bridgeport, where they were lodged under a stone culvert. Young was dead when his body was found but the pigs were alive.

Dorothy Maxwell, aged 13, while bathing, was blown out in midstream by the wind and drowned before help could reach her.

THE WEDDING DATE FIXED.
The wedding had been fixed for June 27, but on the evening of June 21, while directing a performance of Tristan and Isolde, the conductor, who was seized with the wonderful sympathy which always distinguished his interpretation of that masterpiece, he was seized with heart pains. The attack came just after Tristan in the first act, and he expired before the second act began. The great conductor, suffering from a heart ailment and attended by doctors, was with much difficulty taken to a Munich sanitarium and died there on the evening of June 21. He had a violent attack. When he rallied Frau Fassinbinder insisted on nursing him, but from respect for the doctors, he was explained to her that her presence at the conductor's bedside would have to be justified by marriage.

INCREASE IN BUILDING OPERATIONS IS NOTED
CHICAGO, July 8.—There is a marked increase in building operations throughout the country, the totals of the different cities for June showing an increase of 11 per cent. Permits were taken out in fifty-five cities for the construction of 17,417 buildings, involving an expenditure of $29,825,000, according to official reports received by the Construction News, compared with 16,811 buildings, involving a total investment of $24,365,000 for the corresponding month last year, an increase of 11 per cent. There were increases in thirty-four and decreases in twenty-one cities.

RAILROADS INCREASE EARNINGS IN IOWA
DES MOINES, Ia., July 8.—Steam railroads operating in Iowa increased their gross earnings practically $6,000,000 during the year 1910, according to a statement issued by the state executive council. The net earnings are lower by $1,000,000 due to heavy expenditures within the state. Interstate companies show an increase in gross earnings amounting to more than $200,000. No interurban company reports a net loss.

SENATOR CUMMINS' AMENDMENTS DOOMED

IOWA INSURGENT IN LOSING FIGHT

Free Grain and Flour Also Seem Destined to Be Eliminated.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—After some difficulty in securing a quorum, the Senate resumed consideration of the Canadian reciprocity bill today and over the protest of Senator Cummins, began voting on his proposed amendments. The amendment placing meats on the free list was defeated, 14 to 32.

Senator Bailey immediately moved an adjournment. "It is apparent that we are doing business here with a bare quorum," he said, "and I think we ought to let these votes go over." The Senate voted down the motion to adjourn, 19 to 23.

Senator Cummins again referred to what he considered the unfairness of forcing a vote on his amendments before the other senators had a chance to speak or when he declared that levying a duty on Canadian meats would benefit only the big packers of the United States.

Senator Burton of Ohio, in voting against the Cummins amendment, said he did so because he thought it would upset the whole Canadian agreement. He said he favored free meat, but not as an item on the reciprocity bill. It might defeat the whole arrangement.

DEMOCRATS WITH CUMMINS.

The vote by which the Cummins free meat amendment was defeated showed Senators Bailey, Simmons and Thornton, Democrats, voting with the following Republicans in favor of the amendment: Senators Borah, Bourne, Bristow, Clapp, Clark (Wyo.), Cummins, Dixon, Gronna, Kenyon, Nelson and Sutherland.

Senator Cummins next asked for a separate vote on his amendment to admit flour and other manufactured cereal products free of duty from Canada. He said the amendment was to balance the provision of the reciprocity bill that puts grains on the free list.

Senator Bailey urged the adoption of the amendment. Senator Burton of Ohio contested the point. He declared the reciprocity bill was an "international agreement, standing by itself." Senator Burton added that he did not believe the farmers as a whole would suffer from the removal of the duty on wheat.

"Why not put flour on the free list, then?" asked Senator Cummins.

"I am willing that flour should be on the free list if it can be done without endangering the reciprocity agreement," returned Senator Burton, "but if you want free flour why don't you take it up courageously, as an independent proposition, instead of trying to tack it on this bill as a rider?"

Before a vote on the free flour amendment was taken the Senate agreed to an adjournment until next Monday, and all the other amendments went over until that time.

SAN JOSE TO HOLD FOOD EXPOSITION

Annual Fair This Year Will Be Augmented by Prune Festival.

SAN JOSE, July 8.—The third national industrial and food exposition to be given in San Jose, September 14 to 23, is the third consecutive show staged at the huge Auditorium rink, and the management feels encouraged by the successes of the two previous expositions to arrange this one on a much larger scale. As in the past, manufacturers and exhibitors from all parts of the country have already been interested in the project and many have signed up for space.

The prune festival, one of the department's year gives more than ordinary attention. The growers of the state are taking the matter up and the management will extend opportunities for competitive display to producers from all parts of the state. Primarily organized with a view of boosting Santa Clara's staple product, the festival will have a splendid influence in drawing the attention of people all over the country to the home of a fruit that once delighted the palate. It is proposed to extend the prune festival throughout the entire length of the exposition period, and many new and varied programs are in course of preparation to sustain the interest.

Decorative effects this year will be startling. The management recently let the contract for the work to a prominent California firm, with the understanding that no expense be spared to make the huge Auditorium building a handsome setting for the exposition.

PROF. ROHAN TO TELL OF IRELAND AND HER BEAUTIES

PROF. MICHAEL G. ROHAN of Marquette University, who is to lecture here.

Professor Michael G. Rohan of Marquette University, Milwaukee, and national chairman Irish History committee, will deliver an illustrated lecture entitled "Beautiful Ireland," under the auspices of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and Ladies Auxiliary of Alameda county, next Wednesday evening at St. Francis de Sales hall, Twenty-first and Grove streets, Oakland. Among the subjects treated in Professor Rohan's discourse will be his description of Ireland's industrial and commercial conditions, his depiction of the beautiful scenery of the great island, a portrayal of the sufferings of her people, her loyalty to faith in the days of persecution, his eulogies of her public men and leaders, her magnificent cathedrals, her ruined abbeys, her beautiful lakes, and her monuments to public men.

This lecture with the concert of Irish music and song, which will precede it, will be one of the most delightful entertainments that has ever been undertaken by the Hibernians in Oakland. The committee having the affair in charge consists of Rev. Father Maher, John Forrest, John Cox, R. J. Heany and F. J. Youell.

Anna Gould Expects Visit of Stork as a Christmas Gift.

PARIS, July 8.—The Duke de Tallyrand is the proudest man in France today. The kindly stork is expected to bring a Christmas gift that will help to preserve the family name and hand down to posterity some of the goodness of the Tallyrands which generations of noble blood have given them. A son, now more than a year old, arrived in due time to bless the second marriage of Anna Gould, who had three sons by her first husband, Count Boni de Castellane, a kinsman of the Duke de Tallyrand.

The Duchess Anna is being courted with the attentions of the vain Duke at the Chateau de Marcy, where her room is a veritable bower of flowers, replenished each morning by her devoted and adoring husband. Those who have seen her say that she looks beautiful in her silken covered bed, where she is placed by the doctors' orders.

The doctors in charge of the case deplored to the Duke of being able to bring to a happy conclusion the Duchess' hopes, owing to her condition, which they said necessitated an operation. But when the Duke said if the operation was necessary he would call in Dr. Doyen, they, fully appreciating the catastrophe of that eminent physician of appropriating everything in sight for himself, considered their decision and decided that the Duchess would get along very well without an operation if she would remain quietly in bed.

So the Duchess Anna is following the advice of the doctors and rather than in the attentions lavished upon her by her lover-husband.

The stork seems to be having a busy time in France, for the Duke de Tallyrand near Compiègne is expected by Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Mitchell Depew, the former a nephew of former Senator Chauncey Depew and the latter formerly Mrs. Trenor Parks of New York. Senator and Mrs. Depew will visit their nephew at their chateau next week.

SPOKANE NOT TO BE TOTAL LOSS

Company Thinks Vessel Can Be Raised and Put into Service Again.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—According to a dispatch received here today, the Pacific Coast steamer Spokane, which was wrecked in the north last week, will not prove a total loss, as it is now believed that the vessel can be raised and again put in commission. The steamer is lying so high out of the water that the sea is rough and the tide high.

By raising the ship, it is understood that the company expects to not only restore the vessel, but also save large sums that would otherwise have to be paid for loss of baggage. In this connection it is said that individual claims total as high as $20,000. Most of the travelers of the ill-fated ship have had their baggage money returned and signed a waiver for all damages, including baggage.

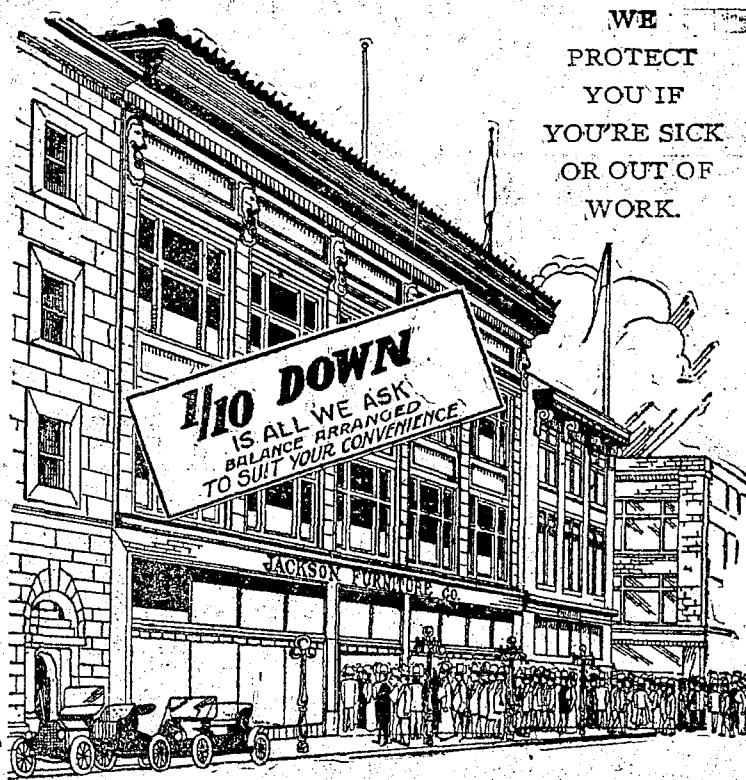

SALOON ROBBED OF CASH. SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—The saloon of Charles Bush, 1601 Polson street, was broken into during the night and $61.30 taken from a hiding place beneath the bar. The burglar was evidently familiar with the premises.

WONDERFUL BALL COSTUMES ENVIED

All Gayety of the Coronation Season Outdone by Dress.

LONDON, July 8.—Nothing in the gayety of the coronation season has provoked so much discussion as the wonderful costumes ball in which American women, whether visitors or linked to English society by marriage to men of title, too such a prominent lead. Their costumes, both in beauty and historical accuracy, were wonderful and costly examples of historical accuracy and their magnificent jewels completely eclipsed the paste and tinsel of some of the proudest titled women of the realm. They even outstripped royalty in gala dress. There is every probability that the swing gained by the coronation period will be felt in New York during the season of the coming winter as both the visiting American women and the American peeresses would be glad to repeat their London triumphs at home. All agree it would be a shame to toss aside the expensive costumes after a single appearance and New York society probably will have an opportunity to see the best of them at one or two balls patterned along the lines of the Shakespearean ball and the fancy dress affair at the Savoy.

At the latter one of the most notable and artistic costumes was that of Mrs. A. Waldo Dewey, wife of a cousin of Admiral Dewey, who appeared as a ballet girl and Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, who created a sensation costumed as Juno.

At the Shakespearean ball, the costumes were all historical, dresses of the period of the great dramatist and poet. Among those whose costumes won praise were the Duchess of Roxburghe, who was Miss May Goelet, the Countess of Craven, who was Miss Cornelia Bradley-Martin; Lady Alistair Innes-Ker, who was Miss Anna Brees; the Duchess of Manchester, who was Miss Helen Zimmerman and the Countess of Essex, who was Miss Adele Beach Grant.

A PEEK INTO HIS POCKET would show the box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve that E. S. Loper, a carpenter, of Marilla, N. Y., always carries. "I have never had a cut, wound, bruise or sore that would not soon heal," he writes. Great healer of burns, boils, scalds, chapped hands and lips, fever sores, skin-rupures, eczema, corns and piles. 25c at Osgood Bros.

STANDARD STOCK ISSUES INACTIVE

Trading Dull While Financial World Awaits Government Crop Report.

(By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.) NEW YORK, July 8.—Because the financial world is waiting for the crop report to be issued by the government Monday, trading in the stock market today was very light. Net changes were not important. Western Maryland and American Ice made new high records but the Standard issues were not active. There has been a change of sentiment on the part of the bankers identified with the Standard Oil interests and these are more favorable to the market. There is reason for expecting that action will be begun by the United States Court at St. Louis Monday to reorganize the Standard Oil Company in compliance with the decision of the Supreme Court. The important thing will be that the pipe line, the refineries and eleven to have been responsible.

The bank statement today was a remarkable document, owing to the impossibility of harmonizing the national and state bank methods of holding reserves. Trust companies which are now members of the clearing house carry much of their reserve as deposits in national banks. Thus there is duplication of reserve and for the present the clearing house simply gives the figures of actual cash without attempting to figure the percentage.

With good crops assured, the news from Europe of the organization of an international steel trust had considerable influence on the stock market this week.

YEGGMAN SUSPECT JAILED.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Leon Hawley was arrested Friday night and was charged with vagrancy, pending an investigation by the police who believe that he may be one of the gang of cracksmen who during the last week have blown open safes in four business houses of the city. His case has been continued until the investigation is completed.

ROBBED ON ELECTRIC CAR.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—A. J. Hinden of 1730 Howard street was relieved of $36 by pickpockets on a Market street car last evening. He was jostled by two men whom he believed to have been responsible.

TEACHERS WILL STUDY HISTORY

Prominent Educator to Address California Pedagogues at Session July 15th.

The summer meeting of the history section of the California Teachers' Association is held in connection with the summer session of the University of California at Berkeley. This year it will occur at 8:45, July 15, in the faculty room of California Hall at the university. The general subject is "Peace," and on the program are such well-known speakers as President David Starr Jordan of Stanford University and President S. C. Mitchell of the University of South Carolina. The history teachers of California extend a cordial invitation to members of the National Educational Association, to students at the summer session and to all others interested in history.

OAKLAND ADVANCES IN PROSPERITY

LAST HALF OF YEAR ROSEATE

Balance Sheet Satisfactory, Work Plenty and Wages Good.

Property Values Increasing, Building General and the Trade Brisk.

GREATER Oakland has started to round out what is destined to be the most prosperous half-year period in its history. The municipality entered upon the task of breaking all previous get-busy records on the first of July, at which time opened the closing half of the current year.

The city started off the closing half-year period with a balance to the good in the way of new building of $3,352,765.70, and with approximately $10,000,000 worth of public and private improvements in sight. Of that really generous sum approximately $6,000,000 stands for work of a public or semi-public nature, such as the construction of municipal wharves, the erection of public school buildings, the rearing of a new city hall, the laying out of parks, the establishing of a municipal auditorium, the grading of streets, the laying of street car tracks, the extension of sewer systems, the electrifying of local steam roads, the building of new depots and the furthering and advancing of all the other integral parts which in the composite tell the story of the industrial and civic growth of this great commonwealth on the east shore of the bay.

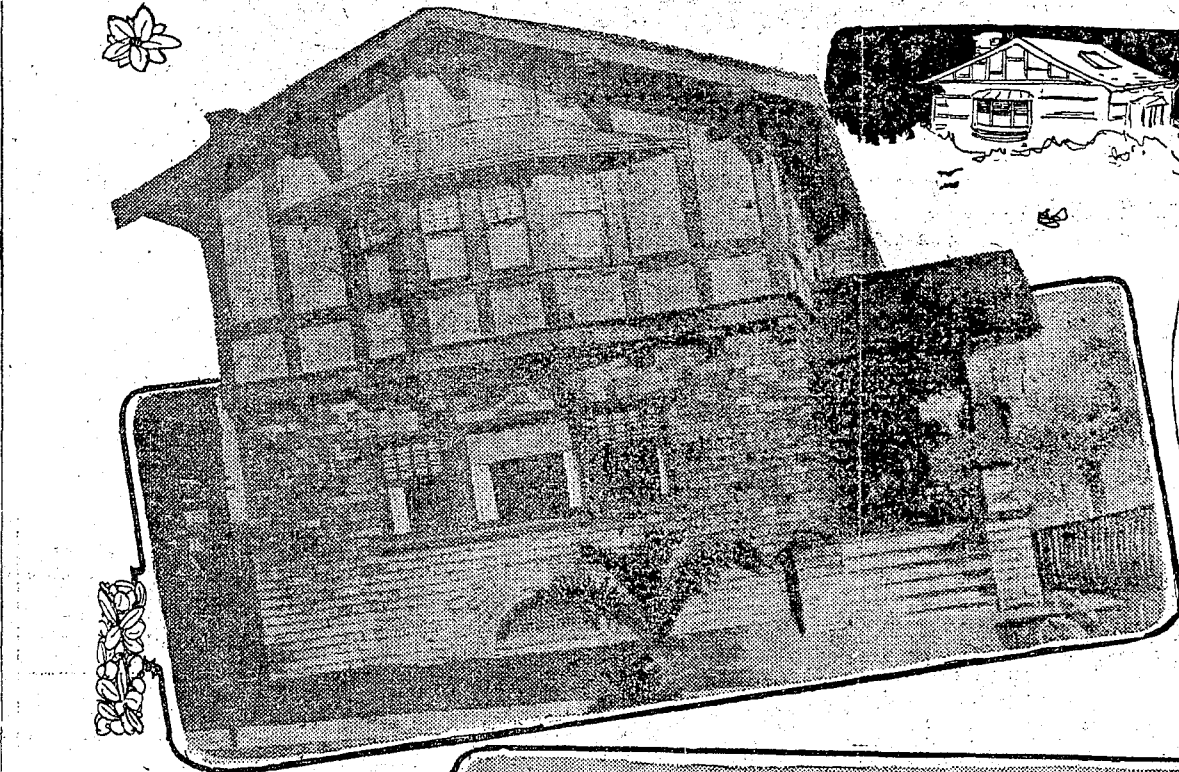

It has been said, and truly, that no better insight into a city's standing can be afforded than is offered by its building and its loan reports. Greater Oakland can stand the test in that regard as well, yes, and better, than most cities which dot the topography of these broad United States. So also, are the local bank clearings a true index of Oakland's standing and its right to an A No. 1 rating. To the records mentioned the people of Oakland point with pride, knowing them to be an encyclopedia of the city's business prosperity and growth. Still another index is offered by the volume and value of the real estate deals which are daily, weekly and monthly recorded.

JUNE BUILDING RECORD.
The month of June recorded a total of 329 building permits issued by the Board of Public Works—now known as the Department of Public Health and Safety—representing a monetary outlay for new buildings, alterations, etc. of $656,791. Of that amount but $49,545 were for repairs and like work. The rest is involved in new building work, therefore $607,246. That amount is the largest expended for operations of that character during any thirty-day period of the current year except one. The summary in details follows:

RÉSUMÉ OF LOANS.

The loan report for Alameda county for the months of May and June, and for the first and second quarters of the current year, compiled by George W. Austin, president of the Oakland Real Estate Association, is very gratifying. It shows that bank mortgages and deeds of trust to the value of $1,107,224.15, and personal mortgages and deeds of trust to the value of $946,442.17 were recorded during June. The aggregate value of the documents of that character recorded was $2,053,666.32. Bank releases and reconveyances during that period had a value of $851,476.35, while personal releases and reconveyances had a total value of $59,335.54.

BUILDING GENERAL.

Building is general throughout the city and involves an average daily expenditure of about $4,000. The downtown business section is being re-established with modern stone, brick and concrete structures, and it is but a question of a few years until all of the obsolete structures which recall the days of Oakland's listlessness are things of the past. The new city hall, a 17-story stone structure, being erected at a cost of $1,300,000, will occupy a site almost in the very heart of the retail business area. Excavating for the foundation was completed some days ago, and the work of laying the concrete foundations for the superstructure will soon commence. Nearly all of the steel is in readiness for use at the big iron works across the bay and will be delivered at the site within a month.

In the outlying sections of the city business is good and is increasing in volume. Property values are on the rise there and elsewhere within Oakland's borders, work is plenty and wages are proportionately high. The wage earners are thrifty, have money in bank and their own homes. The fact that the workers of the commonwealth are in the aggregate its heaviest tax payers may be accepted as a true index of Oakland's progress and prosperity. The weather is fine, the grain is good, money is plenty and contentment reigns. Everybody in Oakland is on the job, and is making good at it.

ADVOCATE NEW IDEAS FOR SANE JULY FOURTH

CLEVELAND, July 8.—A movement was started here by Chairman L. H. Britton and Secretary E. B. Mock of the Cleveland Independence Day Association to secure the co-operation of the Independence Day or "Sane-fourth" associations of all cities of the United States in the formation of a national independence day association to advocate new ideas for observance of the Fourth.

Municipality Interested in the Move to Extend Bulkhead Line

BERKELEY, July 8.—Berkeley real estate men are interested in the proposed extension of the bulkhead line on the local waterfront two miles into the bay, which would create 2000 acres of new land useful as factory sites. The expense of acquiring this land is estimated at $5,000,000 and the value of the realty, $10,000,000. It is proposed that the municipality control the land and receive a revenue by leasing it.

Berkeley expects to profit by the attendance at the summer session of the University of many residents of the interior, and other parts of the country, who will advertise the city's advantages on returning to their homes. The recent Sunday School convention and the coming National Educational Association gathering will have the same result as far as the college city is concerned.

NEW YORKERS INDICTED ON WILDCATING CHARGE

NEW YORK, July 8.—The federal grand jury has returned indictments charging seventy-three overt acts against A. L. Wisner & Company, firm and members, who were raided last March by postoffice inspectors. The inspectors declared investors had sent the promoters more than $2,000,000 for the purchase of mining and oil stocks. These charges are embodied in counts alleging conspiracy to defraud investors in connection with the sale of stock in the United Tonopah and Goldfield Mines, Limited. Archie L. Wisner, E. S. Wisner, John J. Meyer and Charles T. Humphrey are the individuals named in the indictment.

CITY AND OUTSIDE LANDS IN DEMAND

Active Market is Marked Feature of Summer Season Here.

A marked feature of the summer real estate market in Oakland, Alameda county and the adjacent territory has been the steady activity in residence property both improved and unimproved. That Oakland and surrounding territory has taken a firm position as a region of homes there seems to be no gain saying. The sales through the summer season have included suburban and ranch property, handsome residences in Adams Point and other close-in sections of homes and the newer residence tracts in Berkeley, the Piedmont hills and other districts.

Two of the most active residence properties have been the new Fourth Avenue Heights and East Piedmont Heights Extension tracts of the Wolkham Havens Company, which have both been placed upon the market since last fall. The former is within ten minutes of the business section of Oakland by the Grand avenue cars, and the latter may be reached in fifteen minutes by the Fourth Avenue cars, which are now a part of the College Avenue line, running to Berkeley without change.

Since the extension of the cars through the Fourth Avenue Heights tract it has become one of the show places of the city. It is the closest point of the Piedmont hills to Broadway and any lot in the tract is within a stone's throw of the wild depths of Dimond canyon or Trestle Glen. There are many beautiful walks, drives and automobile routes leading from the tract throughout the surrounding country and into the canyons, where running water is to be met with.

AUSTIN TELLS OF TRIP OVER STATE

That the smaller cities of California are prospering and have money to invest in Oakland is the report of George W. Austin, who has returned from a business trip through Paso Robles, San Luis Obispo, Salinas, San Jose and other towns. Austin said:

"I made particular inquiry into the conditions in real estate, business, and banking circles and found that there was a universal condition of prosperity. I also met with eager inquiry as to the opportunities for investment in Oakland. There could be no doubt of the confidence felt regarding the future of Oakland. It is up to us to carry facts and information to outsiders. They are not only receptive, but eager to listen."

REALTY MEN ACCORDED PRAISE

Local Association Has Support of Entire Community in Its Work.

At Last Meeting Many Applications for Membership Were Acted Upon.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Oakland Real Estate Association in the Oakland Bank of Savings there were submitted the applications for membership of a number of dealers, who sent letters heartily endorsing the new policy of actively boosting Oakland and controlling the procedure of real estate transactions. There was a further discussion of the matter of contracts between the dealers and sellers of property, but the final passage of a resolution was deferred until the next meeting when the new members will have a voice.

The chief subject of general discussion was the entrance of the Oakland and Antioch Railroad into Oakland. The members were a unit in praising the advantages to the city from the opening of a rich supporting agricultural district in a region suitable for ranches and country homes. It was stated that this demand had been the most general met with by real estate men, and that the new road would afford acreage at low figures within quick access of Oakland. One dealer stated that a small deposit had within a few weeks returned him the chance for $200 profits.

The meetings of the association are held weekly now on Tuesdays at five o'clock. A full attendance is desired at the adoption of rules of business procedure at the next meeting.

KELLEY RESIDENCE SOLD FOR $13,000

The Belden Estate Company Purchases Property; Adds It to "Brookside"

The past week marked another large transaction in residence property. When the Belden Real Estate Co. purchased the home of Mrs. G. W. Kelley, on Piedmont Avenue near Linda Avenue for $13,000. For some years this has been the "show cottage" of Oakland.
It adjoins "Glen Echo" recently purchased by the same corporation and its spacious grounds will be added to and become a part of "Brookside Manor," the beautiful private residence park now being made of "Glen Echo" by the Belden Estate Co.

NEWSPAPER RECORDS ARE BROKEN IN MAY

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Records for the newspaper business in this country were broken in May when 110,165 tons of print paper were produced and 37,242 tons shipped, according to statistics filed with the Commissioner of Corporations by the American Paper and Pulp Association. An increase was shown over April of 11,000 tons in production and 10,350 in shipments, while stocks on hand increased 6,185.

TRIBUTE TO AMERICAN ART SEEN IN BERLIN PICTURES
French Now Own Works by Humphreys, Johnstone and Gay; Minnie Tracey's Success Pleases

(By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.)
PARIS, July 5.—Eugene Bertin, one of our Carnegie-like philanthropists, has left to the French nation a collection of pictures which contains a noteworthy tribute to American art. For in this fine collection, a part of which goes to the Louvre and a part to the Luxembourg, it finds two distinguished American artists well represented. They are Humphreys Johnstone of New York and Walter Gay of Massachusetts. Johnstone is an associate member of the National Society of Fine Arts and also of the Paris Society of American Painters, of which Dounnat has long been president. Gay is the most plural gold medalist of any American painter residing abroad. Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Antwerp and Munich have all given him gold medals. Their pictures are now honored in the Luxembourg and later will go to the Louvre.
John Calvin Browne of Denver, Chicago, Manchester, London, and Paris, has just given the most extraordinary lesson in advertising ever witnessed in Paris. He is manager of the Magic City, a species of Coney Island, which he has established on the Quai d'Orsay. This ingenious namesake of the German reformer had a portrait of Mrs. Browne painted by one of the best painters of the society of French artists. Of this he has had many copies made and numerous prints struck off. The latter were posted all over Paris with the two simple words "Magic City" under them.
The famous painting itself and the women along the grand boulevards from the Madeleine to the Porte St. Martin. Mrs. Browne, who is a very good-looking woman, is carrying a large bag of samples and is talking to the backs of the women along the grand boulevards from the Madeleine to the Porte St. Martin. Mrs. Browne, who is a very good-looking woman, is carrying a large bag of samples and is talking to the backs of the women along the grand boulevards from the Madeleine to the Porte St. Martin.
H. Wyckoff, alterations, 1833 Tenth street, $100.
Mrs. Nichols, addition, Melrose, southeast corner of Seminary avenue and Noble street, $180.
G. W. Williams, 1-story 3-room dwelling, Elmhurst, west side of Eighty-seventh avenue, 250 feet south of B street, $400.
R. Shannon, 1 1/2-story dwelling, Fruitvale, west side of Sixtieth or Richfield avenue, 80 feet south of Taylor street, $2000.

BUILDING IN ALAMEDA IS ACTIVE

ALAMEDA, July 5.—Alameda's Fourth of July celebration and the consequent influx of visitors led to many inquiries as to property in this city, the strangers being attracted by the excellent streets, parks and playgrounds and school facilities, as well as the rapid transit to both Oakland and San Francisco. The establishing of the Southern Pacific service between this city and Fourteenth and Franklin streets, Oakland, will mean the shopping of hundreds in Oakland who heretofore have gone to San Francisco. The trip from this city to Oakland on the new line will consume about 12 minutes. The new line will run from High street and Emcal avenue along 24th and Central avenues to Eighth street, north on Eighth street and over the marsh into Oakland.
Real estate dealers report that many inquiries as to local property have been made and expect that when the new electric service is entirely in operation, that is on both the north and south side lines, that there will be many sales in Alameda.
The east end of the city, in the vicinity of Lincoln Park, is now the center of most of the building activity. Many homes are in course of construction on Garfield avenue.
This district was formerly at a distance from trains, but the new electric service will be so operated that trains will be within a block of a former isolated section. The East End boulevard is attractive to investors and it is likely that it will be built up rapidly.
The East End boulevard, known as the Fernside boulevard, circles around the east end, crossing Lincoln Park. It is a favorite highway for automobilists and bids fair to become an exclusive residence section.
Bungalows costing between $2000 and $3500 are in favor in this city and many old residents are erecting this style of dwelling and deserting the large and old-fashioned homes. The real estate dealers are advising the rebuilding of the older homes and the installing of modern fixtures and appliances.
Washington and Lincoln parks continue to be the destination of many visitors to the city. Large picnic parties are taking advantage of the beautiful facilities of these places to hold picnics during the vacation period. The parks and playgrounds, it is believed, will be one of the principal magnets to attract new residents to this city.
The report of Building Inspector John Davies for the month of June is as follows:
Building permits issued during the month of June, 1911:

Permits.	Cost.
1-story dwellings 15	$25,810.00
2-story dwellings 7	23,250.00
Buildings other than dwellings 6	3,242.00
Alterations, additions and repairs 20	6,871.00
Total	$59,173.00

The corresponding month of the year 1910 is as follows:

Permits.	Cost.
1-story dwellings 18	$23,297.00
2-story dwellings 3	10,100.00
Buildings other than dwellings 2	675.00
Alterations, additions and repairs 28	14,129.00
Addition to Lincoln school 1	14,129.00
Total	$62,930.00

St. Brisson, the Baroness de Montmart, the Baroness de Heckeron and the Count Gherard. Then there was a Russian Counting head by the Count de Kossikowski, chamberlain of the czar.
Quite as strong as the French set was the fine array of American ladies of title. Here I notice the Countess de Coetloger, formerly Miss Blake of Boston; the Countess de Moxy, who was Minnie Gibb of Brooklyn; the Countess de Spottiswood-Mackin of New York; the Countess Nostez of Paris and St. Petersburg; the Baroness Fredericks, formerly Miss Christie of Detroit, and the Marquise de Sharette, who was Suzanne B. Henning of the salon was occupied by untitled American ladies of the nobility.
Mrs. Clarence Postley made the stage look like a flower garden in June. I notice that American artists have a happy way of combining music and social life. For instance, the music just given by the orchestra of the Casino, I found the applause led by three duchesses, namely, the Duchess de Rohan, the Duchess d'Uzes and the Duchess de Chaulnes.
IT WAS PHENOMENON.
In my wanderings this week around the neighborhood of Lucerne I happened on what might be called a most interesting anthropological phenomenon. It is that of an up-to-date American having deserted to a mediaeval baron. He is none other than the well-known A. B. Jessup, the owner of the fine old mediaeval castle Schloss Lenzburg, near Lucerne. Everything looks as when the castle was built eight centuries ago. Retainers, hunters, hawks, hounds, caparisoned chargers, all recall the warfare and love-making days of William the Conqueror. The castle is grim-looking and seems as though it could stand a siege of many months. The most beautiful of all is a vista of Alpine roses in full bloom. A mediaeval castle in such a setting is a sight fit for angels. The roses are a blaze of Carmine.
Louis Lupine, an aristocratic chief of police, is having a bad quarter of an hour. He is the object of a battle of flowers. The aristocratic Fleur-de-Lis and the democratic Aglantine have united against him. The fighting royalists and the revolutionary socialists demand his head. The reason for this unusual combination is that if Lupine were removed royalists and revolutionists would have a freer hand, at least in the streets.
SHOUT SELVES HORSE.
Leon Daudet and his friends of the royal Fleur-de-Lis could shout themselves hoarse in favor of a king. Jules Guesde could shout and shout until Jeanne Paures would seem only a boy orator by comparison. Their alleged grievance against Lupine is that he is not a pluralist. For he is a director of the Buz canal as well as prefect of police. And these revolutionary socialists pretend the two offices are incompatible. He cannot be a good prefect of police, they say, if he is a good director of the Buz canal.
Monsieur Lupine is now 56, yet the most active man in Paris. He has been a fighter since he won his spurs in the war of 1870. He was a member of the general staff of the French army. He has been connected with the police department for forty years. Counting his two terms of office he has been chief of the Paris police for seventeen years. And in our turbulent capital he has been under fire more frequently than Napoleon I.
"I wish to be an emperor, and I shall be!"

WILKES-BARRE, July 6.—The cellar at the residence of Mrs. Andrew Welskerger of Hamtown was carried into a coal mine during the night while she slept and a hole 20 feet wide and 20 feet deep appeared in the yard without awakening her.
When she got up this morning and opened the kitchen door she was shocked to see the hole and at the bottom of it miners in the No. 8 colliery of the Pennsylvania Coal company digging coal. A fall of roof in the mine had caused the subsidence of the surface.
The houses of Mrs. William Hoffman and Fred Hoffman, close up, were wrecked and so was the street in front of them.
BRINGING TURTLES.
SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—The Pacific Coast steamer Curacao is expected from Guyamas via ports tomorrow morning. The cargo will include the usual number of turtles.
SEATTLE, Wash., July 8.—Peter Colegrove, a dairyman, was arrested here this week and charged with maintaining a "cowless" dairy. It was the practice of Colegrove to buy the cheapest brands of condensed milk and by the use of water and sugar of milk prepare a mixture that sold readily for fresh milk.
He had fifty customers in the lower tenement districts and not one of them complained that there was no cream on their milk in the mornings.
When his wagon was stopped in the street by an inspector and the milk tested the hoax was discovered. That any others are selling this same kind of milk is being made the subject of a thorough investigation among the small milk dealers.

GRASP THIS: "YOUR OPPORTUNITY FOR A HOME."

An ideal home overlooking Piedmont's magnificent hills, combining proximity to town with the freedom of the country. Located at No. 106 Greenbank avenue, just east of Lake avenue, Piedmont Vista.

The house has eight rooms, hardwood floors, furnace, a basement, four large porches and big closets with windows. The hall, 8x10, opens into a big living room, 14x24, beautifully papered in soft browns, with a large tile fireplace, lending it an air of comfort. There are spacious book cases on either side of the arch, opening into the dining room and a cozy seat built next to the fireplace.

The dining room, 14x18, has the entire side facing the Piedmont hills, enclosed by plate glass extending to the floor and opening onto a sun porch. A spacious cabinet kitchen (with every modern equipment, including a wall ironing board), is beyond the dining room, and adjoining these is a breakfast room, enclosed on three sides with glass and opening onto a sun deck.

A raised landing leads from the living room upstairs to the hall and opens into three bedrooms and the bath. The front chambers, 11x13 each (and opening onto the front sleeping porch), are papered in pink and green, respectively, with colored shades on the electric fixtures to match. The rear chamber, 14x19, with a closet 7x9, is covered with sun paper with a pretty border and opens onto a separate spacious sleeping deck. The windows throughout are fitted with the best cement-gray shades.

The cement basement contains a servant's room, a fine big cemented laundry, and a furnace, which connects with every room in the house. A driveway is provided for.

The house can be bought on terms to suit the purchaser and is open for inspection. Mr. W. M. Greuner, the builder, will be there Sunday and will take pleasure in showing you through.

Mr. Greuner has other houses in this immediate vicinity, as well as in all parts of Oakland, etc., or in case you prefer having one built, is in a position to finance and build you a home anywhere.

In going to the house take the Oakland avenue car, get off at Lake avenue and go north about two blocks to Greenbank avenue and the house stands just to your right, facing south.

Appointments can be made with Mr. Greuner by calling Piedmont 3814 or Oakland 3585, or he can be seen at his office daily at 22 Bacon Block, Oakland. Auto will call for bonafide, prospective purchasers if desired.

Filling out and presenting this notice entitles purchaser to a $50 credit on any of Mr. Greuner's houses, large or small.

DON'T SACRIFICE SAFETY FOR SPEED---GET BOTH

Those two things are seldom combined. "Haste makes waste," as the old saying goes. Hurry a man and you worry him. And a hurried and worried man is a poor one to rely on for accurate, complete, trustworthy work.

Yet there are times when you need an abstract or title quick.

Come to us for it. You'll get it "on time" and in factibly accurate.

The reason is simple—we have a set of complete, systematized, accurate records that make quick and correct work easy for us. Without such records, speed and safety would be out of the question for anybody. For your own satisfaction, come in and learn the details.

URGES DAY LABOR IN ROAD BUILDING

Geary Street Railway Commission to Ask Supervisors to Begin Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Despite the criticism which the announced plan of the Board of Public Works to have the roadway of the Geary street municipal railway constructed by day labor has caused, the Commissioners have determined to try the experiment, and today filed with the Board of Supervisors two formal requests, one for authority to carry out the plan, the other for the setting aside of $270,000 to cover the cost. In the former communication the Board states that the City Engineer has recommended the scheme, but the copy of his communication on the subject, which is inclosed, sets forth that he does so at the request of Commissioner Laumeister, the chief advocate of the plan. The engineer's note says:

MADE UPON REQUEST.

"Gentlemen: At the request of Commissioner Laumeister, it is recommended that the Board of Supervisors instruct your board by ordinance to proceed with the track construction of the Geary street road by day labor."

At Monday's meeting of the Board of Supervisors both communications from the Public Works Commissioners will be referred to the Finance Committee for action, before which body next Friday the first discussion on the day labor proposition will be had. There will be no difficulty made over the setting aside of the $270,000 needed to cover the cost of the work, the money being available from Geary street bond issue funds now in the hands of the City Treasurer.

pected to sew garments and obtain subscriptions. Miss Grigsby was the first choice of Princess Mary to serve in that capacity for the coming year.

Miss Grigsby leaves London next week for a short stay in Paris with the Countess Dussau and will spend her time chiefly in buying the latest French gowns.

YERKES' WARD CUTS WIDE SWATH IN ROYAL CIRCLES

Mingles With Highest in Land and Dukes and Princes Offer Hands and Titles to Share Her Millions

LONDON, July 8.—Emilie Grigsby, ward of the late Charles T. Yerkes, whose success in achieving an entry to Buckingham Palace is such as few possess, is the never-ceasing wonder of London society. She intends to attend the Durbar at Delhi, India, in the autumn almost in royal state. She will travel by special boat and special train with a party including only members of the House of Lords and their families whose presence is officially necessary. At the imperial ceremonies the arrangements for Miss Grigsby, who as the only foreigner in the party, will be treated as the guest of honor, have been made by Lord and Lady Clifford of Chudleigh. Others in the party include Lord Fitzwilliam, one of England's richest peers, aboard whose yacht Miss Grigsby was a guest at the coronation naval review at Spithead, and Sir Edward Ward, permanent secretary of war. Arrangements already have been made at Delhi for the reception of the party, which as it includes the War Office chief, will have a special escort of troops.

MAY 'BECOME' PEERESS.

Prior to the departure, which will be about the first of November, Miss Grigsby returns to New York to wind up her business affairs, including the sale of the famous Park Avenue palace, built for her by her father. After the Durbar she will take a large house in Mayfair for a long term of years. Unless present gossip is wrong Miss Grigsby will become a peeress of England. Several noblemen are said to have tendered her their hands and titles in exchange for her hand and a share of the Yerkes millions, one being the offer of a dukedom. During the past week Miss Grigsby was a guest at a royal fete held in the Royal Botanical Gardens attended by her royal highness, Princess Louise, the Duchess of Argyll, Prince Alexander of Teck and the Duke of Argyll. Thursday a garden party was given in her honor by Lady St. David and was attended by several hundred of the most prominent persons of England.

She also gave a reception at the house now leased by her in Mayfair in honor of Countess Dussau, the French secretary of Queen Mary and governess of the royal children, through whom she made her acquaintance with royalty. Among those present were the Countess of Limerick, Lord and Lady Clifford, Lady Ward, the Countess and Earl Fitzwilliam, Launcelet Bathurst, proprietor of the Morning Post, and Robert Graves.

Miss Grigsby visits Buckingham Palace almost daily, frequently at the direct command of Princess Mary. Recently a motor car coming down Constitution Hill, which surrounds the palace garden, was stopped by the police for speeding, as the regulations are very strict in the vicinity of the royal residence. The occupant was Miss Grigsby, late for a palace appointment. A mounted military officer seeing the police interference immediately recognized the car and ordered the men away. He gave her escort to the palace gates.

RIDES WITH PRINCESS.

At the recent investiture of the Prince of Wales at Windsor Castle, Miss Grigsby was entertained at Frogmore House, a great park which was a favorite retreat of Queen Victoria. She was given a dinner party, presided over by the Prince of Wales, who also has taken a great fancy to her. Afterwards she was taken for a drive by Princess Mary. The entire route was lined with crowds attending the races at Ascot and the American district had the unique distinction of seeing every head uncovered in salute as they drove along.

Aside from society Miss Grigsby is taking an active interest in charity, especially in serving a guild which supplies garments to London's poor. Queen Mary is president and Princess Mary, vice-president. Each nominated a number of vice-presidents, each of whom is expected to sew garments and obtain subscriptions.

EAGLES WILL FLY TO STATE AERIE

Oakland Birds Will Also Take Prominent Part in Grand Session.

Oakland Aerle No. 7, Fraternal Order of Eagles, has elected the following delegates and alternates to the State Aerle of the Eagles, to be held at Stockton August 14 to 21: Past President S. H. Short, Past President Mortimer Smith, Trustee L. L. Foster, Joseph Herbert, Elias Olson, Frank Galmario and W. T. Canty; alternates—E. G. Buswell Jr., John W. Mott, George Volkmann, O. A. Smith, W. L. Belrose, Frank Brenner and A. D. Farnham.

Past State President Dr. H. B. Mohrman and State Treasurer Morgan A. Fitzpatrick will also attend the convention as ex-officio members, and it is proposed to send the entire degree team, in charge of Commander Denny O'Day. The initiatory ceremonies will be performed by Oakland Aerle, in competition with the other crack teams of the State, President Ed N. Hanson, presiding, ably assisted by Past President Charles W. Denney, Vice President M. A. Fitzpatrick and Chaplain Henry Kroeckel. As the degree team captured second place at the last State Aerle, it is its aim to bring back its first honors this year, and to this end they have been holding weekly drills until they have the work down to perfection.

Oakland Aerle's drum corps will also contest for the championship prizes offered by the Stockton committee, having tied with Alameda drum corps at the last session. Drum Major Joseph Duarte promises to spring several surprises in the contest, having strengthened the personnel as well as drilling the members in military tactics for the past three months.

The week following the State Aerle will see the greatest gathering of Eagles ever held in California, when the grand convention of the order will be held in San Francisco. Oakland and Fruitvale Aerles will have joint headquarters in the Helene Piano Company building on Market street, where receptions will be held each day of the session.

A grand ball is to be given at the St. Francis Hotel Tuesday evening, August 24, that day having been set aside as "Oakland day," when it is proposed to entertain the visiting delegates and their friends with genuine Oakland hospitality.

COURT ORDERS 'PHONE RESTORED

Service, Discontinued Because of Dispute Over Bill, Must Be Resumed

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Superior Judge Conley today issued a peremptory writ of mandate ordering the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company to restore telephone service in the office of Daniel O'Connell, an attorney. The court ruled that the company had no right to cut off the service of a patron on account of a dispute and pending the adjudication of the matter. Last month O'Connell refused to pay a number of tolls for which he held he was not responsible, and on the removal of the telephones from his office by the company instituted suit for $20,000 damages.

The contest, having strengthened the personnel as well as drilling the members in military tactics for the past three months.

PLAN BIG STREET CARNIVAL

Elmhurst and Vicinity Are to Attract Attention of World to That Favored Section

August 17th, 18th and 19th have been set aside by the progressive citizens of Elmhurst for a grand carnival, to which the people of the State will be cordially invited. The Elmhurst Improvement Club will co-operate with the Foresters and various other social and civic organizations. The committees have been appointed and preliminary work is under way. On every corner, in every store and from every home in beautiful Elmhurst the fame of the carnival is being heralded.

An elaborate program is to be arranged, including parades, night illuminations, queen contests, bazars, booths, athletic events, etc., will be conducted.

ST. FRANCIS PARISH
AWAITS BIG OUTING

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—The annual outing and parish reunion of St. Francis Church will be held at Shellmound Park on Saturday, August 5. The committee reports a good advance sale and hopes to attract a crowd that will fill the Emeryville amusement resort. Members of families who formerly lived in the parish have signified their intention of attending the picnic. It will also be the occasion of much rejoicing as the rebuilding of the historic church is now under way. The proceeds of the picnic will be used to further the work of rebuilding.

WOMEN SEEKING DIVORCE RENEGE

Court Sets Aside Decree for One, Three Others Dismissing Suits.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Four women exercised their right of changing their minds simultaneously today and bombarded the judges of the Superior Court with requests not to separate them from their husbands. A few days previous they had solemnly set forth in divorce complaints that they could not possibly live with their husbands any longer.

Judge Lattimer set aside the decree that had been granted to Julia V. Cain releasing her from double harness with William J. Cain. Mrs. Cain left the courtroom with the blessings of the judge and sobbing that she would "never, never do it again."

The other three matrons did not allow their suits to get as far as the decree stage. A motion for alimony in the case of Janet Farnstead against Theodore Farnstead was down for argument in Judge Conley's court, but the dove of peace flew in ahead of the men of law and there was no argument. Theodore, who is a traveling salesman of diamonds, and is said to be possessed of at least $20,000 worth of "the baubles," which Mrs. Farnstead asked for in her divorce, is said to have withdrawn his objection to his wife visiting her sick mother in the German hospital and everything is lovely again on their diamond hearthstone.

Emily P. Whitehead requested that her suit for divorce from Albert E. Whitehead be dismissed, likewise Meta Voight her suit from Franz Voight.

Suits were begun by Rosalind M. against William A. Dunn, failure to provide; Amelia A. M. against Gustaf Thiedeg, failure to provide; Sarah E. against Lawrence Johnson, cruelty; and Abbie Lee B. against Charles B. Glasse, desertion.

A decree was granted by Judge Conley to Jacob from Frieda Giebert on the ground of cruelty.

TAX COLLECTOR BUSH REQUESTS MORE HELP

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Mayor McCarthy has forwarded to the supervisors with his indorsement a request from Tax Collector Bush for authority to appoint an assistant cashier at a salary of $150 a month from among his civil service office employees, and also six temporary cashiers, also from among the regular office force, to serve in such temporary capacity at the salary named during November and April of each year, at which times there is most to be done in the way of receiving money. The tax collector mentions that he proposed to appoint J. K. Jones as the permanent assistant cashier.
